D. C. Citizens And Senators Fight House Income Tax

Advisory Committee In Secret Session; Glass Comes to Aid Of U. S. Employes

By James D. Secrest.

The Citizens Advisory Committee on Taxation yesterday voiced its opposition to the House version of a District income tax in an executive session, as growing criticism of the measure in the Senate pointed to drastic revisions.

Auditor Donovan, chairman of the committee, declined to divulge the nature of the discussion, and from another source it was learned that the members agreed to maintain strict secrecy until a report is made to Chairman King of the Senate District Committee tomorrow.

It is understood that the committee is giving serious consideration to a proposal for renewing the business privilege tax for another year, in lieu of the income tax.

The committee will meet again at 3 p. m. today at which time a variety of estimates as to the expected yield of the revenue bill as now written will be presented by Auditor Donovan.

Citizens' Stand Uncertain

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, indicated he will take a hand in the tax battle in defense of Government employes, and Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, said he will make another fight for a larger Federal contribution as a solution to the tax muddle.

Senator Glass, who is a member of the Senate District Committee, based his opposition to the income tax on the ground that Government employes might be taxed triply—by the District, the Federal Government, and the State in which they maintain a voting or legal residence.

Overton is understood to be considering proposing a flat increase in the lump-sum payment or a Federal contribution based on a percentage of the District's general revenue fund appropriation in lieu of his land ratio formula.

Such an amendment would have the effect of reaffirming the Senate action in voting a lump sum payment of $7,750,000 in the 1940 District supply bill now in conference.

Sales Tax Unlikely

Whether the citizens' committee's opposition to the House version of the income tax will crystallize into an alternative proposal or be limited to amendatory recommendations was uncertain last night.

Two civic representatives on the committee—John Locher, of the Central Labor Union, and Mrs. Ernest F. Parkinson, of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters—were absent, and final decisions were postponed until more accurate figures are available today.

While some members of the committee indicated a desire to restore

The Washington Post March Is 50 Today

Bands and Orchestras to Play Stirring Tune Written by Sousa; Dramatization Over WJSV at 10:30 P. M.

By Edward F. Ryan.

A rousing tune that went out of Washington to win world-wide popularity and help make its composer famous will ring again through the city today on the fiftieth anniversary of its first performance.

The music is "The Washington Post March," composed by John Philip Sousa, Washington boy who became the world's acknowledged master of marching tunes. Then leader of the Marine Band, Sousa wrote the march for the newspaper and its owners, and 50 years ago his band played it for the first time to an audience of 25,000 on the Smithsonian Institution grounds. The occasion marked the presentation of prizes to school children in an essay contest sponsored by The Post.

Down the years, the stirring music has rung out on battlefields, in concert halls, and on dance floors. And today it comes back in a hundred variations, from the original march tempo to modern swingtime.

It will be played today by the Marine Band in Potomac Park, by theater orchestras, dance bands in fashionable hotels, by high school orchestras in a memorial radio program over WJSV.

The Marine Band's all-Sousa program, featuring "The Washington Post March," will be conducted by the second leader, William F. Santleman, in the absence of Capt. Taylor Branson, leader, who heard the

FCC Requests More Control Of Telephones

Report to Congress Urges 6 Changes in Communication Law

By the United Press.

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday asked Congress to expand Government regulation over the $6,000,000,000 telephone industry as the outgrowth of an inquiry into its operations which President Walter S. Gifford of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. criticized as "ex parte and one-sided."

The investigation, which cost the Government $1,500,000, was made under the direction of FCC Commisioner Paul A. Walker. The report to Congress yesterday embraced most of Walker's recommendations, but eliminated or toned down some of the more sweeping ones. Among those stricken out was one which would have given the FCC veto power over the chief management units of the A. T. & T.

Industry's History Traced

In 900 mimeographed pages, the investigators traced the history, development, magnitude and operating practices of the industry, with particular emphasis on the Bell System, which is dominated by the A. T. & T. They held that the fact that $30,000,000 had been cut from the bills of telephone subscribers, which they said resulted from the inquiry, justified the Congressional reference that the American people are entitled to "know if they are being overcharged for this service even though they may be satisfied with the service."

The report recommended that the 1934 communications law be amended to:

Authorize the FCC to prescribe basic cost accounting methods to be adopted by manufacturing companies under contract with the Bell System. This would enable the FCC to determine if equipment prices are reasonable.

Make mandatory instead of optional applications for consolidations of telephone companies.

Require FCC approval of acquisitions of the stock of one company by another for purposes of gaining control.

Authorize the commission to order the exchange of patent rights upon payment of reasonable com-

House Gets $1,716,000,000 Relief Bill

Fight Brews Over Earmarking of WPA Funds for PWA

The 1940 relief bill, granting most of the President's requests but severely altering the structure of WPA, was presented to the House yesterday by the Appropriations Committee, with the prospect that it will be passed tomorrow substantially as reported.

Recommending $1,716,600,000 for all relief purposes, the committee proposed to give WPA $1,477,000,000, the full amount asked by President Roosevelt. However, $125,000,000 of WPA funds would be earmarked for PWA, which was unmentioned in the executive budget.

Under 1939 Appropriation

A bitter fight was brewing over the PWA allocation and also over a $42,000,000 slash in the $123,000,000 budget estimate for the National Youth Administration. Friends of the PWA will ask that its funds be raised to $500,000,000, while NYA proponents, with somewhat greater chance for success, were organizing yesterday to restore at least part of the committee reduction.

The new measure, besides undercutting the 1939 relief appropriation by about one-third, imposes drastic restrictions designed to "clean up" the works program, according to Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, floor manager for the bill. The proposed legislation would give approximately 2,700,000 persons employment in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Referring to the bill as "the first attempt Congress has made to write into law matters of WPA policy," Woodrum told the House that the measure "contains restrictions that will be a blow at the relief racketeer."

Three-Man Board Would Rule

The Federal theater project would be wiped out and the remaining unsponsored Federal projects—music, art, writers and historical documents—would be placed on the same basis as all other WPA projects in requiring local sponsorship. Localities that have been "trying to shortchange the Federal Government" would be curbed by insistence that they make

Hopkins Leases Farm Beside One He Toiled on as Hand

By the Associated Press.

Grinnell, Iowa, June 14.—Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins announced tonight he has leased an Iowa farm adjoining the one where in his boyhood days he was a farmhand.

He signed papers today, he said, leasing the "old Spaulding place," three miles north of here, for two years, with an option to buy. It consists of 388 acres of pasture, tillage and timber land and has a winding creek.

He came here last Saturday to attend commencement exercises at Grinnell College, of which he is an alumnus.

The present tenant, Albert J. Grossenbach, will continue to live on the farm as "general manager," Hopkins said.

Grossenbach is now farming 60 acres of corn, 32 acres of oats, and 10 acres of soy beans.

The rest of the farm is in pasture. Hopkins said the property is primarily a stock farm on which feeder cattle are made ready for market. He said the farmhouse is "strictly modern."

Grossenbach, he said, will operate the farm in co-operation with the Government farm program, and he is convinced the transaction will mean "good business, financially" for both himself and Grossenbach.

The Secretary's small daughter, Diana, will remain with him in Washington this summer, but he said he hoped he can bring her to Grinnell next fall to live.

He declared he had "no intention whatsoever" of giving up Government work, and would "continue with it as long as necessary."

Mayor 'Placates' Bidder Who Lost Big WPA Job

Richmond, Va., June 14 (AP).—Mayor J. Fulmer Bright not only declined a blanket resignation by Allen J. Saville from public offices today, but appointed the engineer to his staff as "minister of experience and envoy extraordinary of good will and humor."

In reply to a letter of resignation from Saville, covering any "free public" jobs which he might hold, the Mayor wrote:

"If necessary I will have introduced in the Congress of the United States an emergency bill permitting you to bid on all contracts with the guarantee of all awards. Never let it be said that you weakened in the performance of your civic duty."

Saville, whose firm of Allen J. Saville, Inc., lost a $437,000 PWA contract to build warehouses at the city's deep-water terminal because of his membership on the honorary, nonsalaried Richmond Port Commission, appeared at the mayor's office today and submitted his resignation.

Senators Plan New Inflation Safeguards

Banking Committee To Check on Credit Control and Bank Regulatory System

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday launched plans for a thorough check-up on the Government's credit control and bank regulatory machinery with a view to drawing up new safeguards against a possible disastrous inflation.

It approved unanimously a resolution offered by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, committee chairman, calling for a full committee investigation to develop a more orderly "monetary and banking policy" and devise machinery best calculated to carry it out.

The committee's action is in answer to appeals by the Federal Reserve Board and Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, who have warned that existing money and credit conditions may lead to uncontrollable inflation unless corrective measures are initiated.

$100,000 Investigation

The Reserve Board has not seen eye to eye with the Treasury and Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation on many bank regulatory and monetary questions. A kind of semi-feud or rivalry between the agencies is a recognized hindrance to formulation of a definite, well-ordered bank regulatory plan.

The resolution authorizes an outlay of $100,000 from the Senate contingent fund for the investigation.

The resolution originally authorized an expenditure of only $25,000, but the committee approved the larger amount after Eccles had told Wagner that $25,000 would hardly be enough to start the investigation which the committee ought to make.

Present plans contemplate an investigation which may last for more than a year and which will explore every phase of the entire problem of regulating banks and stimulating or contracting the supply of credit, depending on the state of business.

Devaluation Policy

Just now the emphasis is on stimulating the credit supply—getting more money out into investment channels and thereby re-employing idle men. But the Reserve Board recognizes that, with the amount of idle or "excess" reserves of Federal Reserve member banks threatening to reach the $5,000,000,000 mark, the situation some day might explode into an injurious expansion of credit.

In its annual report to Congress last January, the Reserve Board complained of the "confusion" existing in bank regulation, not only with respect to the three Federal agencies which have such powers, but State regulation also.

The committee may attempt to draw up plans for future policy with regard to the power to devalue the dollar, the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, and the purchase of silver by the Treasury.

British Map Retaliation On Japan

Economic Reprisals For Tientsin Blockade Being Considered, Government Hints

By the Associated Press.

London, June 14.—The British government indicated today it would take "appropriate measures" in retaliation for Japanese blockade of the British concession at Tientsin.

This disclosure was made in the House of Commons by R. A. Butler, foreign undersecretary, after the cabinet discussed the tense Far Eastern situation growing out of Japanese demands for surrender of four Chinese, accused of terrorism, who are detained in the British concession.

The United States and French governments, he added, were in close touch with Britain and were kept informed of all developments.

Trade Moves Expected

Informed sources said that any British reprisals probably would be economic. In the House of Commons, conservative Adrian Moreing suggested that Britain bar Japanese vessels from Hongkong, Singapore and Penang, but Butler's reply was:

"The question of what measures would be appropriate with regard to the Japanese blockade of the British concession at Tientsin is under examination and must depend in some degree on the nature of the action taken by the Japanese."

Reuters, British news agency, said "it is not expected that the government will submit tamely to the Japanese blockade," and expressed a belief that France would support Britain "in any measures deemed necessary."

New Evidence Uncovered

Reuters said the question was being considered by several British government departments, including the board of trade, "under which the Anglo-Japanese trade agreement operates."

"Japanese preferences in British colonies and imperial markets are other matters understood to be within the circle of review now taking place," Reuters stated.

The British spokesman stated new evidence implicated the four Chinese in the slaying of S. G. Cheng, official of the Japanese-sponsored North China Bank at Tientsin, April 9. The evidence was insufficient to warrant surrender of the men to Japanese, he added.

Case a "Pretext"

"It seems quite clear from semi-official Japanese statements," said the foreign office spokesman, "that the four men are being used as a pretext for aggressive measures with the object of giving Japanese economic and political control over the concession.

"This is only one of a long series of incidents aimed at forcing economic co-operation with the (Japanese) new order in China. So far the new order has only proved injurious to British rights and inter-

Police Here Seek Doctor to Warn Him of Rabies

If Dr. Hugh McCormick, Grand Rapids, Mich., veterinarian, sees this story, it may be the means of saving his life.

Dr. McCormick recently left his home on a motor trip to the World's Fair. Back in his animal hospital was a dog he had handled.

It has just been discovered the dog had rabies.

So last night, radios in police cars in Washington and the East blared a lookout for the doctor. He had to be reached and notified of his danger in time to begin pasteur treatments.

His automobile, with Michigan tags, was reported last night in the vicinity of 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, but he was not there when police arrived.

Angler Feared Drowned in Lake

Charles Davis, 18, of 25 Pierce street northwest, was believed drowned in Kingman Lake, near M street northeast, yesterday afternoon. He disappeared when he stepped into deep water to free his fishing tackle. Harbor Police were dragging the lake for his body.

Rozier Fellman, 7, was rescued from the Chesapeake & Ohio canal yesterday afternoon by John Burrows, a blacksmith, of 5236 Sherrier place northwest.

Policemen R. S. Evans and C. W. Disney brought the boy back to consciousness by artificial respiration, and the Fire Rescue Squad applied oxygen.

Nazis 'Cornered' Chamberlain, Goebbels Boasts

Berlin, June 14 (U.P.).—Propaganda Minister Goebbels tonight boasted to 15,000 students and workers at the Sportspalast that British Prime Minister Chamberlain joined the Munich four-power conference last September "because we had him cornered."

"He came because he had to come," Goebbels said in describing the conference which surrendered Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland to Reichsfuehrer Hitler as his price of peace.

Shortly before the propaganda minister spoke, the Reich student leader announced a decree compelling all male and female students to perform compulsory "harvest service" on German farms this summer because Poland has prohibited the emigration into the Reich of Polish agricultural workers.

Pensacola in Path Of 50-Mile Wind

Pensacola, Fla., June 14 (U.P.).—The season's first tropical disturbance, with gales as high as 50 miles an hour, tonight roared northward over the Gulf of Mexico toward the Florida coast between here and Panama City.

The Weather Bureau in New Orleans predicted the storm would strike in the Pensacola vicinity around midnight. Pensacola was prepared for the blow. Persons living on low exposed coastal areas had been warned to move to higher ground.

Liquor Party Hazy To 'Beauty Lobbyist'

'Enough to Make a Regiment Drunk,' Says Prosecutor

New York, June 14 (AP).—A dancer who went with a promoter to Washington on what the Government calls a "beauty lobby" supplied with "enough liquor to make a regiment drunk" described the junket in Federal Court today as only a dim memory. She said she didn't recall whom she met.

Then, red-haired, freckled Noel Carter, the first prosecution witness at the trial of William P. Buckner, jr., and others for mail fraud in the alleged manipulation of Philippine railway bonds, raced out of the courtroom.

Speeded through her brief testimony, she was able to catch a liner bound for Europe, where she will join the London company of the Broadway hit show "Hellzapoppin."

Thus, the beginning of the trial held to the same fast pace the Government attributes to Buckner, a satellite of the Hollywood colony, in the alleged blue skying of defaulted railway bonds.

Nothing was lacking except footlights and curtain for the melodrama which opened in the courtroom with an international all-star cast from stage, screen and radio, as they say—not to mention politics, society and finance.

Produced by the Government, the piece was written around Buckner, a dapper young financier, night clubber, and friend of Loretta Young.

In a prelude, Assistant U. S. Attorney William P. Maloney charged that Buckner and a codefendant, William J. Gillespie, a broker, took a "lobby of lovely ladies" to Washington and used large amounts of liquor in an effort to influence legislation in behalf of their scheme.

Miss Carter said that in 1937,

Ralph Pulitzer, Editor, Dies After Surgery

Son of New York World Founder Was Officer Of St. Louis Paper

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 14.—Ralph Pulitzer, 60, retired newspaper editor and son of the late Joseph Pulitzer who founded a newspaper dynasty, died tonight of complications following an abdominal operation.

Pulitzer, a vice president of the Pulitzer Publishing Company which operates the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and once ran the famous New York World papers, was operated upon in Harkness Pavilion of the Presbyterian Hospital on May 1.

Funeral services will be held at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church Friday.

He was born in St. Louis and educated there and abroad by private tutors. He spent four years traveling abroad during his youth. Later he attended St. Mark's School at Southboro, Mass., and Harvard, from which he was graduated.

Pulitzer married Frederica Vanderbilt Webb, of New York, in 1905. They were later divorced and he married Margaret K. Leech, authoress, 11 years ago.

Pulitzer began newspaper work on the New York World in 1900, and from 1906 to 1908 was vice president of the Press Publishing Co. He became president in 1911 and served for 19 years in that capacity.

In 1930 he turned over to his brother, Herbert, the presidency of the Press Publishing Co., publishers of the World and the Evening World, to go abroad because of ill health.

Soon after he left, the World papers suspended publication

C. I. O. Indorses $60 Pension for Aged, $90 for Couples

By the Associated Press.

Prospects for further negotiations to end labor's civil war seemed to vanish last night as John L. Lewis, C. I. O. leader, said it was "impossible" to deal with the present A. F. of L. negotiating committee.

"The A. F. of L. is still under the control of a small group, firmly entrenched and reactionary in their attitude toward public questions, who are tolerant of many evil conditions existing in the federation," Lewis declared.

William Green, president of the A. F. L., replied in a statement, "the leader of the C. I. O. has again blocked labor peace."

Green said of Lewis:

"The real reason that he does not want peace is because peace would automatically end his autocratic control over a minority group in organized labor.

"The public can now judge by the intemperate character of Mr. Lewis' statement the sort of man he is and why he is responsible for the failure to reach peace. In the last two days he has denounced Congress, business, the Administration, the Labor Department and everything else he could think of. His attack today on the A. F. L. is in the same vein."

Lewis spoke after a day-long session of the C. I. O. executive board, at which a report of the C. I. O. peace negotiating committee was received. The committee, at the behest of President Roosevelt, discussed peace with an A. F. of L.

British Rulers Hope to Repeat Tour With Two Princesses

By the Associated Press.

Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, June 14.—King George and Queen Elizabeth, who neared the end of their Canadian tour with a four-hour visit to this smallest Canadian Province today, expressed the hope they would be able to come to Canada again "at some future time," accompanied by their two daughters.

The daughters, 13-year-old Princess Elizabeth and 8-year-old Princess Margaret Rose, were left at home for this trip, which was their longest separation from their parents.

The hope of another visit to Canada was expressed in an address replying to Prime Minister Than A. Campbell, who said he was "cherishing the hope that Your Majesties may be graciously pleased again to visit Canada at no distant date, accompanied by Their Royal Highnesses, the Princess Elizabeth and the Princess Margaret Rose."

To this the King replied:

"We have much enjoyed our visit to your lovely province, whose capital has the proud distinction of being known as the 'cradle of confederation.' We share your hope that at some future time we may be able, accompanied by our daughters, to visit you again."

The addresses were exchanged in the beautiful old "Confederation room" of the provincial capital, where the King and Queen received the homage of the island's 90,000 people.

Tonight the royal couple sailed for Pictou, Nova Scotia, and tomorrow afternoon they sail for home from Halifax aboard the liner Empress of Britain, concluding the month-long tour of Canada and part of the United States.

Senators Put Neutrality on Must List This Session

Action Will Begin on June 21, Continue 'Until Disposed Of,' Committee Decides

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday made pending neutrality legislation a special order of business beginning June 21 and "continuing until the matter is disposed of."

Agreement on a date for committee consideration followed weeks of postponement, dream of filibuster by a mandatory Senate neutrality bloc minority and House committee action approving the Administration's neutrality recommendations.

House leaders freely predicted House passage of the measure within two weeks. But the fate of the bill in the Senate still hinged on an Administration choice between a Senate fight to the finish, regardless of adjournment plans, or postponement of a Senate vote until January, or a possible special session call.

Pittman Is Silent

Chairman Key Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee declined comment on Senate "prospects."

Asked if his committee would continue sessions "until a bill is drafted," Pittman said: "I prefer to put it this way: We will continue with consideration until the subject is disposed of."

Unlike the House committee, which approved, 12 to 8, Secretary of State Hull's recommendation for repeal of the wartime arms embargo and restricted American travel in combat zones to be set up by the President, the Senate committee is divided six ways on the issue with no one faction commanding a clear majority.

Pittman Bill Ahead

Commanding the largest plurality of votes is Pittman's own bill, which, in line with the Hull proposals and the House bill, repeals the arms embargo, authorizes combat areas of regulated travel, and permits trade with belligerents in all commodities, providing title is transferred to the foreign purchaser.

Against this, mandatory neutrality Senators are circulating a "declaration of principles," terming the Administration proposals "unneutral." They claim 26 Senate signatures, but many of the signers, it was said, would be unwilling to participate in any extended filibuster.

Proposals were revived in House and Senate meanwhile to embargo continued shipment of scrap iron and other materials to Japan for the war against China.

Schwellenbach Plan

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, said he would offer as an amendment to the neutrality bill his plan to embargo all shipments other than agricultural commodities, that are used directly or indirectly against any nation

Closing Bank's Depositors Won't Withdraw Funds

Des Moines, Iowa, June 14 (INS).—C. C. Cook, a banker at Booneville, Iowa, 15 miles west of Des Moines, made a piteous appeal to his depositors today. It was:

"Won't you please—PLEASE—come and get your money!"

It wasn't the first time he had issued such an appeal. He's been advertising for the depositors to "come and get it" since last May 29.

Not a depositor has shown up to claim any part of the $267,000 Banker Cook has idle on his hands. The bank's going out of business September 1.

The bank is quitting, Cook said, because "we don't know what to do with our money."

LOWDOWNS AND CLOSEUPS

The Navy's inquiry will bring out the fact that the watertight bulkhead door in the submarine Squalus could have been opened from the other side — if there had been anybody left alive to open it, or if the water had not been so high there as to drown the 33 men who were saved. Which will make Sailor Lloyd Maness (who closed it) more heroic than ever.

Pledge Peace For U. S. Food, Hull Asks Axis

Arms Race Will 'Plunge Civilization Into Pit of War'

By International News Service.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday reminded the hungry Axis nations the abundance of American foodstuffs is theirs for the asking if they renounce aggression and halt rearmament.

Hull, in a magazine article, painted for Germany and Italy a glowing picture of the harvest of peace and good will to be reaped by shelving self-sufficiency and barter trade for reciprocity.

He wrote:

"If, through a miracle of arbitration, we could break down the Chinese walls that separate demand from supply, the vast torrent of pent-up trade unleashed would rush across the world in a veritable tidal wave of prosperity, leaving in its wake friendship and peace."

Conditions for Collaboration

Then he laid down the condition for American collaboration:

"First, of course, the nations of the world must pledge themselves, if only for a limited period of years, to stop aggression, and must halt the mad pace of rearmament. Security for all must be established."

For unless the arms race be stopped, he declared, it will "plunge civilization into the pit of war."

The article, prepared during the European crisis which evoked President Roosevelt's April appeal for 10 to 25 year peace guarantees, appeared in the Country Home Magazine in an interval of fresh German-Polish tension over Danzig.

The magazine presented Hull as guest contributor in a series written by "the farmer of the month."

The editor, Hubert Kelley, said Hull was chosen because he had brought to the Cabinet "the simple, kindly, forthright philosophy of the soil and because he still plants and reaps on his home farm in Tennessee."

Hull, a holder of public office since early manhood, accepted the designation of farmer, saying he thought "we farm folks are inclined to reduce problems to their simplest and clearest forms."

Plans New Trade Pacts

By the Associated Press.

Trade agreements with six nations, involving over $800,000,000 in United States foreign trade, will be reopened shortly for the purpose of negotiating new and expanded pacts as Secretary Hull begins the sixth year of his trade program. The nations are France, Belgium, The Netherlands (including the Dutch East and West Indies), Switzerland, Sweden, and Finland. They all have trade agreements with the United States several years old.

They and the Administration want to follow the example recently set in the case of Canada. A new agreement was negotiated with that country expanding the reciprocal tariff reductions contained in an old accord. Cuba likewise has reopened her agreement and negotiations for a new and broader one are under way.

All of which is plain indication that Secretary Hull does not intend to remain on the defensive in the fight that opponents of his trade program are planning to make in the next session of Congress when the trade-agreements act comes up for renewal. Not content with having concluded 20 pacts covering about 60 per cent of all America's foreign commerce, he means to press on with his negotiating. Some officials have thought the better procedure, in the face of possible Congressional opposition next year, was to lie low, but Hull decided differently.

Fair Labor Unfair, Say Exhibitors

New York, June 14 (AP).—Tempers of foreign exhibitors at the New York World's Fair simmered and in some cases boiled tonight as they complained that labor union troubles might force some pavilions to close or curtail operations.

Many of the 58 foreign countries represented, concurring in the views of Dr. Neil Van Aken, president of the Foreign Commissioners Club, who protested that labor was unfair, said building and operating costs had gone as high as 100 per cent over original estimates in some cases and budgets were threatened.

Dr. Smith To Offer Last Defense Today

Says Tydings and Lee Interfered With Her Efforts at Efficiency

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith today will make her last stand in defense of her regime at the National Training School for Girls.

Yesterday she told the District Commissioners, who are hearing her defense, of alleged "interference" from high places in her efforts to acquire and maintain the staff she considered efficient.

In reply to a question by Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner, Dr. Smith named Senator Tydings and Brooke Lee, Maryland Democratic leader, as interfering with her management of the institution. Senator Bilbo, of Mississippi, she said, "has placed three workers in institutions here within the last two months, one of them in the National Training School for Girls."

"That shows interference," she added, in reply to a question by Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch.

Dr. Smith, during an hour and a half of testimony, read from diaries excerpts which, she said, indicated the good effect of her policy of "leniency and affection." She offered several instances which she said showed she took personal part in discipline.

"The spirit of leniency," she said, "is the foundation of all discipline. To use leniency and to use affection should not be considered ludicrous as it has been at this hearing."

Dr. Smith was dismissed, she said, because of the "prejudice" of Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, and a "minority" of the board members after an expose of conditions at the institution soon after she assumed charge. This expose followed a visit by Mrs. Roosevelt which received much public notice.

Recovery to Be Issue In 1940, Hoover Says

Minneapolis, June 14 (AP).—"The issue of the next campaign is going to be recovery," former President Hoover declared at a press conference here today.

Asserting that there are enough inventions awaiting development "to put everyone of the 11,000,000 unemployed to work in a few months," the former President added that revision of Roosevelt Administration policies to restore public confidence could create a labor shortage within 12 months and raise the national income to $100,000,000,000 a year.

Woodside Graduates

Closing exercises were held at the Woodside (Md.) School yesterday when a class of 69 was graduated. Miss Dorothy Nichols, principal, awarded the certificates. The program was a summary of the social studies project during the year dramatizing the life of Eli Whitney and life on a Southern plantation.

On Capitol Hill

Sen. Johnson Refuses to Participate In Report on Industrial Profit Sharing

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, said yesterday that he would decline to participate in a report of a Senate Finance subcommittee which investigated industrial profit sharing system last fall.

JOHNSON

The report, to be issued next week by Chairman Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, was expected to recommend profit sharing as a possible factor in bettering industrial labor relationships.

"I declined to participate in this report because I do not believe that profit sharing is the answer to a demand for the social security of workers nor that it will contribute on an equitable, voluntary or free basis to a wholesale relationship between employers and employes," Johnson said.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday approved President Roosevelt's nomination of Claude G. Bowers, former Ambassador to Spain, as Ambassador to Chile.

Diplomatic promotions of Douglas Jenkins from consul general in London to Minister to Bolivia, and of Edwin C. Wilson, from counselor in Paris to Minister to Uruguay, were likewise approved.

The House Interstate Commerce Committee adopted today a favorable report on a bill to set up wool labeling standards.

The bill would require that all fabricated articles containing wool bear labels showing exact fiber content, and make those responsible for the absence of such labels subject to a maximum penalty of one-year imprisonment and a $5,000 fine. Wool would be rated under three classifications; the percentages of each types in an article would be specified on the label it bore. The classifications are:

Wool — Meaning virgin fiber never before processed.

Reprocessed wool — That which is reclaimed from wool products never actually utilized by the ultimate consumer.

Refused wool—Or that which is reclaimed from wool products after they had been in actual use and then reduced to a fibrous state.

Representative Taylor (Republican), of Tennessee announced to the House when it convened yesterday the death at Chattanooga, Tenn., yesterday of Joe Brown, former Republican member of Congress. Taylor delivered a brief eulogy.

Insurance Man Tells of Gifts In Elections

Candidates Sympathetic With Firms Got Aid, Trust Inquiry Hears

An insurance company representative yesterday told the monopoly committee that he frequently had made campaign contributions to help elect to State legislatures candidates sympathetic to the desires of insurance companies regarding legislation.

Robert L. Cooney, Georgia representative for the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, testified to lobbying activities, which included "a dinner for those good enough to favor us" and entertainment for the wives and daughters of State legislators.

On one occasion, Cooney said, he paid $100 to a reporter covering a State Legislature to report to him developments on insurance legislation. The reason, he said, was that members of the Legislature disliked having insurance company agents on the floor. The reporter was there legitimately gathering news.

The committee devoted the day to hearing testimony on lobbying activities of the association in a number of States and to some extent before Congress.

Legislation which the association sought to defeat, it was disclosed, included bills authorizing savings banks to write insurance after the manner of the Massachusetts law.

Other witnesses were Vincent Whitsett, general manager of the association, and Robert L. Hogg, assistant general counsel.

Chest Announces Committeemen

Bruce R. Allen, superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Co., has been appointed vice chairman of the Community Chest volunteer public relations committee, Earl A. Nash, chairman, announced yesterday.

It also was announced that window displays would be directed jointly by Louis Banks, in charge of display for the Hecht Co., and Arthur Gray, in charge of display for Lansburgh & Bro. Henry J. Kaufman, head of the Kaufman Advertising Agency, will have charge of radio plans and Frank La Falce, advertising director of Warner Bros. theaters, will supervise bookings of the Chest trailer.

Dreese to Speak

Dr. Mitchell Dreese, professor of educational psychology at George Washington University, will speak at commencement exercises of the Washington Preparatory School tonight in Lafayette Hotel. Exercises will begin with a dinner at 7 o'clock.

Roosevelt Pen Gives Navy 800 Air Officers

Commissioned Rank Accorded to Cadets; Lake Ships Approved

With a few strokes of President Roosevelt's pen, the Navy yesterday increased its air strength by about 800 active officers.

Legislation giving commissioned status to naval aviation cadets was passed by Congress several days ago. Under it all cadets serving with the fleet will be issued commissions as reserve ensigns and take their place with other officer fliers.

Meanwhile, the Navy Department revealed that United States and Canadian governments had agreed that the construction of warships on the Great Lakes by either country would not be considered a violation of the Rush-Bagot Treaty of 1817, if the ships were for "tidewater service" only.

Protest in House

Announcement of the agreement came after a protest was raised in the House that an order placed Tuesday with a Bay City, Mich., shipyard for construction of a 170-foot submarine chaser violated the 122-year-old agreement not to fortify the Canadian border or build warships on the Great Lakes.

Representative O'Leary (Democrat), of New York, protested against the award. The Navy announcement, revealing what some observers considered to be an extension of the treaty, said:

"The Navy has been informed by competent authority with whom the Canadian authorities are in agreement, that it would be entirely consistent with the objectives of existing treaty agreements for either country to permit naval vessels unquestionably intended for tidewater service only to be constructed at shipyards located on the Great Lakes."

Designed for Shore Patrol

Submarine chasers, naval officers said, are designed for shore patrol against undersea raiders.

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson announced the award of a $139,419 contract for primary training planes to the St. Louis Aircraft Corporation. The single-engined, two-place craft purchased are identical with commercial planes, it was said.

The new naval officers, who will don an ensign's stripe July 1, attended the Navy flying school at Pensacola, Fla., after graduating from civilian colleges. They will be promoted to lieutenant, junior grade, after three years' service, and will revert to civil life as reserve officers at the end of six years with the fleet. Under the present policy, only Annapolis graduates are given regular appointments.

Ratification Urged For Panama Pact

Early Senate ratification of the 3-year-old Panama treaty was proposed yesterday by Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee following testimony by Secretary of State Hull that under the treaty this Government retains its right of independent action in emergencies in the isthmian republic.

Pittman said he believed correspondence between the two governments read by Hull removed all "material objections" to the treaty.

Although the treaty was signed March 2, 1936, ratification had been withheld pending Senate studies of features some Senators feared might restrict United States operations in the neighborhood of the Panama Canal. Although the treaty provided for independent action in emergencies, it made this a subject of consultation between the two governments.

A sub-committee headed by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, last session examined the treaty commission's minutes, and recommended ratification, but objection was raised that the minutes were not binding on either government. Correspondence followed between the two nations clarifying points at issue, and this was read to the committee yesterday by Hull and Undersecretary Welles.

18 Dope Suspects On Bail of $70,500

Bonds totaling $70,500 were set yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage at the arraignments of 18 colored men charged with violations of the Harrison and Jones-Miller narcotic acts.

Most of the defendants pleaded not guilty and all were ordered bound over for action of the grand jury.

The suspects were arrested by police and Federal agents Monday night and early Tuesday in almost 40 raids. A large quantity of narcotics was confiscated and agents said they believed the raids broke up the Washington outlet for a huge New York syndicate. More than $6,000 worth of narcotics was shipped into the District weekly, it was said.

Minister Konitza of Albania Lets Visit to Zoo Take Mind Off Troubles of Restoring State

By Gerald G. Gross

What does "an envoy without a country" do with himself?

Well, he might visit the zoo, for one thing, which is what Minister Faik Konitza of Albania did yesterday, accepting this reporter's invitation to let the bears, ostriches and their co-residents take his mind off the troubles of state, at least temporarily.

By one of those queer twists of fate, Konitza now finds himself the dean of active legation chiefs in Washington, although his country has lost its political identity. In point of service here, he is outranked only by Ministers Peter of Switzerland, who is ill in a hospital, and Bostrom of Sweden, who has gone home for the summer.

In the course of his first visit to the Zoo yesterday the conversation produced some nuggets of information on the routine of a countryless envoy.

One of the most cultured members of the Washington Diplomatic Corps and possessor, to boot, of a "high hat" awarded in recognition of a "marvelous sense of humor" and a "fine ability to phrase," Minister Konitza revealed that he receives occasional dispatches from the new Italian-controlled Albania but ignores them.

Only this week there came to his apartment legation in the Hotel Mayflower a long cable from his "superiors" but it will go unanswered. The message must have cost at least $100 to transmit.

Like Czecho-Slovakia's Vladimir Hurban, Konitza is from a country which has been swallowed up by force but whose separate existence is still recognized by our Department of State.

Perhaps the main reason he had never visited the Zoo until yesterday, although he has been in Washington since 1926, is his aversion to animals. A horse threw and seriously injured him when he was 15, which may account for the dislike. But at the Zoo His Excellency enthusiastically attempted to make the parrots talk, allowed Susie, the orangutan to finger the top of his cane, gazed with admiration upon Josef, lord of the lion house, and—in short—had a grand time.

The only concession he made to his distrust of animals was a detour around the reptile house.

"I don't care for snakes," Minister Konitza explained.

One of the bright spots of the outings was a talk with Sergt. Ladislaus A. Tabinski, Polish-born head of the Zoo police. Both knew central and eastern Europe before the days of the World War, and they nostalgically compared notes on Hartman's, the Grand Hotel and other famous cuisines when Vienna was Vienna.

Drafting of Bill to Control D. C. Dairies Postponed by Bates

Measure Would Set Up Committee To Fix Prices and Regulate Production And Distribution of Milk in This Area

The drafting of legislation to control the local dairy industry yesterday was postponed until tomorrow morning by Chairman Bates of the sub-committee which conducted the milk inquiry.

Bates is working on a measure to set up a committee with quasi-public utility powers to fix prices and regulate production and distribution of milk in this area.

Inside the committee a fight is anticipated on the question of restricting Washington milk sales to producers in the Washington area. Midwestern members have announced they would renew their effort to open the Washington market to producers from other districts.

Representative William D. Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, a member of the sub-committee, said yesterday he would resist every effort to recommend legislation which "might imperial the health of the people of the District."

It was learned, meanwhile, the sub-committee's action hinges on the vote of Representative Rudolph G. Tenerowicz (Democrat), of Michigan. So far he has not committed himself on the proposed measure.

Until the Bates sub-committee reports out a bill to regulate the Washington milk industry, the House District Committee will withhold action on the Schulte bill.

This measure would open the Washington market to producers from other districts, notably from the milk-producing Middle West.

Japan Tightens Blockade of TientsinBritish

New Demands Cover Concession Radio And Schools

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin (Thursday), June 15.—Japanese officers tightening their blockade on Tientsin's British and French concessions served notice today they would keep those areas isolated until Britain yielded to new and wider demands.

Apparently given a free hand by Tokyo in this tense Far Eastern showdown, the officers rejected British mediation attempts, imposed five new conditions for amicable settlement, and declared bluntly in a statement:

"We will not cease our present measures until the British reverse their policy and afford us complete co-operation."

The dispute, which started with refusal of British authorities to hand over to Japanese four Chinese accused of terrorism, appeared more firmly deadlocked than when the Japanese army started its blockade early yesterday.

Food Scarce

The 120,000 population of the British and French concessions (including 5,000 foreigners) was virtually cut off from food and all other supplies. Prices soared. Provisions were scarce.

British passing Japanese barriers to enter or leave the blockaded areas were forced to undergo thorough searches, in many cases submitting to removal of shoes and stockings.

Traffic of foreign commercial steamers to Tientsin was stopped completely. The vessels halted instead at the seacoast, down the Hai River from Tientsin, and discharged their cargoes at Tangku.

New Demands Made

New conditions stipulated by Japanese, in addition to surrender of the four Chinese suspected of the slaying of a Tientsin official, were that the British:

Cease protecting "anti-Japanese and communistic" elements.

Cease supporting Chinese currency.

Cease using "unregistered radio stations in Tientsin (apparently referring to diplomatic and naval radio).

Allow the use of Japanese-prepared school books in the British concession.

2,250 Occidental Troops

A total of 2,250 French and British troops were on duty in the concessions. Japan has a large army of occupation in this North China area, which came under Japanese domination in the first months of the Chinese-Japanese war that started July 7, 1937.

There were unconfirmed reports that Japanese were to parade today through the British concession to graves of Japanese killed in the Boxer rebellion of 1900. They were said to be planning to deposit wreaths on the graves, which are inside the concession.

The Japanese, whose announced goal in the China conflict is creation of a "new order" in eastern Asia, said in turning down the British mediation offer that further negotiation would be fruitless and that it was necessary to isolate the concessions as a "nest of intrigue and plots."

Newsreel Man Arrested

One British subject, Eric Mayell, a cameraman for Fox Movietone Newsreel, was arrested while taking photographs of the Japanese barricades. When he protested that the bridge on which he was standing was international, Japanese gendarmes placed him in a guardhouse in the Japanese-occupied area. The Associated Press correspondent was denied permission to see him.

Mayell was arrested, the Japanese said, because he was taking pictures of Japanese controlled areas—"which is prohibited."

The 200 United States Marines here were ordered by Lieut. Col. William G. Halthorne to wear their uniforms at all times since Japanese agreed to pass U. S. Marines in uniform without search or questioning. The American barracks are in the former German concession, adjacent to the British zone.

McAfee, Boyd Found Guilty Of Murders

Janitor, 63, Faces The Electric Chair After Second Trial

William (Major) McAfee, 63, colored janitor, was found guilty of first-degree murder last night after 6 hours and 20 minutes' deliberation by a jury in District Court, for the slaying, August 22, 1937, of Mrs. Henrietta Barbara Anderson.

It was the second time McAfee has faced the electric chair. After his first conviction he won nine stays of execution and finally a new trial from the Court of Appeals.

A few hours earlier, Nathan Boyd, 24, colored, was found guilty of second-degree murder for killing Daisy Bell Willis, 32, February 10. He faces 20 years to life in prison.

The McAfee jury, after studying the case several hours' late yesterday asked the court for additional instruction on the legal meaning of "reasonable doubt."

McAfee confessed killing Mrs. Anderson, a Veterans' Bureau clerk and mother of two children, by beating her with a furnace shaker in her apartment August 22, 1937. The appeals court reversed his conviction because the justices felt that the jurors were not strongly instructed to disregard McAfee's confession if he was forced to make it.

Justice Proctor charged the jury fully on this point yesterday after Assistant District Attorney Murray had demanded that the all-man jury return a first-degree verdict, which would make a death sentence mandatory.

He was represented by Attorney Robert I. Miller and Joseph A. McMenamin.

Chest Official LaudsCo-operation Of Hebrew Sisters

Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, of the executive committee of the Community Chest, praised the Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle yesterday for their spirit of co-operation with the professional charitable agencies, and stressed the importance of such co-operation to prevent overlapping of services. She spoke before 300 members and friends of the group at a luncheon meeting in the Maydower Hotel. Mrs. Joseph Cherner, new president, was in the chair.

Rabbi Harry Silverstone urged the women to live up to the Jewish conception of charity, "according to which our worldly possessions are not ours, but are given to us by God, so that we may serve humanity and promote its welfare and happiness."

Neutrality Action Put on Must List

whose "integrity the United States is obligated by treaty to respect."

While opposing any linking of the Sino-Japanese question with the neutrality bill, Chairman Pittman said he would seek Senate committee action "as separate legislation, after the neutrality issues is disposed of." Pittman has a similar bill authorizing the President to restrict trade with any nation in violation of the nine power pact, of which both Japane and China were signatories.

A companion bill to the Schwellenbach measure has been introduced in the House by Representative Wallgren (Democrat), of Washington, and is now before the Foreign Affairs Committee. Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, said last night he was drafting a new bill which would extend the proposed Japanese embargo even to farm commodities.

Adjournment Sought

Chairman Bloom, of the House committee, like Pittmna, said he thought the proposal should await disposiiton of the neutrality bill.

As leaders on both sides of the Capitol rushed plans to clear all major legislation by mid-July, the neutrality bill still remained the big barrier to adjournment. If it leaps both House and Senate committee hurdles, leaders must decide whether to accept the filibuster chalenge and keep Congress indefinitely in session until a final vote is obtained. They expressed confidence of a Senate majority if the issue could be pushed to a vote. The alternative course would be to rest on House passage until next January, with the President retaining power to call Congress back sooner of serious foreign hostilities develop.

ests, and can only prove unwelcome to all foreigners in China."

Butler charged that Japanese elements were active in stirring up labor disturbances in British-owned mills around Shanghai. R. M. Tinkler, a British businessman, was killed by a Japanese landing party in one such dispute.

Washington Watchful

Secretary Hull said today the State Department's representatives at Tientsin, where Japanese have blockaded British and French concessions, were taking every reasonable precaution for the protection of Americans and American interests.

He said they were observing developments closely, especially as they might relate in any way to the safety of American citizens. Hull added that there was nothing of immediate danger to American interests in the situation.

Consul General John K. Caldwell at Tientsin, Hull explained, would do anything he reasonably could, within his proper functions, as a contribution toward pacifying the situation.

At his press conference, the Secretary of State also said no special instructions had been issued with regard to American shipping entering Tientsin. He recalled the instructions issued many months ago to the effect that American Government-owned vessels could not carry arms to the Far Eastern danger zones and that other American privately owned vessels would do so at their own risk.

Hull said there had been no special exchanges of views with Tokyo over the international settlement at Kulangsu, where American naval forces were landed last month and have remained.

American representatives on the spot, he said, understand the situation and have standing instructions for exercising vigilance in making the necessary representations both there and in Tokyo. The State Department, he said, is collaborating in their efforts to settle the situation.

Rubber Consumption

New York, June 14 (AP).—Consumption of crude rubber by United States manufacturers in May was estimated today by the Rubber Manufacturers Association at 44,377 long tons, compared with 44,166 tons in April, and 30,753 tons in May, 1938. Imports in the month totaled 47,535 tons against 29,601 in April and 27,410 in May, a year ago.

Desper Wins Typographical Presidency

Printers Give Him 1,187 Votes to 904 For J. B. Manbeck

Clarence J. Desper, Times-Herald printer, was elected president of the Columbia Typographical Union yesterday, defeating Jesse Byron Manbeck, of The Washington Post, 1,187 to 904, in a run-off election.

Desper and Manbeck had been high men in the elections May 17, to choose a successor to John B. Dickman, sr., retired Government Printing Office employe. Neither then received a majority of the votes cast.

John R. Evans defeated Walter S. Sonntag, jr., both of the Government Printing Office, in the run-off for the vice presidency, and James I. Crockett, of the Evening Star, was elected secretary-treasurer, defeating George Lee Rooney, of the Times-Herald.

The new president has been an active member of the union 22 years, and several times member of the executive committee. He was a delegate to the 1938 convention of the International Typographical Union at Birmingham, and to the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor in 1935. He is at present a member of the auditing committee of the out-of-work relief committee, and has been both player and manager on the Union Printers baseball team.

The winning vice president is secretary-treasurer of the Allied Printing Trades Council and delegate to the Central Labor Union, both of which posts he also held in 1936, 1937 and 1938. He was delegate to the Virginia-Carolinas conference held in Washington last year.

Manbeck ,runner-up for the presidency, has been a member of the International Typographical Union 23 years, and associated with The Washington Post the last three years. He is a former sports writer for the Neww York Times and former editor of the Sport World, in New York City. He was employed for two years at the Government Printing Office, and has also worked in Philadelphia and Wilmington.

Coeds Pay Fine In Installments

Madison, Wis., June 14 (AP).—Miss Frances Finberg, 18, of Philadelphia, and Miss Audrey Sherman, 17, of New York, coeds at the University of Wisconsin, who said they turned in a false fire alarm because they were bored with study for final examination, today began paying fines of $54.95 each on the installment plan.

The Superior Court clerk accepted down payments of $29.95 each shortly before the deadline for payment if they wished to escape 30-day jail sentences.

Horthy Urges Pope Call Parley

Budpest, Hungary, June 14 (U.P.)—Regent Nicholas Horthy, opening Parliament today, urged Pope Pius to call a conference of the powers in an effort to solve Europe's problems.

"The time will certainly come," Horthy said, "when the powers will meet finally to find a solution which, if just, will be adhered to by all. Probably it would be best if the call came from the high post of the Pope."

Slovakia Fears Reich, Hungary Will Divide Her

Deepening Depression May Force Agreement To Dissolution

Bratislava, Slovakia, June 14 (AP). Disquieting reports of a German-Hungarian agreement for dividing what remains of this little, nominally independent country circulated today from the halls of government to the smallest peasant village.

Even the most optimistic Slovak nationalists were alarmed by rumors of Chancellor Hitler's prospective visit to Budapest—officially denied but still believed in many quarters to be arranged for early July; by a deepening economic depression since March, with factories closing down and the currency rapidly losing its value; and by German troop movements on the Slovak-Polish border.

(Official quarters in Berlin denied reports that Germany was negotiating with Hungary for dismemberment of Slovakia and that there were any "abnormal" movements of German troops. Foreign sources in Berlin, however, expressed the belief Germany and Hungary would take over the little state "by force of circumstances.")

Depression May Force Union

Some Slovaks believed the country's economic plight would force their government to agree to a union with Hungary, with this capital and the Vag Valley—which the Nazis have fortified since March—under German control.

Slovakia is in the eastern half of what was the Czecho-Slovak Republic, whose dismemberment began with the four-power Munich conference last September 29 after which Hungary got 4,566 square miles of Czecho-Slovakia, with a population of 1,027,450. On April 3 Hungarian troops occupied 386 square miles more of Slovakia, with 45,000 inhabitants. Slovakia declared its independence on March 14 and on March 16 Chancellor Hitler undertook to "protect" the Slovak Republic. Two days later in Vienna a German-Slovak treaty was signed by which Germany guaranteed to protect Slovak boundaries for 25 years.)

Friction between poorly equipped Slovak troops and the German garrison, which broke out in a recent fight at Zilina, was said to be bringing repercussions on the heads of the Slovak army.

Slovaks Desert to Poland

German military representatives were understood to be taking steps to halt the wholesale desertion of Slovak soldiers to Poland, since six Slovak aviators crossed the border in three planes last Sunday.

Bratislava circles charged unofficially that Hungary had closed her doors to Slovak goods in an effort to hasten economic collapse. Foreign trade has come to a standstill.

As reported here, pressure would be brought on Slovak leaders to "ask" Slovakia's return to its pre-World War Magyar (Hungarian) rule. By such a formula, it was said, Germany would "avoid" breaking the pledge of 25 years' independence.

German officials, acting as "protectors" in Slovakia, were said to have taken strict measures to prevent the spread of a secret Czech anti-Nazi movement to Slovakia.

German troop movements in Slovak territory, at Poland's back door, have caused concern for months. One Slovak military source, however, said that the Germans promised that any action on the frontier would be "defensive in character."

British Ask Reich to Recall Consul as a Spy

Special Cable to The Post.

London, June 14.—The British government has asked Germany to withdraw its 45-year-old consul general at Liverpool, Walther Reinhardt, on the ground that he helped a British bricklayer to sell plans of a new government-owned arms plant in Lancaster to the Nazi secret service.

The British request, tantamount to an expulsion order against Reinhardt, was made two days ago, Prime Minister Chamberlain informed the House of Commons today.

The British government's action against Reinhardt is the first affecting a Nazi official in this country, although several German journalists have been deported for suspicious activities not connected with their profession.

Builders Say D. C. May Be Nonunion City

Cite Experience of Contractors in Home Construction

A future Washington in which all construction will be done by nonunion labor was forecast by officers of the Master Builders Association yesterday if the 1,000 union carpenters now on strike persist in their demands for wage raises. However, the builders will meet with strikers' representatives this afternoon.

"Labor itself is writing its own ticket; they are going to force Washington to become a nonunion construction town," said Abner Roe yesterday afternoon at a press conference called by Edwin Davis, president of the Master Builders Association.

"Back in 1928 homes and apartment houses here were built 95 per cent by union labor," said J. R. Skinker, chairman of the association's labor committee. "After successive wage increases union contractors lost all that work, because nonunion contractors could bid so far under them," he added.

J. T. Oakley, secretary of the Carpenters District Council, denied that wage increases demanded by the carpenters were excessive. "We feel that our demands are not unreasonable," he commented. "We have been as fair and reasonable as any organization could be, but we are still the lowest paid craft in the building field."

Roe's suggestion that the strike vote had been "packed" by nonresident carpenters, who had been attracted to Washington by Government building and had no interest in the future of the building industry here, was also denied by Oakley.

"That's a mistake," he said. "They have to be here 12 months before they are eligible to vote."

Master Builders will meet strikers' representatives at 2 p. m. today at a conference with Howard T. Colvin, United States Conciliation Service.

Admitting that work had been resumed under a new contract on the Mellon Art Gallery, the Master Builders yesterday minimized reports that 27 other individual contracts had been signed.

Washington Post March RingsToday

first performance when he was 9 years old. The concert program, scheduled for 7:30 p. m. at the World War Memorial, will include "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and "Semper Fidelis," both marches, the suites "Three Quotations" and "Looking Upward;" the humorous number "Listen to My Tale of Woe," and "Sheridan's Ride."

The story of how Sousa wrote the "Washington Post March," with a dramatization of the famous composer's life, will be presented in the WJSV broadcast at 10:30 p. m. Roosevelt High School's prize-winning band will play the "Washington Post March," the McKinley band will play "El Capitan," Armstrong band, "The Thunderer," and Western High's band "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

The music will be played in dance rhythm, while the Lounge Riviera and Wardman Park will present both dance and march arrangements.

This variety would hardly startle Sousa. Within a year after he wrote the music, its catchy melody and sparkling rhythm had been seized by dance band leaders in America and Europe, and for years it was more famous as a two-step than as a march.

Many Variations

The Washington Post March will be heard in march time at the Capitol and Earle Theaters, in waltz time at the Shoreham Hotel; in swingtime at the Mayfair; in Hawaiian style at the Ambassador and the eptune Room. As varied as the arrangements will be the instruments used to play the music. These include the new novachord at the Hamilton Hotel, piano duet at the Madrillon, piano solos at the King Cole Room and the Hour Glass, accordion solo at the Ambassador.

"Golden Jubilee Swing of the Washington oPst March" is planned at Bamboo Gardens; an arrangement for Paul Jones dance at Glen Echo, a special scoring to "emphasize the dignity and character of the music" at the Maryland Club Gardens. At the Mayflower and Carlton Cocktail lounges, the Roger Smith and Lotus,

Dance Borrows Name

When Sousa toured Europe in 1900 he found that Germans were calling their two-step a "Washington Post," and new composers were picking up the title as the name of a distinctive dance step, bracketing it with the words waltz, or minuet. In his concert tour, Sousa was called upon to play the march wherever he went, often several times in a single program. The music was played as as a "typically American" number at the dedication of a monument to Richard Wagner, German opera composer.

The complete program of the concert at the District War Memorial follows:

March, "The Stars and Stripes Forever" ..... Sousa
Suite, "Three Quotations" ..... Sousa
(a) "The King of France."
(b) "I Too Was Born in Arcadia."
(c) "In Darkest Africa."
Humoresque, "Listen to My Tale of Woe" ..... Sousa
March, "The Washington Post" ..... Sousa
Historic episode, "Sheridan's Ride" ..... Sousa
Suite, "Looking Upward" ..... Sousa
(a) "By the Light of the Polar Star."
(b) "Beneath the Southern Cross."
(c) "Mars and Venus."
March, "Semper Fidelis" ..... Sousa
Official March of the U. S. Marine Corps
"The Marines' Hymn."
"The Star-Spangled Banner."

Rotary Club Hears Plans of Seven High School Grads

Shown at yesterday's luncheon of the Rotary Club in the Willard Hotel, at which seven Washington high school graduates told their plans for the future are (left to right) Mrs. William McIntosh Valon, Mr. Valon, of the Rotary International, British Isles; Gordon Calvert, of Roosevelt High School, and A. E. F. Horn, president of the District Rotary Club

Seven graduates of Washington high schools, picked by the faculties for their promise and excellence in scholarship, yesterday told Washington and visiting British Rotarians how they expect to "arrive" somewhere in life.

No two of the seven wanted to follow identical roads to success. Their fields would range from optical surgery to patent law. Darkhaired, serious Morton Johan, of McKinley High School, would be a doctor. John Richard Ihrie, jr., of Anacostia High, pointed out the usefulness of patent attorneys.

Allen Mitchell Burdett's company at Western High School recently won the high-school cadet corps competitive drill, and he wants to go to West Point.

Gordon Calvert, of Roosevelt High, first will go to George Washington University and from there, if possible, to the diplomatic service. Chester Finch, of Woodrow Wilson High, will go to Lehigh University and from there wants a degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Lewis McKinney, of Central High, expressed his interest in government. He will go to Yale for four years to study government and political science. Donald F. Whinnery, from Eastern High School, had several thoughts about the future, but corporation law was most appealing.

House Receives 1940 Relief Bill

contributions representing an actual financial burden.

The one-man administrator would give way to a three-man board, but the bill makes special provision for the retention of Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, without mentioning him by name.

An important innovation that would restrict the freedom of WPA in placing its projects is the establishment of a formula for determining the amount of work relief to be given each State.

A restriction that Col. Harrington predictde would "wreck" the WPA construction program was written into the bill, limiting building projects to those costing more than $25,000. Anticipating the opposition this provision already has aroused in the House, the committee explained that the $125,000,000 PWA allocation was intended to make up for the $25,000 limitation on WPA.

"Career" Reliefers Hit

In an effort to tighten up the relief rolls, the committee aimed at those who make a "career" of relief a provision forbidding any term of WPA employment longer than 18 months, with a required 60-day interval befor r-mployment with WPA. interval before re-employment with WPA.

All relief workers would have to be certified by either WPA or a local agency, while recipients of social security benefits would be ineligible for work relief.

The prevailing wage provisions of the present law would give way to a requirement that all WPA workers (except those with no dependents) be employed 130 hours a month, without raising the current national average labor cost per person.

Relief Roll Inspection

Regular investigation of work relief rolls at least every six months would be required. Preference would be given relief applicants on the basis of relative need. Aliens would be barred from the rolls, and all supervisory employes would have to take an oath to support the Constitution, similar to the oath now taken by other Government employes.

Stringent prohibitions against be imposed on administrative emmixture of politics and relief would ployes, even to the extent of taking part in political conventions.

Allocation of relief funds to other Federal agencies would be forbidden in the bill. Administrative expenditures for WPA would be reduced fro mthe present 5 per cent limitation to about 3.5, with specific restrictions on salaries and funds for communication, travel and printing.

The proposed formula for allocation of work projects in terms of jobs rather than of money would be based 45 per cent on the population ratio of each State to the whole and 45 per cent on the unemployment ratio, ther emaining 10 per cent to be left to the discretion of the WPA administration.

In addition to the prospective fights over PWA, NYA and the $25,000 construction limitation, the House faces another scrap over a proposal of Representative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia, to limit geoiraphical differentials in relief wages.

The way was paved yesterday for efforts to restore the NYA appropriation to the full budget estimate by a meeting of members of the Democratic steering committee with Aubrey Williams, NYA administrator. Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, last night wrote each member of the House an appeal for the NYA.

The Farm Security Administration, suffering a cut of $52,000,000 below the present year, nevertheless was granted the full budget estimate of $123,000,000 by the appropriations committee. Some effort may be made from the floor to raise this figure to a point nearer the 1939 total.

Attacking the Workers Alliance in New York as "one and the same" as the Communist Party, Woodrum raised a storm of applause when he shouted, "I want to see a relief program that will throw down the gauge of battle to these subversive elements trying to dominate it." Later, Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, replied that "not a single subversive activity" of the Workers Alliance has been uncovered in connection with the relief investigation.

Expressing their "minority views," the four Republican members of the Appropriations subcommittee that prepared the bill said the proposed measure "is a great improvement over previous bills" but fails to "decentralize relief administration by returning responsibility for it back to the States and local communities."

commitee but the talks were broken off months ago.

Lewis said the leadership of the A. F. of L. was working with industrial and financial interests in an attempt to emasculate the C. I. O. "and bring about crystallization of anti-New Deal sentiment in the country."

He characterized A. F. of L. policy as one of "rule or ruin" and said the federation had threatened to defeat a Congressional appropriation for United States participation in the international labor organization at Geneva unless it was given all the labor representatives.

The C. I. O., Lewis added, will push ahead with its organizing campaign, and will hold its second annual convention in San Francisco October 10.

Earlier the C. I. O., bidding for a powerful working alliance with aged persons striving for higher pensions, decided to stage a nationwide campaign for $60 a month for needy individuals past 60 years of age and $90 for married couples.

The campaign, as approved by the executive board, will be carried on "in co-operation with old age and progressive groups." The groups were not mentioned by name.

The board criticized the present Federal-State social security system as "utterly inadequate." The pensions it suggested would add, it was estimated, $600,000,000 a year to the cost of the existing system.

Payment of benefits would be based simply on need without relation to the amount of pay roll taxes contributed by employers and workers. The plan would be financed by pay roll taxes for revenue only and additional money from the Federal general fund obtained by taxes on gifts and estates.

Lewis and the C. I. O. have demanded that Congress vote enough WPA money to provide 3,000,000 relief jobs.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 2 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Carlton Hotel.

"I don't remember whom I met," she said, when asked if she had encountered any Federal officials, "but there was nothing official about the trip."

More brilliant performances than Miss Carter's were promised to the autograph-hound audience when Maloney read a list of persons figuring in the case to see if any of the jurors were acquainted with them. The list included:

President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines, oLretta Young, who is expected to testify for Buckner; Ronald Colman, Miriam Hopkins, Bing Crosby, Frank Morgan and Herbert Marshall, all Hollywood stars; Percy Pyne 2d, New York socialite; Byrnes MacDonald, of Mayor LaGuardia's staff, and Samuel Rosoff, subway builder.

Others were Doris (Pee Wee) Donaldson, Broadway showgirl; Everett Crosby, Bing's brother; George Breen, Wall street operator, and Noel Scaffa, private detective and stolen jewelry retriever. The latter two were named as co-conspirators with Buckner,, though not indicted.

Defendants besides Buckner and Gillespie are Felipe Buencamino, American-educated Filipino lawyer, legislative leader and son of a former secretary of state of the Philippines; C. Westley Turner, business associate of Buckner, and Capt. John Stuart-Hyde, British actor, aviator

Denies All Charges

An attorney for Buencamino, described as Maloney as "the most influential man except President Quezon in the Philippine Islands," made a categorical denial of all charges against his client to the jury of three wome nand 11 men (including two alternates).

Turner's lawyer said his client's only connection with the case was an atempt to raise funds for a protective committee for holders of the Philippine bonds.

Attorneys for the other defendants reserved their opening statements until the end of the governments case, expected to require eight days.

Until Buckner and Gillespie obtained control of the bondholders' committee, said Maloney, they "had been so broke that they had been borrowing from everybody on the street they could get."

"Enough to Make Regiment Drunk"

Then, said Maloney, on July 7, 1937, they sent a letter to bondholders asking for expense money, and "now they became playboys, frequented the night clubs, palled with showgirls. . . .

"During these two months, the Government will show you, Buckner and Gillespie were just on a drunken orgy. They were drunk on money the bondholders had contributed for expenses . . ."

Buckner told him, Maloney said, "We had to go to Washington, where we entertained Senators and Representatives through whom we hoped to bring about legislation favorable to our cause."

"They never explained," Maloney added, "why they had to take friends along to Washington, why they had to bring those lovely ladies there, or why they had to use enough liquor to make a regiment drunk."

Describing what he said were Buckner's futile efforts to advance his scheme on a round-the-world trip—including visits to England, Canada, Hollywood and the Philippines—Maloney said Buckner and Buencamino "concocted the most amazing, most brazen, most corrupt bribery scheme that has ever come to my attention."

Says He Demanded $50,000

The prosecutor said Buencamino demanded $50,000 to engineer a bill through the National Assembly (Philippine) to redeem the defaulted bonds—then selling at 13—for a price of 55.

Buencamino, said Maloney, took into his confidence Jose Bonto, chairman of the Assembly's railroad committee who was named as a co-conspirator but not indicted, to cloak his (Buencamino's) activities.

For months, Maloney said, Buckner and Turner went around exhibiting a "corrupt agreement" with Buencamino. Meanwhile, a story that the Philippine bonds would be redeemed led to $3,500,000 in trading, during which the price rose from 13 to 31—to the benefit of the conspirators, the Government contends.

Attempts to raise money in Hollywood to pay Uneucamino, Maloney declared, resulted only in "the procurement of $5,000 from a poor widow."

George O. Morton, counsel for Buencamino, majority whip of the National Assembly and vice chairman of the national committee of the Nationalist Party, argued that his client serves the bondholder's committee only as attorney, openly and honestly, and that he never had been paid. It was a moral, if not legal, obligation of the Philippine government to redeem the railroad bonds, Norton said.

"THAT'S MY DAD"

EVERY father gets a warm feeling around his heart when he hears his son say "That's my Dad".

The spirit behind his words is so revealing—the look in his eyes and the tone in his voice—when he says "That's my Dad". In his boyish way he is proudly saluting his hero—the pal he adores and admires.

It's a real responsibility to have a youngster say "That's my Dad". It calls for understanding and thoughtful control. It calls for moderation. When a boy discovers for the first time that his father—his own Dad—has been using liquor unwisely—immoderately—something fine between them may be lost.

The House of Seagram selects "Father's Day" as an appropriate time to repeat the viewpoint we have expressed so often in the past five years—"Fine whiskey is a luxury, one of the pleasures of life to be enjoyed only in moderation—never at the sacrifice of another person's happiness."

Council Bars Fireworks Sale In Herndon

Ordinance Forbids Discharge in Streets And Public Places

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2085-M.

The town council of Herndon has adopted an ordinance prohibiting the sale of fireworks within the corporate limits and the discharge of fireworks in the streets and public places.

Notice has been given the town will discontinue public scavenger service July 1, when the county sanitary system becomes effective in the corporation.

The budget has been adopted for expenses during the next fiscal year which will require a municipal tax rate of 60 cents, which is the same as the current year. The rate will include 25 cents for general expenses and 35 cents for roads on the assessed valuation of real estate and personal property. A merchants tax of 20 cents and a bank stock tax of 80 cents was also levied.

C. of C. Committees

Fairfax—Francis Pickens Miller, president of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, has appointed a nominating committee composed of Thomas P. Chapman, jr., chairman; State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax; T. J. Stockton, of Burke; Clarence B. Jett, of Lorton, and Mrs. E. Russell White, of Springfield. The committee is to submit its report at the July meeting.

Robert D. Graham, of Fairfax, and Talbert Walker, of Idylewood, were appointed a committee to audit the books of the treasurer of the trade body.

Dr. William B. Holton, of American University, addressing the chamber at its June meeting, Tuesday night, stressed the need for constant vigilance by citizens to prevent pollution of the streams. The program was arranged by Dr. Leslie C. McNemar, of Falls Church, chairman of the wild life conservation and management committee of the chamber. The motion picture released by the Department of Agriculture entitled "The River" was shown.

It was voted to award the championship trophy to the Lee-Jackson High School baseball team. William J. Cleveland, of Seminary, was appointed to make the presentation.

Farm Program Deadline

Fairfax.—Today is the deadline for farmers listed under the 1938 agricultural conservation program, who desire to participate in the 1939 program to execute their farm practice plan, the Fairfax County Agricultural Conservation Association has announced. Forms may be filled out in the office of County Agricultural Agent Joseph E. Beard in Fairfax.

Falls Church.—Mrs. A. J. Knox, president of the Falls Church Women's Club, has named Mrs. G. Ashley Money chairman of the program for the coming year. She will be assisted by Mrs. Willard B. Smith and Mrs. Guy Ervin. Mrs. Wirt Ferguson is chairman of the scrap book; Mrs. Felix Moore, membership; Mrs. O. B. Livingston, Mrs. Fred Jones and Mrs. Carroll V. Shreve in charge of ways and means. A special committee, consisting of Mrs. Hattie Keyser, chairman, Mrs. J. Harrod Hill, Mrs. Wirt Ferguson and Mrs. A. J. Knox was named to survey the possibility of establishing club headquarters. This committee will report at the opening of the fall season in September.

Y. M. C. A. to Give Recital Tomorrow

The Central Young Men's Christian Association will hold its eighth annual concert at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at 1736 G street northwest. Classical and semi-classical numbers will be played, under direction of J. Nelson Anderson. Mrs. Anderson will be accompanist.

Hugo Buonagurio and Susan Bowden Ross, violinists, will be guest artists. Glee Club members who will take part are:

Perry O. Corley, Louis C. Eiker and Paul B. Koile, first tenors; Henry M. Baker, Howard L. Cranford, Nathan Gordon and Herman L. Ingram, second tenors; Hyman B. Goldstein, Bernard N. Hutchinson, Robert L. Lux, Frederick C. Muller and Frederick A. Schaffer, baritones, and J. Hobart Barr, David E. Culnan, Ralph A. Grant, Andrew J. Henderson and Randolph E. Myers, bassos.

Attic Ventilators Reduce Summer Heat

There are several methods by which stifling summer heat may be kept out of the home, and one of the least expensive of these is a ventilating opening in the attic.

These ventilating louvres exhaust the heat which is reflected from the underside of the roof and keep a current of air moving above the insulation.

Farm boys and girls who have made unusual achievements in 4-H Club work are encamped today on the Tidal Basin for a three-day excursion into the subject of "Leadership"—and numerous side trips to national shrines.

Approximately 200 are attending, selected from a membership of 1,250,000 in 43 States and Puerto Rico. They are accompanied by 88 adult leaders and fill up 50 tents.

Dr. C. W. Warburton, chief of the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture, welcomed the delegates last night at a campfire at the edge of the "tent city."

Formal meetings will begin this morning in the auditorium of the Agriculture Department, with Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., speaking on "Washington Personalities."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will address the group tomorrow morning. Other speakers include Alfred Bilmanis, Latvian Minister to the United States; Dr. C. B. Smith, retired leader of extension work, and Mrs. Gladys Talbot Edwards, who is in charge of youth activities for the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union.

The report looked askance at profits made by the Bell System, which averaged 7 per cent per year from 1913 to 1933, and by the Western Electric Co., wholly-owned subsidiary of the A. T. & T., which averaged 21 per cent annually. It charged that the A. T. & T. Co. management controls prices of telephone apparatus and equipment purchased by its operating subsidiaries through its ownership of Western Electric.

"Improper Influence" Charged

The report concluded:

"This control may be repugnant to the spirit of the antitrust laws of the United States."

The Bell System's "active policy of cultivating public good will at considerable expense," was criticized by the investigators who said also that there is evidence that "improper influence" has been brought upon legislative and regulatory bodies charged with the duty of fixing rates for Bell System companies.

"This practice is against the public interest, is condemned and should not be countenanced by any regulatory body," the report said.

In a brief filed at the time the report was issued, Gifford said:

"We have not yet received the report, but we must again emphasize the fact that the investigation on which it is based was ex parte and one-sided. We were denied the right to present witnesses of our own, or to cross-examine the commission's witnesses and investigators.

"While we were permitted to submit comments and file a brief, we stated then and we repeat now that this was no substitute for cross-examination and evidence. The recommendations and findings in this final report should be appraised in the light of these facts."

$3,000,000 Arena Passed By Zone Board

7 Other Appeals Are Approved and 7 Denied by Commission

A change in zoning to permit the erection of a $3,000,000 sports arena at Twenty-fourth and K streets northwest, yesterday was approved by the District Zoning Commission.

The commission stipulated that the promoters acquire the necessary land in the square bounded by I, K, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth streets and New Hampshire avenue and submit the plans for the arena for a final decision.

The commission approved seven other appeals and denied seven.

Appeals approved were:

Extend the first commercial 40 "C" area district to include premises at 3012 Eighteenth street northeast.

Extend the first commercial 40 "C" area for property southeasterly a distance of 75 feet to a line 175 feet southeasterly of and equidistant from the south line of Alabama avenue. Subject to the dedication of the avenue in front of the property.

Change from residential 40 "A" restricted area to residential 40 "A" area the unimproved land located on the north side of Rigas road east of the right-of-way of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad northeast.

Extend the first commercial use district to include the southeast corner of Twenty-fifth street and Good Hope road southeast. Subject to dedication of Twenty-fifth street in front of property.

Extend the first commercial 60 "C" area district to include all of the rear residential portion on the east side of Connecticut avenue, between Veazey terrace and Van Ness street northwest.

Extend the first commercial 60 "C" area to include the west side of Twenty-seventh street, between Park place and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Subject to: no business entrance or exits; no advertising signs or displays on the Twenty-seventh street side of the building; and subject to the approval of plans by the Engineer Commissioner.

Extend the residential 40 "A" semi-restricted area district located south of Crittendon street and east of Tenth street northeast, to include all property zoned residential 40 "A" area within the area bounded on the north by Rigas road and Eastern avenue; on the east by the boundary line of "A" restricted area district located east of Fourteenth street; on the south by a line 100 feet north of and parallel to the north line of Taylor street; and on the west by the right-of-way of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad northeast.

Citizens Fight Income Tax Bill

the tax base to $10,000, as carried in the bill reported by the House District Committee, they immediately encountered the problem of what tax should be recommended to take up the loss in revenue.

The committee once before indorsed a retail sales tax after a bitter fight, but District officials believe there is little possibility of reviving this levy at this stage in view of the House District Committee's refusal to consider it.

The only apparent alternative, they pointed out, is a revival of the business privilege tax along the lines of the tax stricken from the bill by the House after it had lowered the income tax base to $2,000.

Because of the seriousness of the revenue outlook and the need for hasty decisions, the committee invited Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and David McCoach, jr., to yesterday's meeting.

A variety of opinions was aired, it is understood, but all agreed that the income tax in its present form would impose an unfair burden on the small-salaried head of a family. Should the tax base not be lowered, they agreed, amendments to allow deductions for married persons and dependents, somewhat along the line of the Federal income tax must be proposed to the Senate committee. Raising the income tax base to $2,500 for married persons also was discussed.

A clearer definition of the non-resident clause in the income tax provisions also will be written, it is understood, if the levy is retained with a low base.

Unofficial estimates have placed the number of Federal and District Government employes who will be subject to the income tax as now drafted at 45,500, but officials explained that many of these will be eliminated when expected deductions for dependents are allowed.

Auditor Donovan "guesses" the yield of the income tax would be around $3,000,000, but other experts figure it higher.

Pope Honored At Catholic U. Graduation

Apostolic Delegate Answers for Pius Before 3,000 Persons

Catholic University's golden jubilee celebration touched a high point yesterday when administration, faculty, students and alumni united to pay tribute to Pope Pius XII, under whom the university holds its charter, as part of the commencement exercises.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate, answered for the Pope before 3,000 persons gathered in the gaily decorated gymnasium, where three years before his holiness, then Cardinal Pacelli, had addressed the students.

Earlier, degrees had been presented to 578 seniors by the Most Rev. Thomas J. Walsh, Archbishop of Newark. The deans of the schools of the university, who presented their candidates, were recognized by the vice rector, the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, who also read the list of awards presented and gifts received by the university in the year.

"Champion of Rights"

The Right Rev. Joseph Corrigan, rector of the university, spoke for the administration, paying tribute to Pope Pius XII as "the fearless champion of the rights of freedom."

The university's program, said the rector, "should be a crusade throughout the Nation to restore the orderly procedure which will recognize the law of God in the daily affairs of our citizens."

The Right Rev. Peter Guilday, professor of American church history, on behalf of the faculty, renewed "to his holiness at the outset of his glorious pontificate the solemn pledge of our sacred academic honor in spreading the light of the truth in the hearts of all who came to learn."

An appeal to the Catholic University of America to take the lead in working for greater knowledge of the Catholic republics of South America was voiced by Richard F. Pattee, of the Department of State Division of Cultural Relations, who spoke for the alumni.

Student Also Speaks

He spoke of the Pope as "combining the higest qualities of the priesthood with the patience, forbearance and human understanding so necessary at the present time."

John P. Stanley, a graduate student at the university, spoke for the students. The present Pontiff, he said, has already shown himself to be "a father and teacher."

The Apostolic Delegate expressed, in the name of his holiness, "sentiments of profound and affectionate appreciation to the rector, the deans and professors of the various faculties, and to all who belong to the Catholic University, either as teachers or students."

Emphasizing the Catholic Church's interest in learning as "a clear and safe approach to God," he urged the graduates to remember that whatever their profession, it "must be subordinated to the fulfillment of the supernatural calling." The value of any profession is destroyed, he said, "if Christ is lacking in it."

Montgomery's Jail Riot Puts Five in Prison

Boys Who Woke Up Rockville Get 3 Years To 'Appreciate' Cell

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
8313 Cleff Ave., Silver Spring. Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4300.

Rockville.—Five 17-year-old boys, who wrecked their cell above the courthouse yesterday, kept the jail in an uproar and woke up the neighborhood, were sentenced yesterday afternoon to three years each in the Maryland House of Correction.

Judge Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery County Circuit Court, sentenced the youths on contempt citations brought at his direction by State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson. One boy is from Washington, the others from Capitol Heights.

"I'll send you to another place, and when you get out you'll appreciate the Montgomery County Jail," Judge Prescott said, when one of the boys explained they had rioted in the hope of "being sent to some other place."

Cell a Wreck

Sheriff H. Leslie Carlin testified he was summoned to the jail by neighbors and found the cell a wreck. Porcelain washbasins and toilets had been ripped from their mountings and shattered and fragments hurled into the corridor. A screen door inside the cell had been torn to splinters and every breakable object demolished.

Restoring order, Sheriff Carlin returned home, only to be summoned again at 5 a. m. When court convened at 9:30 a. m., the boys tore their steel cots from the walls and pounded on the floor above the courtroom until Judge Prescott sent a bailiff to caution them about the noise. They sent the bailiff back with the message, "making noise is just what we want to do."

The boys were arrested May 6 after an attempt to rob a chain grocery in Kensington. Confined temporarily in Bethesda Police Station next day, one escaped but later surrendered.

Congressmen to Speak

Bethesda. — Representative Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, and Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, will be guest speakers at the annual banquet of the Montgomery County Civic Federation tonight at the Manor Club. Gov. O'Conor will be guest of honor.

The banquet will be marked by presentation to Col. O. P. M. Brown, of Edgemoor, of the cup awarded annually to the delegate or committee of the federation performing the most outstanding service to Montgomery County. Orville M. Kile, newly elected president of the federation, will introduce the speakers and H. S. Yohe, retiring president, will give a review of the year's activities.

The program will include music by Miss Maxwell Galloway, soprano, of Takoma Park, accompanied by Mrs. Verna Metcalfe, and selections by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School orchestra, directed by Kenneth W. Frisbie, and the Montgomery Blair High School glee club, directed by Mrs. Metcalfe, with Dale Corner and Glenna Irene Potts as accompanists. The Rev. Herman Wilson, of Gaithersburg, will give the invocation.

Conservation Awards

Bethesda.—The Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Rockville chapters of the Izaak Walton League of America will award certificates of merit to junior conservation chapters of elementary schools at Alta Vista, Parkside and Potomac, it was announced last night.

The certificates are being granted in recognition of conservation work done by students of the three schools during the past year. At the same time the two chapters announced the gift of $50 to the county schools to be used for the purchase of motion pictures dealing with conservation activities.

Stop Signs Asked

Silver Spring.—Erection of stop signs at the Wheaton-Four Corners road and Colesville pike is asked of the Maryland State Roads Commission in a resolution adopted by the Four Corners Citizens Association at its final meeting before summer recess. The association voted to organize a softball team for the men of the community and to hold a picnic and outing sometime next month. President Joseph D. Buscher appointed Robert Brown as chairman of the committee for the picnic.

Lawn Fete Today

Takoma Park.—The annual lawn fete and cafeteria supper of Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch road and Dahlia street, will be held today from 5 p. m. until dark on the church grounds.

All the organizations of the church are participating in the affair. Following ar the chairmen of various booths: Cafeteria supper, Mrs. E. M. McCoy, Mrs. A. W. McKenzie, Mrs. A. Stamp and Mrs. C. H. P. Scott; ice cream, Carl Maier; cake, Mrs. Carl Maier; candy, Mrs. Horace Browning; children's grab bag, Miss Martha Moore; adult grab bag, Mrs. Frank Whitney.

Warfield Burial

Damascus—The funeral of William H. Warfield, 71, who died Sunday, took place yesterday from the Damascus M. E. Church. The services were conducted by the Rev. O. C. Barnes, pastor of the Christian Church at Hyattstown. Burial was in the cemetery at Damascus.

Gaithersburg Student Council

Gaithersburg—Officers for the next school year of the student council of Gaithersburg High School have been chosen as follows: Dorothy Phoebus, president; Wilson Tschiffely, vice president; Helen Walker, administrator of publications; Eleanor Watkins, secretary; Robert Walker, sergeant-at-arms; William King, administrator of public property; Grace Darby, administrator of safety and health; Kitty Lee Dumphy, administrator of recreation and sports; Ann Ramsdell, administrator of drama and music.

1,000 District Children March In Ceremony Honoring Flag

National Emblem Unfurled Throughout City; Senator Gillette Condemns Hyphenated Americans in Address at Capitol Exercises

The American Flag had its day yesterday.

The National emblem flew widely, in a light June breeze, from many poles along Washington streets; more than 1,000 school children marched in its honor along Constitution avenue and several thousand persons, in the Labor Department Auditorium, heard Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, declare his impatience "with the so-called hyphenated American of today."

Tributes to the flag were paid last night at the east front of the Capitol, under auspices of the Women's Relief Corps and other patriotic groups, conducted by the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic. Representative Robsion (Republican), of Kentucky, gave the address.

Sefton Darr, president, District of Columbia Bar Association, addressed Flag Day exercises of the Washington Lodge of the Elks, 919 H street northwest, last night. A history of the flag was recited by John D. Fitzgerald, past exalted ruler of the lodge. The Elks' Boys' Band played patriotic airs.

"We Are Americans"

Speaking under auspices of Department of Labor Post, No. 42, American Legion, Gillette said: "It is perfectly natural for Americans to hold an affection for the fatherland of their forebears, but their first and only true sympathy and support must be given to the Nation over which that flag flies. We are Americans."

Any person attacking the religion, freedom or racial derivation of an American citizen is only lending force and effect to the attempted spread of intolerance in the United States, Gillette said.

"Wherever the Stars and Stripes fly today, from one end of the world to the other, they mean that we Americans, with the utmost insistence, repudiate each and all of these totalitarian philosophies, and that is why, today more than ever before, in our history, we must know the meaning of true Americanism and what it symbolizes," he said.

Mrs. Gardner Leads Songs

A tribute was paid the flag at the same exercises by Lieut. Col. Fred B. Ryons, who served in the A. E. F., and patriotic songs were led by Mrs. Mildred Gardner, accompanied by the United States Navy Band. Gail T. Judd, the Legion Post commander, presided. The school children in the parade were recruited from Jefferson Junior High School, Ross, Force, Thomson and Grant Schools. Also participating were a uniformed band from Takoma Park Elementary School and Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School and the Sons of the American Legion Drum Corps.

Incidentally, the original Star-Spangled Banner that inspired Francis Scott Key, author of the national anthem, is housed in a 32x40 glass case in the Smithsonian Institution.

Col. Wallace Craigie, director of military science and tactics in the District public schools, spoke on "Appreciation of the American Flag" at a special assembly for students and parents at Wheatley School in the morning.

Alexandria City Council Meets for First Time in Remodeled Chamber With Its New Furniture of Colonial Design

The city council met Tuesday night for the first time in the new chamber on the first floor of City Hall, which was recently remodeled and new colonial-design furniture installed. The furniture consists of a long mahogany table, seating seven of the councilmen along one side, with one member at each end and the city manager seated facing the councilmen. A desk for the clerk is in the northwest corner of the room, while a narrow table is placed just outside the rail for the members of the press, in front of the first spectators' bench.

Russell Mitchell Post No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Bernard H. Cook, commander, presented an American flag and standard, which was accepted for council by Mayor Richard L. Ruffner.

Council considered a docket of 23 items, while several unscheduled matters were brought up.

An application to rezone lots on the west side of North Washington street, between Madison and Montgomery, to erect a building to be occupied by a chain grocery store, was denied, as were several other rezoning petitions.

The appropriation of $1,800 to cover settlement with Joseph Chauncey for the city's use of his property for 11 years, was deferred until June 27.

The request for an appropriation of $320 to purchase Venetian blinds for the office of the clerk of courts, the civil and police court room and two adjoining offices, was denied and $130, or as much thereof as needed, was allowed for shades for these windows.

Robert G. Whitton chairman of a committee, and Martin E. Greene, business manager of the chamber of commerce, presented a petition bearing 2,159 signatures urging that the council take some action on parks and playgrounds. The matter was referred to a committee for conference with the chamber of commerce committee.

Remember when . .

Dad was the only man in the world . . . the man who had an answer to all your questions. Remember when you timidly and reluctantly brought Dad your first report card—first he frowned, then shook his head, and said, "better luck next time, son."

Remember as you went through school how Dad took an interest in everything you did—how his practical advice made everything seem brighter and easier. Remember when you graduated from high school . . . there was Dad in the first row with a big proud smile all over his face—"that's my boy."

Remember, in college, when you wanted to join the fraternity . . . you could depend on Dad for that extra allowance. Then you graduated . . . Dad was older then . . . but he was just as proud as ever, even more so. Then that talk with Dad about your career . . . remember his helpful suggestions.

You're out in the world now, making your own living . . . but every time Dad sees you or hears from you he remembers when. He remembers . . . but do you remember? Henry Fonda's Career Not All "Short Takes"

Star of 'Young Lincoln' Came Up Hard Way; N. Y. Delegation Here for Theater Opening; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

ESPECIALLY THOSE OF US who were not privileged to attend the world premiere of the picture—which means the entire population of Washington, minus four—eagerly await the opening of "Young Mr. Lincoln," at Loew's Palace Theater this morning. This intense anticipation is occasioned no more by the fact that this Twentieth Century-Fox production is the first in the field of what purports to be a considerable cycle of "Young Lincoln" films than by the fact that Henry Fonda appears in the title role.

BELL

Mr. Fonda, along with James Stewart—who appears as costar with Claudette Colbert in "It's a Wonderful World," opening at the Capitol tomorrow—bears the distinction of being one of the cinema's outstanding repressionists. Neither of these two ever has been accused of "overplaying." Their effectiveness lies in a peculiar ability to "underplay" effectively. This would seem to be one of Mr. Fonda's major assets in his present assignment. Lincoln never "overplayed," either.

But what we are trying to get around to is that few realize the strains and stresses under which Mr. Fonda labored in the execution of his present part. We are told that in the role of the young Springfield lawyer, the star has 67 pages of solid dialogue out of the 120-page script prepared by Lamar Trotti for the picture. He appears in almost every scene of the film—an unheard of footage for any star. He never had a day off during the entire shooting schedule.

Some have expressed surprise that Henry Fonda should have been chosen for the role of the young rail-splitter—he is young and never before has undertaken so heroic a character. Evidence of the record, however, indicates that Mr. Fonda may not have been totally unequipped for this large enterprise.

Fonda was born in Grand Island, Nebr., on May 16, 1908, graduated from high school and attended the University of Minneapolis. Developing a strong leaning toward the theater, he joined the Community Playhouse, in Omaha, and then came East to the Cape Playhouse, at Dennis, Mass. He later appeared with other "little theater" groups and touring companies, eventually landing in New York as extra and understudy with the Theater Guild. He appeared in the revue, "New Faces," and maneuvered a stock engagement in "The Swan." Then came his first big chance on the legitimate stage.

Washington well remembers that it was Henry Fonda who appeared in the leading male role in Marc Connelly's "The Farmer Takes a Wife," which had its premiere here in the National Theater several seasons ago, with the late lamented Herb Williams in the principal comedy part.

So Henry Fonda's experience has been such as to equip him rather better than most screen stars for the heavy imposts that have been placed upon him in the role of Lincoln. One suspects that the intervening pictures in which he has appeared—and they have been many—seemed only an interlude between his early career in the theater and the day when he had to learn 67 pages of script—"sides," in theater parlance—for the most important acting job he ever has tackled.

While it is one of the axioms of the theater, as everywhere else, that "comparisons are odious," it is inevitable that Fonda's Lincoln will be set up against Raymond Massey's—at least mentally—in Robert Emmett Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," by every theatergoer who has seen both. This will be a purely personal equation. There seems to be scant resemblance between "Young Mr. Lincoln" and "Abe Lincoln of Illinois," beyond the fact that both deal with approximately the same period of his early life. However, that will be definitely determined at the Palace this morning.

Headed by Joseph Bernard, vice president of Warner Brothers in charge of theaters, a considerable delegation from the Warner Brothers New York home office tonight will attend the formal dedication of the Kennedy Theater, latest addition to the Warner residential chain in the Capital. The group will include members of the "Theater Openers' Guild," an "unincorporated organization" of theater officials, architects, engineers and others whose duties make it essential that they be present every time a new theater is tossed into the open.

A reminder might be offered that the Kennedy is situated on Kennedy street northwest near Fourth, and that the Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, president of the District Board of Commissioners, and D. W. Gabelein, president of the Chillum Heights Citizens Association, both will make brief addresses at the dedicatory exercises, beginning at 8:30. There will be only one performance at the Kennedy tonight, with "Juarez," starring Paul Muni, Bette Davis and Brian Aherne, the major screen attraction.

Comes a card from Vince Dougherty, of the local Paramount forces, from Los Angeles, bearing this legend: "Just finished a marvelous Paramount convention. We conclude tonight with a banquet at the Cocoanut Grove, where Dorothy Lamour will be fighting to dance with me—or vice versa. Then on to the San Francisco Fair." Knowing Vince and his hoofing as I do, we shall await further word from Miss Lamour about that dancing business. Vince probably fought his way to her, at that.

Miss Margaret J. Buckley will head the Montgomery Players for the next year, succeeding Mrs. Doris Dewey Day. Miss Buckley was elected president of the dramatic group just over the District line at its final meeting of the year. Other officers, who will make up the board of directors, are Adolph Bishop, vice president; Mrs. Edwin Cameron, secretary; Mrs. Jane Plummer Rice, treasurer; Ed Wilkinson, business manager; Caskie Stinnett, publicity director; Martha Pogge, properties; Don Tolson, technical director, and Mrs. Mabel Lukins, hostess.

Personal aside to J. Raymond Bell—no relation—of the Loew organization: They fit!

When "The Sun Never Sets" opens on the screen at RKO-Keith's Friday, the principal supplementary attraction will be the new issue of "The March of Time," devoted to "War, Peace and Propaganda." It may or may not bear some relation to the recent royal visit to these shores. It will be an interesting joint to observe.

All-Ashore-That's-Going-Ashore Note

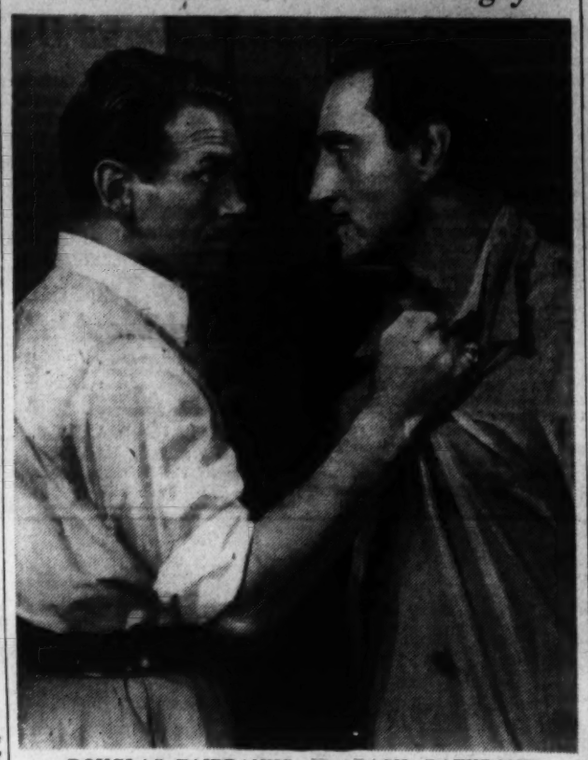
Horror Roles Aid Karloff's Health

A freaky scientific story came to light on the set of "Secret Enemies," when Boris Karloff received an honorary membership in the French Society of Mental Sciences.

Two years ago at the request of a group of psychiatrists, Karloff undertook to answer an eleaborate questionnaire. His various "horror" roles and also certain straight, sympathetic parts were subjected to his own analysis as to how they affected his off-screen life.

Among the scientific conclusions the psychical experts gleaned from Karloff's 58-page record was one to the effect that playing "villain" roles is a healthful pastime that improves the mind and moral fiber!

The Brothers Get a Little Angry



DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., BASIL RATHBONE in a tense scene from "The Sun Never Sets," the new Universal production coming to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater on Friday. The story is of two brothers in the British service—one a recalcitrant, the other an ardent patriot.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 14.—Benjamin Gayelord Hauser, who made spinach fashionable on three continents, has captivated our Greta Garbo. Maybe she read his latest book, "Eat and Grow Beautiful," which, goodness knows, she doesn't need. Now I hear she's given up symphonies and Stokowski for vegetable juices and Hauser. He gave a luncheon for Elsie De Wolf and the Duchess of Windsor in Paris. And gave them vegetable, fruit juices and garlic. Garbo's become a rabid sports lover, likes baseball especially. Joins in when they sing "Let's Go Out to the Ball Game." Wish she'd let me teach her "Casey at the Bat."

HOPPER

She's building her first home here at Rolling Hills' near Palos Verdes, with a Santa Barbara architect.

They tell me Freddie Bartholomew's stock has gone sky high since he joined the Boy Scouts. He never needed a boost with me. I think he's swell.

Greg Bautzer means it. Lana Turner gets fresh flowers from him daily. If she'd forget about night clubbing and get down to hard work, that girl could be a big star within a year. Talk about oomph—she oozes it.

Norma Shearer will do her next picture in England with Robert Donat. It may be "Ruined City," but it couldn't start until winter, because Donat's playing Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet" at the old Vic for $100 a week. Just to keep his hand in. We can say what we like about the English, but when they say they love to act, they mean it.

It was Monte Bell who really discovered Chips. How about giving him a little boost?

Bing Crosby told me on "The Starmaker" set: "This kid stuff is getting a bit thick. My son, Gary, is down with measles. And 30 mothers on the set hate me for fear their kids will get it, too."

Our top stars are nearly as scared of Technicolor as they were of sound. Claudette Colbert has passed her color test for "Drums Along the Mohawk" and she's lovely.

When are we going to pass that law protecting children from parents who have discarded them? Understand Linda Ware's father, who put her in an orphanage, is trying to get her back, now that she's making a sensational hit in Charlie Roger's "Star Maker." But he came too late. She'd had her fourteenth birthday, after which time minors have something to say about their own lives.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 14.—The most unusual casting is going on right now, with Edward Small waving a contract before Brian Aherne's nose, with the request that he play Christopher Columbus. You probably have a preconceived idea of Columbus as a swarthy Italian, while Aherne, a blond Englishman, is as far removed from the usual idea of Columbus as Greta Garbo is from Lupe Velez. Yet Small is so confident, after seeing "Juarez," that he is right, that he has started negotiations.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Of course, Brian, as Maximilian, all but stole "Juarez" right from under the nose of Bette Davis and Paul Muni, and he is a good actor and would be romantic as the Genoese who persuaded Queen Isabella to sell her jewels so that he might sail for an unknown world. Certainly, no sea story would have more appeal to Americans than the exploits of the brave explorer who conquered the unknown and terrifying Atlantic.

Los Angeles is interested in Robert Stack, one of the two unknowns who have been chosen to play opposite Deanna Durbin in "First Love." He is the son of Mrs. J. Langford Stack, one of our social leaders. An ambitious youngster, he attended the University of Southern California and studied dramatics at Henry Duffy's School. The other boy is Lewis Howard, a New Yorker, who attended Columbia. Joseph Pasternak and Casting Director Dan Kelly discovered him when he appeared in "The Fabulous Invalid." This is a break for the two 20-year-old youngsters, Bob, who is light and very good looking, and Howard, who is dark and handsome. This is Deanna's first romantic role and Universal isn't saying which one of the lads wins her.

It needs only one good picture to put a director in right with a company, and "Man About Town" did just that for Mark Sandrich. They've signed him as director-producer for the next Jack Benny opus. "Buck Benny Rides Again," is the title, and you can bet anything left over from Hollywood Park that Rochester will be given an even better role than he rated in "Man About Town." The Negro comic is the hit of our town following the preview, and Jack can take a bow on that, too, because there's no more generous star on the air or the screen, with his supporting players.

It's not all "oomph" girls, divorces, elopments and trial separations in Hollywood. The stork, flapping his wings around so many movie homes, reminds us that many young married couples of the movies are planning families, just like the young couple next door to you. That cute couple, Betty Jaynes and Douglas McPhail, just youngsters themselves, aren't letting their careers interfere with their home life and are as proud as punch that there will be another little warbler in their home soon. The Henry Wilcoxons (she was Joan Woodbury) are also expectant parents, busy getting a nursery ready, and so are the Wayne Morrises, who hope it will be a boy.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Patsy Kelly can no longer put off that serious operation which will be performed in New York, where her family lives; Robert Preston's heart throb is Kay Felton, of the ether waves; Gary Cooper and his director, Henry Hathaway, met up with some poison ivy while they were on location; Ena Gregory, who filed for divorce from Dr. Frank Nolan a few days ago, at a spot with Jack Strauss, Claire Dodd's ex; why don't Ad Randall and Louise Stanley stop their nonsense? It's an every night engagement now at a favorite rendezvous; Jacqueline Dyer, reported as David Niven's best girl friend, leaves for England tomorrow. 'Tis rumored that their romance is over; Rose Davies is celebrating her birthday tomorrow with a small party at her Beverly Hills home; that's a beautiful coat of tan Claudette Colbert brought back from Del Monte.

John Carradine suffering agonies with a misplaced rib; Francis Lederer sporting a new mustache, knocked them for a loop at Sardi's when he walked in looking so dapper; Andrea Leeds and Bob Howard, of the Seabiscuit family, looking over the town. Andrea hasn't gone out with Pat Di Cicco since the elopement rumor of a few weeks ago; Patricia Morison's telephone is kept busy by Matty Fox, Universal executive; the younger set is all agog over the trailer party Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew are giving Sunday at Malibu Beach.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

What They Say...

HENRY A. WALLACE, Secretary of Agriculture
"I was greatly pleased to see presented in such artistic form one of the greatest historic events of the New World. No true American can see this picture without having his faith in democracy renewed."

JOSEPHUS N. DANIELS, U. S. Ambassador to Mexico
"I am very familiar with all the scenes and all the history dealt with in the picture. It deals with one of the most tragic and most poignant events in the history of the Americas. And from beginning to end the production is faithful to that story. I have never seen a picture more perfect."

"YOUNG MR. LINCOLN." The widely-heralded film dealing with the young lawyer who told amusing stories, wrestled with the boys and courted pretty girls, presents Henry Fonda as the Springfield attorney. The celebrated "Moonlight Murder" case became his first real test in that pioneer town and the youth faced it with the fortitude that foreshadowed the man he was to be. Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver and Arleen Whelan are featured in the cast, which was directed by John Ford. Opens this morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE SUN NEVER SETS." Based on a family conflict in the British Civil Service, this film co-stars Douglas Fairbanks, jr. and Basil Rathbone, as brothers in the service. They are at odds, until a national emergency pits them together against a common enemy of the empire. Virginia Fields is Fairbanks' fiancee, Barbara O'Neil is Rathbone's wife and Lionel Atwill, the foe of empirical policy. C. Aubrey Smith, Melville Cooper and Mary Forbes have other roles. Rowland V. Lee directed. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"NAUGHTY BUT NICE." In this new comedy with music, Dick Powell is a stodgy professor, who thinks that swing music is barbaric, until he hears Ann Sheridan swing it. The "Oomph Girl," Miss Sheridan, has her biggest role to date and strives with Gale Page, as a song writer, for Dick's attentions. Helen Broderick, Ronald Reagan, Allen Jenkins, ZaSu Pitts and Maxie Rosenbloom are others in this satire on Tin Pan Alley, in which the National Jiterbug Champions offer a specialty. "Words and Music," the stage revue, features Owen McGivney in his rapid-change sketch, "Bill Sykes;" Houston and Harden, "Singing With a Sense of Humor;" Billy Rayes, humorous juggler, and the 16 Earle Roxyettes. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD." Claudette Colbert and James Stewart appear together for the first time, with Stewart, as an amateur detective, and Miss Colbert, as a scatter-brained poetess, joining forces to solve a murder mystery in which he is innocently involved. The film's climax and love come at once when Stewart is forced to plant a hefty sock on the Colbert jaw. Blending familiar and fresh talents, the Capitol stage revue is called "Old and New Faces." Bert Walton tells his humorous anecdotes and introduces the acts of the past and present. Helen Reynold and her Champion Skaters, Marc Ballero's lifelike impressions, Frank and Jean Hubert's knockout comedy and Doris Dupont's dainty dancing are the features of the offering. Opens Friday morning.

Metropolitan

"ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS." After a successful week at the Earle, this Cary Grant-Jean Arthur vehicle returns. Grant is an air line operator in a small South American sea port, determined to win a mail contract which depends on six months' regular flights and Miss Arthur is an American showgirl, who visits the port between ships. Richard Barthelmess, Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell, Sig Ruman, Victor Kilian and Allyn Joslyn are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"CALLING DR. KILDARE." The sequel to "Young Dr. Kildare," this continues the advantures of a young country doctor, who has become a protege of crabbed, but expert Dr. Gillespie. Lew Ayres has the title role and Lionel Barrymore is the well-meaning oldster. A murder mystery turns up, which involves the hot-headed Kildare, but by his own honesty and with the help of Gillespie, he unveils the true murderer. Lynne Carver, Laraine Day, Nat Pendleton, Samuel S. Hinds and Emma Dunn support the stars. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"MORE POWER TO YOU" is the short that follows oil in its progress from earth to the crank case, on the Trans-Lux screen. A trip through Chicago's Adler Planetarium; "Duel Personalities," an "Our Gang" comedy, and Walt Disney's "Goofy and Wilbur" are three of the other short subjects at the newsreel house. Opens tomorrow.

Mount Vernon

"HELL'S ANGELS," the first of the great air films, which brought the late Jean Harlow before the public, will be on the open-air screen on the Richmond Highway tonight through Saturday. Next Sunday through Wednesday, Jean Parker stars in "Romance of the Limberlost."

Glen Echo

S. S. Potomac

MOONLIGHT CRUISES are announced for the S. S. Potomac on Saturday evening at 8:45 and 12:30 Sunday morning. The North Carolina Democrats have charge of the cruises this week-end and Willie Smith's band will play for dancing. There are moonlight cruises each evening at 8:45 from the steamer's wharf at Seventh and Water streets.

Wilson Line

THE CITY OF WASHINGTON makes moonlight cruises each evening, except Monday, at 8:30, with McWilliams' orchestra aboard for dancing. At 10 a. m., 2 and 5:30 p. m., the steamer leaves its Seventh street wharf for Marshall Hall, stopping off at Mount Vernon on both of the earlier sailings.

Cross Roads

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE" enters the last few days of its mirth-provoking run in the barn at Baileys Cross Roads, Va. Don Sisler, Peggy Johnston and Edmund Evans have the leading parts of a local company under Howard Wentworth's direction. Next Monday, the company begins a two-week run in "Candlelight."

Roadside

"THE PIONEER'S DAUGHTER," the first play in the sixth season at the Rockville pike barn, and acclaimed as one of the finest of all the thrillers, plays every evening except Sunday. Ralph Fowler's cast includes Theodore Tiller 2d, Paul Messink, Eugene Johnson, Milton Freedman, Betty Brunstetter and Natalie H. Core. Hissing the villain, cheering the hero and singing between the acts are Roadside features.

Sylvan

THE OPEN-AIR THEATER on the Monument Grounds opens its series of 11 weekly festivals next Tuesday evening, with the Blackfriars Guild of Catholic University in a production of "Cyrano de Bergerac," featuring Dennis Connell in the title role.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 14.

THE MAN WHO wrote a letter to Jack Dempsey threatening to bomb Jack's Broadway restaurant has been apprehended by G-men. He won't be prosecuted—because he's daffy . . . Grover Whalen sent an emissary to Dempsey yesterday proposing that Jack meet Gene Tunney in an exhibition bout at the World's Fair. Although no admission would be charged, the bout would be financed by the sale of the television rights . . . President Roosevelt's gift to Their Majesties was a specially bound edition of his five-volume "The Public Letters and Addresses of President Roosevelt."

LYN ROOT, the playwright, became incensed at the sale of Fascist publications on the steps of the subway station at Eighty-sixth street and Lexington avenue . . . She, therefore, wrote a letter of complaint to Thomas Murray, who was appointed receiver for the I. R. T. by the convicted Judge Manton . . . The letter to Murray, in care of the I. R. T., was returned with the notation: "Not known here."

GROUCHO AND CHICO MARX get $2,500 each per week for their radio programs. Although Harpo doesn't broadcast, they insisted that he accept one-third of their salary, because his work helped establish them in the position whereby they could command such salaries. Harpo refused, but finally agreed to take less . . . The benefit show for the Squalus victims will be held at the Center Theater June 21 . . . Homer Martin, head of the Auto Workers Union, wrote to Modern Age Library requesting two books—a guide to charm called "Better Than Beauty" and a "Most-for-Your-Money Cook Book."

AMBASSADOR BULLITT has arranged with Harcourt-Brace for the re-publication of the novel he wrote about Philadelphia society many years ago called "It's Not Done" . . . In 1919 when Bullitt and Lincoln Steffens went to Russia to discuss peace terms with Lenin, Prime Minister Lloyd George told the members of Parliament, who questioned him about the official status of that trip: "Oh, you mean those two young newspapermen? I know nothing about their trip" . . . Ella Winter, widow of Lincoln Steffens, told us yesterday that when Bullitt and Steffens saw Lenin, they had with them a list of questions written for them by Philip Kerr, who now is the Marquis of Lothian—the man who just was named Britain's Ambassador to the United States.

THE NEW YORKER magazine is preparing a profile on Jimmy Roosevelt . . . The son of County Judge George Martin—the jurist who was acquitted in his bribery trial—is being screen tested by Paramount . . . Broun's Nutmeg now incloses a cigar with each rejection slip . . . Heywood, incidentally, is writing the sports pages for the dummy edition of "P. M.," the new evening tabloid. Dorothy Parker, who wrote the theater review for that dummy edition, reviewed "No Time for Comedy," the new Katharine Cornell show—and panned it . . . All contributors to this dummy edition are being paid.

THE COTTON CLUB was jammed with celebrants the other night . . . In one of the boxes sat Marlene Dietrich and her husband, Rudolph Sieber; Josef von Sternberg, and Erich Remarque . . . A photographer for the News took a number of pictures of that group . . . "Isn't your name Al Willard?" Von Sternberg asked him . . . "Yes," the cameraman replied. "How'd you know?" . . . "I'm your cousin," the Hollywood director informed . . . Von Sternberg had furnished the affidavits of support required to bring the cameraman's family into this country.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, JR., visited the night clubs the othe: night wearing a black patch over his right eye. "A Hyde Park wasp bit me," he explained. "Also, I've found the secret of Floyd Gibbons' success" . . . The newspaper recently reported the tragedy that befell the Lowengaart family, German exiles who just had arrived here. They decided to end their lives and the life of their young son in a suicide pact. The police rescued the mother and son, but the father died. Mrs. Lowengaart is now in the prison ward at Bellevue; her son is in the insane ward. The woman swallowed a toothbrush there, in another suicide attempt last week—and was operated upon.

"THE AMERICAN WAY" is reprinted, and the long, important speech—which was omitted because of an oversight—will be included. The book will have a special dedication to Anne Kaufman, daughter of the co-author, George S. Kaufman—because Anne discovered the mistake . . . Fefe's Monte Carlo will close for the summer this week . . . Selznick still is trying to find a suitable ending for "Gone With the Wind" . . . The city officials now pay no heed to the votes for the favorite New York City display at the fair, as tabulated on the sample voting machine. They discovered that the fire and police departments practically ruin the count—by voting solidly against each other's displays.

Two Features Score Hits At the Little

'Pagliacci' and Revived Comedy Comprise A Bargain Bill

Like any good operatic impresario, the Little Theater has a companion piece for its film version of Leoncavallo's brief opera, "Pagliacci." There being no cinematic "Cavalleria Rusticana," the Little has brought back its hit comedy of last summer, "Storm in a Teacup."

Musically, the gelatinized "Pagliacci" is enormously effective. The warm, passionate melodies tingle with stirring vitality.

Richard Tauber is Canio, the genial clown but jealous husband, whose Nedda, he finds, does not love him and, when the situation in their playlet parallels their private life, he brings the comedy to a sudden and terrible end. The superb Tauber voice must be familiar to many a film or concert-goer who will know that he brings tones that are rich and carefully produced to the role he has sung many times on the stage.

The fullness of life that has been commented upon so often by admirers of this opera is frequently evident in the film, occasionally through the camera, but most often on the sound track. In the prologue and final sequences, Director Karl Grune has unfortunately employed an ineffective color camera, resulting in scenes that are unnecessarily tawdry, but, in the central part of the film, he has succeeded in making the story tense and moving. Steffi Duna, the Nedda, is mainly responsible for this vitality, the scenes in which she appears having warmth and realism. Arthur Margetson, known in this country for his light opera appearances, is the crafty Tonio, and Esmond Knight and Jerry Verno are Silvio and Beppe, respectively.

If you are not already familiar with "Storm in a Teacup," now is the time to rectify that. This comedy of Scottish moors, is one of the best things to come from over the water and Sara Allgoos' priceless Mrs. Hagerty, who failed to buy a license for her pup, Patsy, deserves a pedestal in the hall of fame. The merry telling of a stuffed-shirt's parliamentary aims is further enhanced by Rex Harrison's enviable reporter and a neat preview of Vivien Leigh.

Exports To Argentina

Our exports to Argentina for the first four months of this year were only half of what they were in the comparable period of 1938, while the value of sales to Brazil increased slightly. This is likely to be interpreted as having a political significance which is really lacking. Our trade agreement with Brazil is too recent to have had any perceptible effect upon the volume of trade with that country, although some progress has been made toward releasing frozen balances due to American exporters. Indirectly, of course, that is encouraging trade with Brazil by removing deterrents to future sales.

On the other hand, the Senate's refusal to modify the embargo upon Argentine meat products by ratifying the sanitary convention has given rise to much justified resentment in that great Latin-American republic. And it may account to some extent for the recent drastic reductions in import quotas applied to our products, particularly automobiles. However, there are other excellent reasons why the purchase of automobiles—regarded as a semi-luxury by the Argentinians—should be cut down at a time when their shortage of foreign exchange is acute and business conditions none too good.

Moreover, arrangements have recently been made whereby American automobile manufacturers have agreed to take part payment for their exports in Argentine Treasury dollar notes. In that way the import quotas can be liberalized. The agreement indicates that financial pressure, rather than any desire to exclude American products as such, constitutes the chief reason for the sharp curtailment of our export trade to Argentina.

No doubt our exporters would fare better if we were willing to admit Argentina's chief products more freely. Unfortunately, the recent tempest in a teapot over the small purchase of Argentine canned beef by the Navy is not calculated to enhance admiration for the United States in that country. It is more likely to increase Argentine skepticism regarding the advantages to be derived from the projected reciprocal trade agreement.

The Silent Treatment

Since December, 1937, Hungary has been making partial payments on the relief debt owed the United States. As long ago as February, 1938, the Hungarian government outlined a tentative plan for a permanent debt settlement which President Roosevelt transmitted to Congress with a recommendation for "most careful consideration."

Congress has never paid the slightest attention to that request. So once more Hungary has deposited a small sum on account in place of the scheduled payment due today. Again, too, hope is expressed that Congress will take cognizance of the request for a definitive debt settlement.

Rumania has also informed the Department of State of its desire to effect a new debt settlement. But, as explained in the official reply to this request, the most the executive branch of Government can do is to transmit proposals to Congress. No revisions are possible except with the approval of that body.

The "silent treatment" which Congress has administered to Hungary—a debtor nation sincerely anxious to meet its obligations to the extent of its ability—bodes ill for intelligent handling of the problem of inter-governmental debts. It became evident long ago that the debtor states of Europe were not in a position to fulfill the onerous terms of the original debt-funding agreements negotiated with our Government. When the defaulting debtors offer to resume payments on a reduced scale, therefore, nothing is lost and a good deal may be gained by examining their proposals.

In refusing to reopen the debt issue, Congress is simply trying to dodge an unpleasant task that must be undertaken at no distant date. A futile insistence upon fulfillment of the terms of dead contracts did not prevent—indeed it hastened—the inevitable defaults. We shall accomplish nothing by pretending that these impractical settlements are still in force, and continuing to demand payment according to the agreed-upon scale. On the contrary, if Congress rebuffs the overtures of debtor states anxious to wipe out the stigma of default, the debtors will no doubt become increasingly indifferent to the claims of a stubborn creditor who clings to the letter of contracts and lets the substance go.

Either Hull Or Wallace

Knowledge of the serious split within the Administration on the export-subsidy issue is no longer confined to insiders. And appreciation of the developing antagonism, with all that it implies for 1940, seems likely to spread rapidly. It will be disseminated when the House votes on the Senate amendment to the agriculture appropriation bill which would permit diversion of funds for cotton-export subsidies. That vote may come today.

The principals in the clash within the Cabinet are Secretary Wallace and Secretary Hull. The former is increasingly leaning toward export subsidies as a last desperate device for handling the problem of agricultural surplus. The Secretary of State is at least equally positive in fighting the subsidy panacea and in seeking to develop the trade-agreements program, with which export subsidies are wholly incompatible.

Since President Roosevelt has so far failed to resolve the issue, it seems destined to grow rather than diminish. And this will certainly be the case if Secretary Wallace succeeds in swinging the farmers behind export subsidies. Such a development would wreck the trade-agreements program, to which Secretary Hull is deeply and irrevocably committed. This very week the Secretary of State announced that "every departure from the policy represented by this program has led to the stifling of healthy trade and commerce and to the undermining of social stability."

In saying this Mr. Hull presumably had an eye on Mr. Wallace, for certainly nothing seems more of a "departure" from the trade-agreements program than the export subsidies for which the Department of Agriculture is working. As the President himself has pointed out, export subsidies for cotton would immediately lead to quotas on imported textiles manufactured from that artificially cheapened raw material. It is a safe bet that the British government would regard such a result as a violation of the spirit of the most important trade agreement achieved by the Administration.

It is, or should be, obvious to everyone that a cotton-export subsidy would open the floodgates for a torrent of pressure from other producer groups. There is no insurance whatsoever in the fact that pending legislation would hold the dumping of cotton on the world market to a relatively small amount. The exceptional procedure reluctantly accepted as an emergency in the case of wheat is already being whooped up for cotton. Other producers will not be slow to advance their claims. Current report has it that the Department of Agriculture is considering subsidizing lard exports, even in advance of disposition of the cotton issue.

So the House faces an important test vote. It is important not only because five years of patient work on the trade-agreements program is jeopardized. It is equally important because export subsidies are in the long run a snare and a delusion to the assumed beneficiary. Inevitably they operate to force down the foreign price of the commodity subsidized. And this in turn tends to depress the price paid to the American producer.

The nations in which we seek to dump our surplus products can of course retaliate by refusing to take them. Or, if they do take them, we can then apply special tariffs in an endeavor to prevent their gain injuring our producers. But either of these developments would stifle normal economic processes. And, as Secretary Hull told Secretary Wallace on Monday, "it is not possible to stifle normal economic processes without diminishing human freedom and national security and independence."

Strictly Confidential

Now that the visit of Their Britannic Majesties to Washington is only a pleasant memory the press may be pardoned for expressing pride in the confidence imposed in it by the Government on that unique occasion.

Some time in advance of the royal visit newspaper editors and writers were made privy to certain secrets of state. These secrets were contained by means of confidential documents from the Department of State.

Such were the now famous Documents Nos. 233, 234 and 235. Each was inscribed with a warning that not a word nor a hint of the vital information therein reach the public before 8 p. m. (Eastern standard time) on June 8, 1939. But the necessity for secrecy now has passed and it is permitted, in the interests of history, to divulge what we know.

Document No. 234 revealed that at the White House dinner Their Majesties were to be fed calf's head soup, terrapin, boned capon, maple and almond ice cream and white pound cake. Document No. 233 was not less startling. It disclosed, among other things, that the table decorations would include cattleya orchid (alba), white phalaenopsis and adiantum gloriosa fern.

Most significant, however, was Document No. 235, which in strict confidence revealed that:

"American music today is made up of three distinct living idioms—a folk, a popular and an art music."

"We cannot deny a sense of relief that the duty of safeguarding these secrets is ended. Yet we should not be human if we failed to rejoice that we, like other editors, proved ourselves discreet until it was safe to make these matters of diplomacy public property.

Japan's Challenge

The Japanese military blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin is unquestionably the most serious challenge those nations have ever had to face in the Far East.

Compared to it the previous Japanese encroachments on foreign treaty rights in China have been no more than pin pricks. But the fact that these past infringements went largely uncontested by the Western powers has obviously encouraged the Japanese to embark on their present bold action.

If the Japanese achieve their presumptuous demands at Tientsin it may be expected that the International Settlement and the French Concession at Shanghai will be the next victims of their pressure. The Tientsin blockade, therefore, like the seizure of the International Settlement at Amoy, some weeks ago, constitutes a rehearsal for the eventual showdown at the huge treaty port where the foreign stake is greatest.

The Western powers face a very serious dilemma. To allow Japan's action to go unchallenged would be tantamount to a final surrender of the privileged position those powers have long occupied in China. On the other hand, strong action is rendered difficult by the parlous situation which obtains in Europe. That explains why, in discussing the Japanese action at Tientsin in the House of Commons yesterday, the government spokesman suggested but did not assert that retaliatory action would be taken by the United Kingdom.

As always, Tokyo is making effective use of the preoccupation of Great Britain and France with European affairs. Even now, be it noted, Japanese troops have not actually seized the foreign concessions. But they apparently believe that the ulterior purposes they have in mind can be accomplished by cutting those concessions off from contact with the outside world.

These purposes are twofold. In the first place, Japan wants to establish predominant control over the internal government of those concessions, so that they will no longer serve either as commercial centers for the Western powers or as a refuge for Chinese patriots. Even more important is Japan's aim to intimidate the Western powers into withholding aid of any kind from China.

The achievement of these aims would go far to consolidate Japanese control of the conquered area in China and would make Chinese resistance far more difficult. The issue now contested at Tientsin is thus a struggle for tremendous stakes.

At The Water's Edge

No issue facing the American people is more vital than the problem of how best to safeguard the peace of the United States. It is not a problem susceptible of any easy or certain solution. Precisely for that reason it demands the best thought of the Nation, regardless of domestic political considerations and party alignments.

It would be tragic, therefore, if a measure designed to further the cause of peace should become the football of partisan politics. Yet that is precisely the situation that threatens in the case of the neutrality legislation now before Congress.

On Monday the House Foreign Affairs Committee approved the neutrality bill sponsored by its acting chairman and embodying ideas advanced on request by Secretary Hull. The Post believes that the Bloom bill has much to commend it, that it avoids the more dangerous pitfalls of mandatory neutrality legislation and is calculated to preserve peace in general, which is obviously more practical than merely endeavoring to insulate the United States from war.

But whether the bill is good or bad, wise or unwise, it seems deplorable that the division in the committee was wholly along partisan lines. With three absent, the Democrats in that body unanimously approved the bill and voted down amendments intended to modify its basic provisions. And, except for two of their number who voted "present," all the Republicans in the committee opposed the measure.

This partisan division may be fortuitous and prove to be limited to the committee. But if it foreshadows a similar division in Congress as a whole, on legislation intimately connected with the conduct of our foreign relations, the implications will be most unfortunate.

Politics, as former Gov. Landon recalled recently, should stop at the water's edge. There is, no doubt, plenty of ground for intelligent disagreement as to what role the United States should play in the world of today. But no good purpose will be served if the basis of this disagreement is made political.

District Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The action taken by the House of Representatives in voting for this income-tax law for the District of Columbia is one of the rankest demonstrations of selfishness and lack of foresight that the public has ever witnessed. By what right do these members of the House, supposed to be public servants, become exempt under this class legislation. By what sort of reasoning do these legislators determine that married men with a family to support and a home they hope some day to own must, under the same gross exemption, pay the same tax as do unmarried men and women who as a group have only their individual selves to clothe and feed and who can elect to either lay aside the surplus as savings or spend it in riotous living.

I, who reside in nearby Maryland and happen to work in the District of Columbia, have no objection to an income tax as such, but any student of economics knows that an income tax is based upon the ability of the taxpayer to pay. A novice knows that an unmarried individual without dependents with a salary of $1,000 can save more than a married man with a wife and a couple of children to support and a home to pay for whose salary is three times as much.

I feel it is advisable to just sign this letter a TAXPAYER.

Washington, June 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Shame on the members of our Congress who have the audacity to propose income-tax legislation on residents of the District and its suburbs in the manner as set forth in The Post of June 13! To my mind this is a new high in disgusting legislation, particularly in view of the fact that those creating the law have shamelessly exempted themselves and their aides from similar taxation. And why should these $10,000-a-year men feel that they should have the use of their entire salaries while little $2,500-a-year men with wives and children to support should have $10 of that amount taken away from them to help support the government which supports these Congressmen in luxury?

Is our honored Congress trying to pattern its tax program after those of Germany and Italy?

For a time they seemed to fear embarrassment at home if they exempted themselves from such taxation, but now they appear to have cast all such caution to the winds and have taken this action at this particular time because elections are not in order for another year. What sort of creatures are these that feel no responsibility for the support of the community from which they receive incomes enabling them to buy cream, but will lay the burden upon those who are lucky to have skim milk?

G. A. COBURN.

Bethesda, Md., June 13.

Practical Experience

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The request of the Secretary of Commerce for a corps of special experts on business problems suggests that, to be consistent, the department itself should be headed by a real expert—someone whose knowledge of business is attested by a record of successful experience in that line. And, to carry this idea a few steps farther, it might be helpful if all of our Administration leaders had the benefit of practical experience. I have been wondering whether or not there could be any connection between the failure of the New Deal to start "business" going, and the fact that most of our leading New Dealers have been lacking in practical experience, if not in sympathy toward "business."

Regulation Of Transportation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On May 28th, you published what I thought was a very fine editorial summarizing the Wheeler-Truman omnibus transportation bill. You stated that the primary purpose of the bill is to establish equality of regulation among different types of transportation agencies in order to permit the most economical and efficient utilization of our transportation system. You also stated that motor carriers use highways maintained at the expense of taxpayers.

In a letter published in your paper several days ago, Mr. Morris Glazer, editor of Transport Topics, took exception to the above editorial implying that highway motor carriers more than pay their way and are regulated more closely than are the railroads.

Mr. Glazer says that "Motor vehicle owners paid $1,585,000,000 in special highway taxes" in 1937, and that of that amount $417,500,000 was contributed by trucks. Both figures are estimates based on guesses at the total amount of gasoline taxes, registration fees, and even fines paid by every sort of motor vehicle in the first case and every sort of truck in the second.

There are 26,000,000 automobiles and more than 4,000,000 trucks in the United States. The American Trucking Associations, Inc., which publishes the paper of which Mr. Glazer is editor, says that only 600,000 trucks are engaged in the business of hauling for hire and that only one-third of these are in intercity freight service. Why should this relatively small number of trucks, even though they are larger and heavier than most trucks, claim credit for all sorts of taxes on every type of automotive vehicle in the country? What is there in common between a big intercity road hauler and the private automobile or city retail delivery truck or farmer's truck?

Mr. Glazer also refers to the "3,500,000 workers employed in the trucking industry." Again he must have included not merely the drivers and other employes connected with the 200,000 intercity highway carriers but also all workers connected with the retail city delivery trucks, local transfer trucks, farm trucks and all the rest. What have those drivers got to do with the intercity trucking industry?

Mr. Glazer says that trucks, constituting only 14 per cent of all motor vehicles, pay 27 per cent of the highway tax bill and he seems to think that this is more than they should pay. I don't pretend to be an authority on transportation, but it seems to me that the huge trucks which we meet on the highways are certainly entitled to pay twice as much toward roads as are the ordinary small automobiles.

It is necessary to recognize the difference between taxes which are levied for the special benefit of the contributor (such as special truck taxes) and those taxes which are levied for the general support of Government with no special benefit to the contributor (such as railroad taxes of $341,000,000 last year).

Round Robins

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The statement in the press to the effect that a "round robin" is being circulated in the Senate, pledging the signers to opposition to the President's foreign policy, recalls the tragic consequences of a similar "round robin" of 20 years ago. On March 4, 1919, Senator Lodge introduced in the Senate a resolution to the effect that: "Whereas under the Constitution it is a function of the Senate to advise and consent to, or dissent from, the ratification of any treaty of the United States, and no such treaty can become operative without the consent of the Senate expressed by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the Senators present . . ."

It will be recalled that President Wilson was attempting to negotiate a just treaty, but the effect of the Lodge resolution, bearing the names of more than one-third of the Senate, names which represented a "rule or ruin" Republicanism motivated only by blind opposition to Woodrow Wilson, was to give notice to the world that the President of the United States could not speak for his country in the negotiation of such a treaty. The tragic consequences of the present petition may be inferred when we recall the disastrous results of the Lodge resolution.

Blind hatred of a Democratic President resulted in losing the peace in a war which had been won by a manhood stimulated by the highest ideals. Let those Senators now engaged in circulating a similar petition, and motivated only by an equally blind hatred of Franklin Roosevelt, pause to reflect upon the probable consequences of their proposed action.

Baseball Lingo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In Cooperstown, N. Y., they are celebrating the centennial of baseball and proclaiming a fellow townsman, Gen. Abner Doubleday, as the "inventor" of the game. The claim is subject to much controversy, but one thing is certain, and that is the authorship of most of the words, phrases and expressions used in describing a game of baseball, for it has a vernacular of its own.

In the late nineties I was a cub reporter on The Post. The late "Joe" Campbell was sporting editor, and one of the ablest any paper ever had. It was he who coined the language of baseball, and some of the words he originated have been incorporated into our dictionaries. For example, in speaking of a baseball enthusiast, he started to characterize him as a fanatic. "Joe" had a very poor typewriter, which none but himself could use. It stuck on the syllable "fan" at the end of a line, and he allowed it to remain so. Thus the language was enriched by the addition of the word "fan" used to describe an enthusiast. His baseball stories were classics, and many who have followed him have only imitated his style.

The Post Impressionist

Tale

THE SILVER-SHEENED female figurehead sits near the boardwalk facing the sea. I probably would have missed it had it not been for Dean, who pounced on it with all the glee of an anthropologist unearthing a fresh mummy, and then, with startling efficiency, fished out of her bag a postal card of the figurehead that bore the following information: "Figurehead washed ashore from the three-mast sailing vessel Dictator. Lost in storm off shores of the beach in March, 1891."

The wind and the termites had done their worst for the wooden lady. In several places the silver was coming off and there were holes in various parts of her anatomy. The face in particular was badly punctured and looked as though it would be pushed in as soon as a good strong wind came along.

A gray-bearded old man in overalls, looking exactly like M. G. M.'s idea of a New England fisherman, sauntered up to us.

"Nice day," he said.

It was cloudy and about to rain and I said yes.

"Newly married, ain't you?"

"We have never been married," I answered firmly.

"Well, that's what some folks say about the captain who put up this monument. Would you like to know the true story about it? I'll tell it to you both for two-bits."

"We haven't time," I said.

Sometimes it's a good idea to find time," said the old man mysteriously.

I looked at Dean. "O. K.," I said, "two-bits it is. Do you make a practice of this?"

"Yes, sir. I make my living between telling true stories and fishing, and what I'm going to tell you is God's honest truth, as sure as my name is Dan Bradley."

"That's fine, Mr. Bradley," I said politely.

"It was this way," he began. "This captain was homebound from South America—Buenos Aires. His first mate was a younger and brighter lad and when he was around the captain just didn't have a chance when it came to women. Well, on his way home from Buenos Aires, he had with him a cargo of oil and a pretty Spanish woman and her boy. He told his crew she was his wife, but the mate, he knew different, and when the captain wasn't looking he and this woman came to an understanding."

Mr. Bradley winked at us. "Do you know what I mean?" he asked.

"Yes, we know what you mean," Dean replied stiffly.

"I thought y'would. Well, one day the captain caught them in his cabin together. He raised the living dickens with the mate. But the mate wasn't one to be bulldozed. He told the captain that he knew darn well they wasn't married and that he had as much right to make love to that sweet woman as the captain did.

"The captain got pretty sore at all this and had the mate put in irons. He put the woman and her boy in a stateroom and locked them in, saying he was going to feed both of them bread and water until they learned to respect him. Well, it seems that this Spanish lady came from a very religious family, which had produced a saint many years ago, and so everybody in that family had a special pull with the elements. She was kind of angry at the rough treatment she was getting, and began to pray for a storm. Pretty soon she got it. It began to storm like it never had before. The mast came down; the boat sprung a big leak. The captain didn't bother about the woman, her son, or any of the crew. He got on the only lifeboat on the ship and made for shore, leaving them all behind to drown."

Dean's eyes were bright with excitement. "What became of the captain?" she asked.

"Well, I should charge you an extra two-bits for that, but seeing you're a young couple and might draw a lesson from all this, I'll tell you the rest for nothing."

"Thank you, Mr. Bradley," I said.

"Well, the captain's conscience naturally started to bother him and when this here figurehead was washed ashore he thought sure it was a sign from God. He put it up as a monument, thinking that would settle his conscience. But he went cuckoo a few years later and nobody could cure him. I guess it still bothers him."

Mr. Bradley paused and tugged on his pipe.

"You forgot to tell us what the captain's name was," I said, slipping him a quarter.

A foolish grin broke over his face. "So I did. Well, if you must know, his name was Daniel Bradley." He spoke the name slowly as though he hoped it would produce a dramatic effect.

"Tell me, Mr. Bradley," asked Dean, her eyes glittering with malice, "have you read any stories by O. Henry?"

"Yes, ma'am." He looked at her roguishly and took time to puff on his pipe. "O. Henry is my favorite author."

With that he turned on his heel and made his way toward the main street. We watched him until he disappeared into a saloon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If we really have freedom of the press in this country it should certainly be permitted in the Capital City. So let the public know the contents of the dictaphone records which we have read so much about during the milk investigation.

If there is nothing to conceal, the members of Congress and of the Milk Investigating Committee should welcome the opportunity to clear up a matter the suppression of which would create suspicion in the public mind. If, on the other hand, evidence of irregularities has been uncovered sufficiently damaging to anyone to warrant a demand that the Metroplitan Police Department surrender all copies of the records involved, then the public has the right to be informed.

After all, don't the taxpayers furnish the money to make the records? Don't they pay the salary of every member of Congress as well as every member of the investigating committee? Why, therefore, shouldn't they have something to say about the destruction of these records?

Toast To Sports Writers

THE OBSERVANCE of the centennial of baseball is incomplete and a little unsporting without some acknowledgment to the corps of journalists who have clattered over the ties with players and written stuff that made them famous and some of the magnates rich. Baseball has lived as much by publicity as by prowess, for the glamorizing prose of the working press has kept the business in the public mind in season and out for more than 40 years and clothed it in the appeal of a national institution.

True, the press has covered baseball for box-office reasons of its own, but the writers rarely have permitted such thoughts to soil their work, and it is for the writer in the press coop, not for the business manager in his lair, that I bespeak honorable mention. If Babe Ruth's bat and the pants of John McGraw be relics worth treasuring under glass in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, an institution adapted from the Lenin Museum and the typical American attic, then Bill McGeehan's portable typewriter, which made McGraw the master mind, is not less sacred.

Runyan, Lardner Deserve Much Credit

DETRACTING nothing from the glory that was Cobb, I propose that the trustees of Cooperstown score an assist for the man who named him the Georgia Peach, and, in the case of Ruth, equal recognition for the writer—a Mr. Runyan, I believe—who called him first the Great Bambino, then the Bam.

Certain individual writers in some communities have been baseball men in print longer than any individual star and have done baseball on paper as well as any athlete ever played it on the field.

Among these Ring Lardner must be cited first and Hugh S. Fullerton somewhere in first division along with Grantland Rice, the originator of the dream-stuff style, and still champion of that school of writers who hear only cheers and never the gnashing of the turnstile cogs. Lardner and Rice, friends and neighbors, wrote from conflicting points of view and equally well—Lardner with a knack for wringing a clammy sweat shirt onto the page, and Rice in a way that squirted the sourest oaf with nobility as sweet as barber water.

Many Of Writers Boast Long Careers

IT MAY BE unwise to single out individual nominees offhand, but I would name as one of the musts Roy Stockton, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, who, writing of the Gas House Gang and Pepper Martin's Mudcats, made even better entertainment than he saw. He and Sid Keener, of the Star-Times, were doing baseball when George Sisler broke in and are still at it years after th eclose of Sisler's long and ill-rewarded career, and no St. Louis magnate or manager, nor even Sisler, or the Brothers Dean, was more helpful to the game than either one.

Bill Hanna, of the New York Herald Tribune, who covered baseball 40 years, a wizened, sickly little man in his last days and always quaintly querulous, was noted around the league for his pills and draughts and his refusal to occupy hotel rooms above the second floor, to the neglect of his extreme accuracy and a conscientious habit of checking all doubtful points with the team managers before he wrote his copy. Bill Phelon, of Cincinnati, was a fan himself with a personal following and a flow of wild but excellent language. He was thought to be slightly eccentric on the side, because he carried pet lizards to deter managers from assigning others to room with him, and once, in all earnestness, solicited a colleague who was a devout Catholic to join the Ku Klux Klan and keep the Pope at bay.

Deserve Niche In Hall Of Fame

IN BROOKLYN Uncle Wilbert Robinson, as manager of the clowns, called the Daffiness Boys, was devoted to Garry Schumacher, the spirit of Flatbush, and was unhappy without him on tour. Surely among such men as these and Harry Salsinger, of Detroit; Bozeman Bulger, Paul Shannon, of Boston; Charlie Dryden, Charles E. Van Loan, Dan Daniel, Rud Rennie, Fred G. Lieb, Gunner Hudson and Harry Neely, the Mexican scholar, the trustees of the museum must discover something that can be ignored only at a sacrifice of sportsmanship and comradeship. For in baseball the historians help create the history they write and are of the game itself.

Dryden was an artist who often concealed vulgar mischief in the sly arrangement of blameless wordage, and gems of his composition are still recited by old carpetbaggers of the press coop for the entertainment of the young. At last he collapsed, and a group of comrades who broke their Southern trip a few years later to visit him at Biloxi found him paralyzed in a wheel chair watching the approach of his last spring.

His speech was impaired, but the old man managed to stutter, with tears in his eyes, "Happy days! Happy days!"

Mr. Dryden, for one, would not look out of place in the baseball hall of fame.

Liberty And Abundance

THE FAVORITE pretext put forward by advocates of increased political power—whether under the label of communism, fascism or just "planning"—over the labor and property of the individual, is that new conditions require new modes of organization. Though communism is one of the ancient social forms, and fasism as old as violence, and the sport of minding other people's business began in the Garden of Eden, these facts are blinked and attention directed hastily to the actual new conditions.

For there is a comparatively new factor in human affairs. The capacity for production has been so increased that the difference in degree may be reckoned a difference in kind. And this beneficent change has been wrought, in the main, within the last 150 years. During that brief era productive power has been stepped up many times more than in thousands of years previously. Now how did that happen? And should not the circumstances which made it possible have some bearing on its operation and continuance?

"Hunger and History," E. Parmalee Prentice (Harper's, $3), is an examination of the vital question.

IN THE PAST, Mr. Prentice points out, famine has been a mournfully recurrent factor in history. It ranked with war and pestilence as one of the three scourges. Seldom was there more than enough food to go round for a year together. Remember, said Cato, in stating the maxims of good farm management, how long the winter is. Man and beast might be on short commons before spring. Feasts are dwelt upon in all ancient literature, because hunger was taken for granted.

The most primitive tribes still surviving, such as the Australian aborigines, pass their whole time searching for food. And they will eat anything they can get.

The first notable advance toward the conquest of hunger presumably came with the domestication of animals, the ownership of flocks and herds. The next must have been the beginnings of agriculture. These partial controls of nature permitted an increase of population. An accordant new level of production seemed to have been set; but thereafter neither animal breeding nor cultivation of the earth made any notable progress for thousands of years.

AND THAT LEVEL was much lower than is now generally understood. Cattle were gaunt, small creatures. Draft animals were ill-fed and their harness most inefficient for using their power. Several span of oxen and three or four men were needed to manage a plow in heavy ground. And the subsequent grain yield was extremely low; little was done to improve seed grain, and the land was cropped out, wanting fertilizer and proper tillage.

White bread, that is, made from wheat flour, was a delicacy until the eighteenth century; rye bread was the staple, because rye yields more from poor soil. When the potato was introduced to Europe from America, it came into use rapidly, because of the heavy yield; it gave enough to eat in quantity, which was the main consideration. Acorns were always kept in mind as a possible recourse in case of famine.

The population per acre of arable ground was much less than it is at present; yet Malthus observed that it "pressed on the limits of subsistence."

IF MALTHUS was in error in his deductions from this demonstrable truth, what was it he failed to take into account?

Technical advances, inventions, the machine age, is the ready answer.

Very well, but what stimulated the technical advances? Why did they begin just ten, after thousands of years of stagnation? What broke down the barriers to progress?

The answer is contained in the question. Men threw off the yoke of political control of their economic affairs. They declared for liberty, for minimum government, private property, and personal rights, as against government power and communal property and labor. The increase of production, the "economy of abundance," was the result of liberty.

Mr. Prentice boldly points out that even the inclosure of the commons in England, by making such lands private property, increased production per acre. It was impossible for a cottager with a share of rights in the village common lands to cultivate his allotment to advantage. He would have to take his strip in rotation with the worst farmers; the sound cultivation he did one year would benefit another, not himself, the next year; the strips were inconvenient for use. The common pasture was overused.

GOOD AGRICULTURE could be developed only by men who owned the land they tilled.

Mr. Prentice, considering primarily the events which tended to specific increase in yield, ignores the bitter injustice of the specific inclosure acts, which were so framed as to expropriate the cottager with a derisory payment of a very small sum of money while the big landlords got the land. But that again is how political power always operates, so far as it extends. Even when the ostensible object of such power is to relieve the distress of the "underprivileged," what it does is to keep those already destitute on a workdole, prevent them making efforts to aid themselves by threats of cutting them off the dole, demand votes in return; and provide well-paid supervisory jobs for the politicians and their friends. For these soft jobs no requirement to prove pauperism is ever specified. Yet they are paid out of the common tax collections exacted for "the general welfare."

Political control and hunger, freedom and food, are natural sequences. Liberty created abundance. The increase of want in the last 25 years is co-equivalent to the world spread of the power of the state.

Mr. Prentice has collected a wealth of graphic detail to support his contention. His picture of past standards of living should be of historical interest only if the lesson is drawn from them. Otherwise they may be painfully proved as "the shape of things to come" if state power continues to grow. Hunger is always just around the corner when man turns away from freedom.

World's Largest Cancer Hospital Is Dedicated

New York, June 14 (AP).—The world's largest cancer institution, the new Memorial Hospital here, was dedicated today with announcement of some new X-ray instruments for saving life.

One is a bit of metal as big as the last three-quarters of an inch of the end of a lead pencil. It is a new kind of X-ray meter, made to lay on the skin at the spot where X-rays are being given, enabling physicians to measure the rays as they enter the body.

The hospital sight, covering a block, was donated by John D. Rockefeller, jr. It was built with aid of a $3,000,000 grant from the General Education Board and $500,000 from Edward S. Harkness. It has 168 beds.

The Conflict Starts Early

By Mark Sullivan

Democrats Divided

HERE IT IS, a year in advance of the Democratic National Convention. And here are two factions engaged in a struggle for control of the party. If this earliness of line-up is an index of later intensity, America is going to see an exciting political year.

Such struggles have arisen before, in both parties—but never at so early a period. The most recent struggle in the Democratic Party was in 1924, between the "wet" wing, symbolized by former Gov. Smith, and the "dry" wing, symbolized by William G. McAdoo. But it was not until February and March of that year, three or four months before the convention, that that struggle crystallized. The most famous struggle in either party during the past 70 years was the one in 1912 between the then Republican Presid t Taft and Theodore Roosevelt. That contest did not begin until late February, and was compressed into the four months remaining before the convention.

For the earliness of beginning of the present struggle, and for the probable intensity of it, there is good reason. This is no mere struggle to control a party organization. It is no mere feud between two men. This is a conflict between opposing philosophies of society and Government. A contest of that kind can take on the intensity of a war of religions.

Reformers Took Over Government Control

THE STRUGGLE was bound to come. The seeds of it were planted in 1932, the year in which Mr. Roosevelt was first elected President. In that year the Democratic Party was as it always had been. It wrote a platform as orthodoxly Democratic as any platform the party had ever had. The platform on which Mr. Roosevelt rode into the Presidency was as Democratic as that on which Woodrow Wilson was elected, or Grover Cleveland.

But once Mr. Roosevelt was elected, he surrounded himself with—or there gravitated to him—a group of advisers to whom the principles of the Democratic Party had little weight. Not many of them had been Democrats in the ordinary sense. Some of them regarded both the Democratic and Republican parties as out of date—"outmoded" was a word they used about many familiar institutions. All of them contemplated far-reaching reforms. Some of the reforms they advocated were entirely consistent with the American system. But some of the advisers regarded the whole American tradition about government and society as inadequate for modern conditions. Some of them had been strongly impressed by the new experiments in Europe.

During the early weeks of Mr. Roosevelt's Presidency, when all the banks were closed, one of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers wanted him to keep the banks closed indefinitely, and to use this suspension of the country's economic life as a clean slate, upon which to set up a wholly new economic and social order.

MR. ROOSEVELT was not willing to do this, but he adopted enough of the various suggestions of his advisers, and went far enough along the road toward collectivism, to commit him to that course, without his being fully aware of it, or fully intending it.

To the Democrats this was deeply disturbing—it was about this time that the venerable Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, said publicly that he wished he had died before seeing the New Deal imposed upon the historic principles of the Democratic Party.

Most of the Democrats, however, excepting a few like Senator Glass, were reluctant to speak out. They were somber, but they were silent. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, then Democratic leader of the Senate, when going into the White House to receive the President's directions, used to walk with the manner of a man deeply depressed, lifting his feet slowly as if from an engulfing quagmire. To personal friends he told his sorrow and his apprehension; but publicly he said nothing.

For the reluctance of the Democrats to speak out during the early years of the New Deal, there were several reasons. They felt that the country was in danger and that it was necessary to seem to show confidence in the President. They felt that the legislation they were being asked to enact, and which they did enact, was emergency legislation—many of the measures, as they were sent to Congress from the White House, contained words and phrases about "emergency." The Democrats in Congress supposed that when the emergency ended the measures would end. They hesitated to entertain any suspicion that measures put forward as "emergency" were intended to be permanent.

THE DEMOCRATIC leaders had a political motive, too. So long as the Democratic President was serving his first term, the Democrats in Congress disliked to start a conflict. A conflict might seem like an effort to deprive their own President of a second term, and might injure the party's prospect of remaining in power.

Now, however, the Democrats are free to fight. They have a right to assume that the President will not attempt a third term. Going on that assumption, they have a right to nominate whomever they choose. If the assumption turns out to be incorrect, if the President attempts a third term—then that violation of tradition is added to the other reasons for opposing the New Deal.

Most of Washington thinks the Democrats will go through with the fight. Most of Washington thinks President Roosevelt will go through with it too. And in order to fight to save the New Deal at all, Mr. Roosevelt is almost obliged to make the fight with himself as a candidate for the Presidential nomination. There is no other New Dealer with any serious chance of getting the nomination.

Act Of War

The Japanese Blockade At Tientsin

A QUARTER of a century ago, there were 29 foreign concessions and two international settlements in China. Since then the number of these foreign enclaves has greatly shrunk.

The International Settlement at Shanghai and its feeble counterpart at Kulangsu (Amoy) remain. But there are only nine concessions left and only three that are of any real significance at this moment. These are the British and French concessions at Tientsin and the French concession in Shanghai. Together with the Shanghai International Settlement they constitute about the last place of refuge for British and French and, for that matter, American, rights and interests in China. And they are also a thorn in the flesh of the Japanese.

WHEREVER the Japanese have established themselves in China, they have attempted to create a commercial and economic monopoly for their nationals. They have done so in Manchukuo. They have been steadily pushing toward that goal in North China. And with equal persistence but with less success they have tried to do so in the Shanghai area.

The existence of the British and French concessions at Tientsin and of the International Settlement and the French Concession at Shanghai has hampered the Japanese in their efforts to exploit their military conquests in North and Central China. Foreigners in Tientsin and in Shanghai continue to do business despite everything the Japanese have done to make life miserable and business impossible for them.

THE POINT to be remembered is that the effective exploitation of the conquered area is looked upon by the Japanese not merely as a legitimate fruit of victory but as a sine qua non if Japan is to win the war. As things stand now the outcome of that struggle is likely to depend on whether Chinese resources and Chinese stamina can outlast Japan's capacity to finance her war. The former, in part, depends on the amount of aid which China can get from the outside world; the latter on the amount of raw materials which Japan can get out of China without having to pay for these raw materials in foreign exchange.

To foster this purpose the Japanese some time ago introduced a new currency in North China, the so-called federal reserve notes, backed by the Japanese yen. The old legal tender notes were made exchangeable for the Japanese-supported currency at a discount of 40 per cent.

In that way, the Japanese authorities ultimately hoped to drive out Chinese currency in the Tientsin-Peiping area and make North China part of the so-called yen bloc. Having achieved this purpose, it would then be possible for Japan to buy Chinese products without paying for them at the actual rate of exchange.

THIS AMBITIOUS program came a cropper when Great Britain advanced $25,000,000 to China for the purpose of supporting Chinese exchange and when the authorities of the French and British concessions in Tientsin refused to permit the administrators of the Japanese-controlled Federal Reserve Bank to take over the silver reserves of the old Chinese banks. These reserves totaled $40,000,000. In addition, $15,000,000 in silver reserves were kept by the Chinese banks in the Peiping Legation quarter, also out of Japanese reach.

Because of the military pressure they have been able to exercise, the Japanese did get some acceptance for the fiat money they have sought to circulate in North China. That has enabled them greatly to increase their exports to North China and to get an increasing volume of needed supplies out of that area. But the old Chinese currency instead of being offered at the legal discount of 40 per cent actually commands a premium in areas not under Japanese control. The French and British concessions in Tientsin, therefore, constitute free exchange areas in the midst of Japanese currency control and tend to make that control rather difficult. The same thing is true of Shanghai where the yen, to the alarm and consternation of Tokyo is being quoted at a considerable discount below its nominal exchange value.

IT IS CLEAR, therefore, why the second of the demands made by the Japanese as the price of their abandonment of the blockade of the French and British concessions at Tientsin is that the British and French "cease supporting Chinese currency."

Indeed, in some respects, this demand and all it entails, is the most important of the five made by Japan on the Western powers. For once Japan is in a position to exercise complete control over the currency circulating in the Tientsin concessions it might not be long before British and French political control of those areas would become untenable.

Pending that development the Japanese would not, of course, be averse to having the British and French authorities suppress anti-Japanese elements in their concessions, prevent hoarding, ban unlicensed radio stations, allow the use of Japanese-prepared school books in the schools of those areas, and carry out the other demands.

The Japanese are determined to force the French and British out of Tientsin. That is the upshot of it. And the means they are now employing are, to all intents and purposes, warlike. For the blockade of the French and British concessions which they have established has no justification in law. It is a sheer act of force and in ordinary times would so be recognized. But these are not ordinary times.

Wars are no longer declared and they can be waged, as the Japanese are demonstrating at Tientsin, by other than violent means.

Expert Warns On Aping Hair Style of Queen

Royal Coiffure Isn't Flattering to Many, George Declares

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

DESPITE your admiration for Queen Elizabeth's gracious poise, you will not try to emulate her royal coiffure. That is the impression of a young, talented coiffure creator, now associated with one of Washington's leading beauty shops and the only native born American ever to be Godmothered by his internationally known sponsor.

MARSHALL ADAMS

With the Queen the most discussed woman in America this week, even the way she combs her hair is of current interest. But this beauty expert, Mr. George, insists that although the Queen's coiffure is attractive for her particular brand of graciousness, it is not a style easily adopted by those fashion bloodhounds who pounce upon everything new—whether it flatters them or not. Mr. George says Elizabeth's rythmic waves worn over the ear and knotted in the back tend to make most women's faces broader and more rounded.

Mr. George flatly disputed the theory that the Queen's hair style will be aped by Americans. He feels that the season's styles are so individual and varied that only personal preferences will be followed. However, for the slender, mature woman, George has this to say: "A wan or raw-boned face looks less that way with individually designed bangs, feather sheer and waved on a slight angle to break the leanness of face. Irregular lines of both hair and hats always distract the eye from the face that does not bear too close scrutiny."

Mr. George has a unique way of presenting his coiffure ideas to his clients. Through his own bent for art and some training under the celebrated Mexican painter, Covarrubias, he has developed a skillful technique of hastily sketching an idea for an individual coiffure, as a result of the impression a client makes upon him.

George was more enthusiastic over the fate of the chignon than over Elizabeth's coiffure. He asserted that the chignon has a brilliant future and that "Its cool, simple wave drawn softly back from the forehead, back behind the ears and the long back hair caught up with a veiled bow, net, or snood, is comfortable and easy enough for anyone to care for.

Three Types of Coiffure Beauties

Here are a trio of hair styles, sketched for and worn by three women of the international group, closely identified with Washington. Each face gains most flattery with the waves worn, according to the artist-coiffurist who penciled the likenesses. Left—Katherine Anne Haughey Wonnacott, of London, wears her casually waved brown hair back from the forehead and ears and falling in loose curls behind. Upper right—Senora de Laquero, chic El Salvador beauty, loops her long black hair into the popular chignon style. Lower right—Mme. Chapple, Parisian blonde, wears her short ringlets in a cool, modified baby coiffure

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bachelor Loves Spinster, Who Finds Him Congenial; Might Her Affections Deepen After Marriage?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About 10 years ago I met a woman in another city to whom I was greatly attracted and to whom I proposed marriage—but unsuccessfully. We remained the best of friends, however, and still are, though we see each other infrequently. Our tastes are similar; we have the same outlook on life; belong to the same social class, and are most companionable and congenial. Both of us are past 40 and neither of us has ever been married, although each has had many chances to do so.

Lately, I have renewed my efforts at persuasion, but the lady frankly states that while she values our friendship, she simply isn't "in love" with me and therefore cannot make up her mind to say "yes." I believe we have every element in favor of our happiness except that indefinable emotional spark which she is incapable, apparently, of feeling for me. Naturally, this negative reaction somewhat dampens my ardor, particularly since she seems in no hurry to get married; but since she represents everything I look for in a wife, I hate to give up for that reason.

Do you think it is possible that affection or love might grow out of a marriage based entirely on companionship or community of interests? Or are the cards stacked against us, since there is no sympathetic response on the emotional side? Your comments will be greatly appreciated by a

BAFFLED BACHELOR.

A Promising Situation

DEAR B. B.: It is my opinion (although, so far as I know, no statistics have ever been compiled to prove the point) that the majority of successful marriages made between persons past 40 years of age are contracted on the basis of a "community of interests," rather than upon a mutual grande passion. I would say, indeed, that the woman past 40, who had never been married despite many proffers of marriage, and who continued to reject the proposals of a man who was her mental and social equal, and "most companionable and congenial" besides—I would say that she was a callow romanticist, whose emotional attitudes and sentimental expectations of life were arrested at the adolescent level of development.

I would say that she had so long side-stepped the realities of matehood's requirements and responsibilities as to be, after 40, virtually incapable of recognizing, or going forth halfway to meet, a fundamentally compatible love-partner in the event her path crossed his. If the primary condition of marriage, for her, is to be "in love," and if she finds it always impossible to be "in love," one is justified in supposing that she is essentially afraid to come to grips with the demands of either love or marriage.

There is a possibility, of course, that this woman's failure to marry is the result of a long-standing, undercover love relationship with some man who may not be free to marry her. Although you have known her for 10 years, your lack of continuous close association with her naturally prevents your knowing much about her private life and intimate social relationships. It may be that she is, and has been for years, "in love" with somebody else, so that this emotional commitment causes her to shrink from the prospect of marriage with any man save the long-time beloved.

This possibility is suggested by the fact that she has, apparently, consistently maintained a magnetic attractiveness to men (as witness her many opportunities to marry); and this is a quality seldom retained (if ever possessed) by the confirmed spinster of fortyish years. Dynamic physical magnetism, a warmly appealing personality, social receptiveness to the opposite sex—these, usually, are attributes of the individual who is leading an emotionally released life; or who has, at least, some experiential knowledge of his (or her) emotional potentialities.

It boils down, in the final analysis, to a glandular matter, since emotional repression or inhibition or lack of experience, carried into middle life, tends inevitably to affect the functioning of those glands which directly affect the personality, spelling the difference between ascetic austerity and compelling radiance of social reaction.

However, to return to the main theme: if this woman has given you reason to believe she would be willing to marry, if afforded some guarantee of happiness and contentment in the marriage, I think you should put aside all "if, and or but—" considerations, and do your utmost to win her as a wife. It seems to me, indeed, that your fundamental attitude, of the moment, is just about as uncertain as hers. You are as little certain as she is, that you could make her happy, or stake lasting claim to her affections.

But since you have so much in common; have known each other for 10 years, off and on; and during that time have found yourselves to be always congenial and companionable, I think you would be justified in promising her all, and even more, happiness than she could ask for, as your wife. I believe if her indecision can be overcome just long enough to get the ceremony over with, that you will find in the union a sufficiency of "elements in favor of happiness" to promote not only an everincreasing mutual affection, but also a deeply satisfying Indian summer love.

If she is, perchance, something of a callow romanticist and silly sentimentalist (as previously suggested), she probably will need to be, probably is longing to be, rushed off her feet into marriage by some imperiously demanding, extravagantly promising, not-to-be-gainsaid, he-man suitor.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Weight Cannot Be Lost by Diet If Calories Are Not Reduced

WELL, YOU'RE still hoping that somewhere there is a combination of foods that you can eat—in addition to everything else—and grow slim!

Some of the most charming and intelligent women want to know if there isn't some truth in such ideas as the one that "you can eat a tomato and a hard-boiled egg a day and get thin, regardless of what else you eat."

It's odd how the feminine mind clings to the combination idea, for it's only logical that you can never add something more to what you have and get less! Combining foods has no effect on adipose tissue. There are certain combinations on which you can reduce, such as the banana and skim milk diet, but it isn't that the banana or skim milk scare off the pounds. You reduce on this diet for the simple reason that your calorie intake is limited to around 1,000 calories.

Lemon Juice Helps

Many of you want to know if taking lemon juice every day will help you to lose weight. The juice of a half a lemon in a glass of hot water, taken 30 minutes before breakfast, is a valuable addition to the reducer's diet because it improves the elimination—but the lemon juice does not dissolve the fat!

The fact of the matter is that there is no single food or group of foods which, included in the diet, will in any way act against the fat. Lemons, pickles, grapefruit and grape juice are rather commonly believed to have reducing qualities. They are all good foods, but not in themselves reducing. By substituting low calorie foods, such as fruit juices and salads, for high-calorie foods, you lower the calorie intake and, therefore, lose weight.

There are three essentials for a satisfactory reducing diet. First, the menu must be planned around the protective foods so that you are well fed and draw only on stored fat. You cannot be well fed without fresh fruits and vegetables, dairy products, lean meat and whole-grain bread. Secondly, the high calories foods, like fats, must be cut down so as to allow for a variety of other foods in the menu. Third, have in the menu some foods which give a feeling of satisfaction, like a hot soup or a hot beverage. Every meal should include something hot. Also, there should be some bulky food, such as salad or crunchy biscuit that can be chewed and chewed, and one food like lean meat or cheese, which sticks to the ribs.

Diet Can Work Magic

Most of us go through life looking for magic in one form or another. A 1,000 to 1,200 calorie diet which contains all the protective foods will work real magic.

Ladylike Curtains

Even curtains are feeling the ladylike trend of fashion with the new lace net curtains as gossamer as fine veiling and edged with ruchings and frills. In addition to the usual run of white and cream shades in the fine nets, a delicate pink net is being featured for bedroom windows.

The Good Friend

"Really, Bess, I wish you could have seen the girls' faces when I told them you and George had been invited to the Swaggs' dinner! Especially Mabel Clack's! It nearly killed her. You know how jealous she is, anyway . . . Oh, but she is! . . . Well, I don't care how nice she acts, she'll stick you in the back if she gets a chance . . . I know!

"Now, of course, this is none of my business, and if I weren't so devoted to you I wouldn't mention it, but she said one thing that made me simply furious . . . No, now, I don't want to be a tale bearer . . . Well, will you swear on a stack of Bibles you won't ever breathe it? . . . Well, she sort of intimated that you were a . . . a social climber . . . Yes! . . . No, she didn't say it outright but I knew what she meant . . . Anyway, I took it right up. So I just said, 'Now, look here,, Bess can go anywhere in this town she wants to go. She doesn't have to run after the Swaggs or anyone else.

"What? . . . Oh, they didn't like it very well. But then I'm just that way. Nobody can talk to me about my friends.

"Another one that makes me sick is that Sally Gibber. She hasn't any character, either. And then, after all you've done for her, not to appreciate it any more . . .

"Oh, no, she didn't say anything much—oh, I suppose I really oughtn't to repeat it . . . Well, now, you'll never breathe it to the girls? . . . They'd be simply furious. But I figure it this way—I owe you my first allegiance as a friend. Of course Sally might have meant it all right, but just the same it made me mad. And besides, why should she talk? She hasn't any taste in dress herself.

"What? . . . Well, she just said that . . . well, that she wished you wouldn't wear those large flowered prints so much . . . Well, I just took that up, too. I said, 'Well, I think Bess wears exactly the right clothes for her type. Another thing, she's just too independent to make herself a window mannekin.' I told them that! I said, 'Now Bess is really not interested a great deal in clothes She goes in for more worthwhile things.' . . . What? . . . Oh, they backtracked and tried to say some nice things. But they couldn't fool me!

"Oh, yes, I suppose they do mean all right, but if I were you I wouldn't let myself be used by them. Now the thing that made me maddest of all—but I really had made up my mind not to tell this . . . Oh, I know I can trust you, but, after all, I suppose I'm just butting into something that doesn't concern me, and of course you never get thanked for such things. But then I always figure that I'd want somebody to do the same thing for me. Well, anyway, this upstart, Gracie Pipp, she had the nerve to insinuate that George would—well, that he'd like to step out a little bit . . . Yes, George! Of all people! . . . "No, she didn't say anything definite, but she sort of left the impression that he'd been making eyes at her. Can you beat that!

"Oh, of course she's imagining it! I hope you don't take it seriously. I wouldn't have told you if I'd thought you would . . . But anyway I told her plenty. I said 'Well, I know George is crazy about Bess. He'd never look at another woman.' I was really mad. I said 'George and Bess are my best friends and nobody can say anything about them to me!' Yes, I said that! Rig' out! You know that's one thing about me; I'm loyal to my friends."

Author Gives Slimming Suggestions

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED in taking the low caloric path to slenderness one of the most instructive and amusing books on the subject is "Its More Fun to be Thin," by Jean Z. Owens. With a humorous touch she drives home the notable facts in every reducing schedule—diet, exercise and abstinence, in such chapters as Overcoming the First Hurdle; Assorted Reducing Tips, Mrs. Flutterbrain's Ineffective Diet, and Help for the Working Girl.

This book is written with an open-minded philosophy and gives diets and menus, not only suitable for the dieter but the entire family. The following is a dinner menu which she adapts for the dieter:

Gen. and Mrs. Schley Entertain For 300 at Garden Party

Hostess Wears Frock of Candy-Striped Organdy, Fashioned With Fitted Bodice And Billowing Skirt Drawn in at Waist

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

ONE OF THE BIGGEST social events on yesterday's calendar centered around the service set as the Chief of Engineers, Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, and Mrs. Schley entertained some 300 of their friends at a garden party in their home on Hoban road.

The "red castle," insignia of the Engineer Corps, was on invitations that went out some time ago to officers of the corps and their families in Washington and at Fort Belvoir, where Gen. Schley formerly was in command of the Engineer School. Although the hours were set from 4:30 to 6:30, by the time 5 o'clock rolled around the terrace and garden was filled with guests who lingered on to enjoy the pleasant party.

GEN. AND MRS. SCHLEY received in the drawing room but their guests soon made their way to the garden, where tables were set up and chairs were invitingly scattered about. The hostess wore a frock of candy-striped organdy, fashioned with a fitted bodice and a billowing skirt drawn into the waist with a bright red taffeta sash. A diamond and ruby brooch and sandals of shades to blend with her frock were other attractive accents for her costume.

Pouring tea and punch during the afternoon were a number of Mrs. Schley's friends, including Mrs. Thomas Robins, who was gowned in a blue and white flowered print, worn with a picture hat; Mrs. John Kingman, in navy blue; Mrs. Creswell Garlington, Mrs. Ernest Groves, Mrs. Gordon Russell Young, Mrs. Raymond E. Wheeler and Mrs. Charles P. Gross.

ONE OF THE most stunning ensembles there was worn by Mrs. David H. McCoach, jr., who also presided at the tea table. She had on a full-skirted print frock featuring gay flowers splashed on a white background, and her hat was a wide-brimmed navy blue model tilted becomingly.

Generally assisting were Mrs. William A. Snow and Mrs. David Worshan; also a bevy of young ladies, all of whom were turned out in picturesque frocks, full and floor-length in pastel shades. In the group were the Misses Jean and Ann Kingman, daughters of Brig. Gen. John Kingman, assistant chief of engineers; Miss Sally Garlington, Miss Peggy Worshan, Miss Janice Robb, Miss Nancy Gross and Miss Alice Leahy.

Among the guests were Col. and Mrs. Douglas L. Weart, Mrs. Edgar A. Jadwin, Col. and Mrs. Holland Robb, Maj. and Mrs. W. A. Wood, Capt. and Mrs. Howard Ker, Capt. and Mrs. John R. Noyes, Lieut. and Mrs. Herbert Gee, Lieut. and Mrs. Herbert O. Vogel, Maj. and Mrs. Willis E. Teale, Capt. and Mrs. Frederic Henney, Capt. and Mrs. Gilbert E. Linkswiler, Capt. and Mrs. Charles A. Stewart, Col. Creswell Garlington, Col. and Mrs. Francis K. Newcomer, Col. John W. N. Schulz, Maj. and Mrs. Albert Lane, Capt. and Mrs. James Newman, Col. Stuart Godfrey, Capt. and Mrs. Frank Pirkey, Capt. and Mrs. Howel S. Bishop, Capt. and Mrs. William Baker, Capt. and Mrs. Henry C. Wolfe, Capt. Clifton T. Hunt and dozens of others.

Dinner Honors The Steinhardts

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Oumansky entertained at dinner last night at the embassy in honor of the new United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union and Mrs. Lawrence A. Steinhardt.

Guests were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Mrs. William E. Borah, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Representative Caroline O'Day and Miss Elia O'Day, R. Walton Moore, Counselor of the State Department, and Miss Jennie Moore; Harry Slattery, Undersecretary of the Interior; Francis N. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Sayre, and George S. Messersmith, Assistant Secretary of State.

Also, the Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Herbert Gaston; Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior; Frederic A. Delano, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones, Robert H. Hinckley, Jay Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the European Division of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cherrington, Mr. and Mrs. Loy W. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Charles Spruks, Col. and Mrs. E. R. W. McCabe, Col. Philip Faymonville, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page, jr., John Gunther, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Joseph Driscoll and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Wilson.

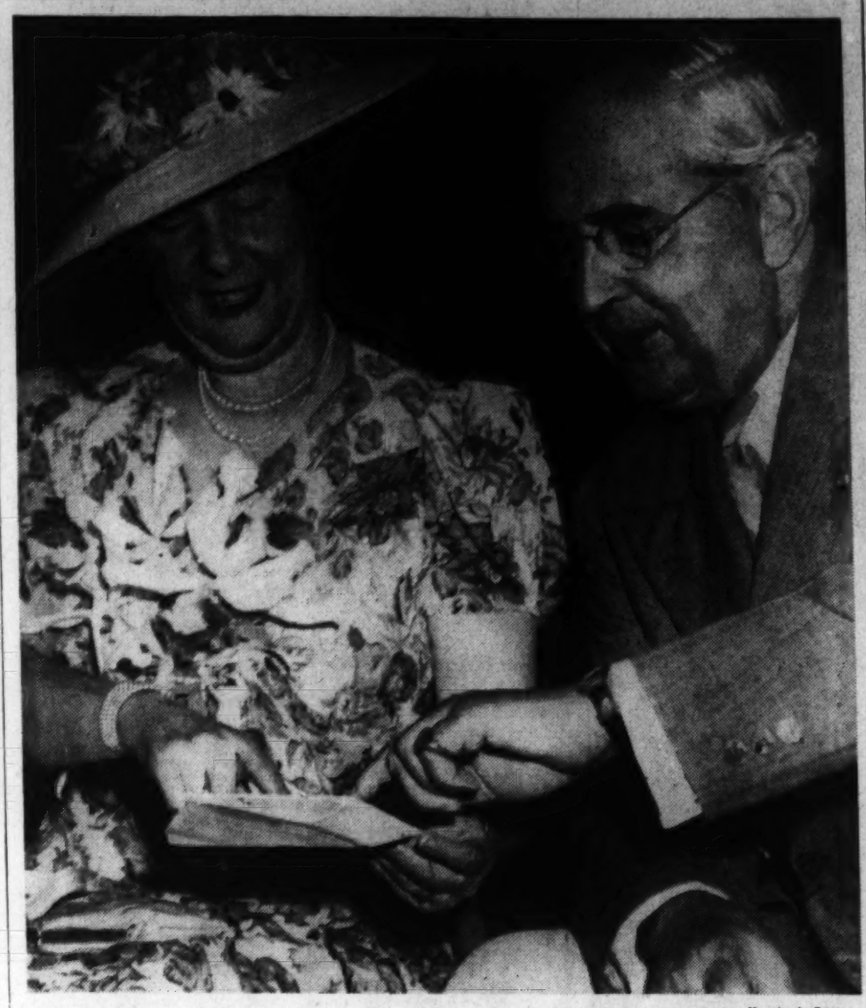
Still others there were the Commissioner General of the U. S. S. R. to the New York World Fair and Mrs. Herman A. Tikhomirnov, V. K. Bogdan and I. Solodov, Acting Consul General of the U. S. S. R. in New York. Members of the Embassy staff present were Dmitri Chuvakhin, First Secretary; the Acting Military Attache and Mrs. Ivan Okunev and Mikhail Gerasimov, Third Secretary.

Mrs. Hull, With Sister, Motors to Staunton

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. William Woodward Cook, left yesterday morning by motor for Staunton, Va., to spend several days.

They will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hays, the latter of whom is their niece.

Guests of Honor At Anniversary Party



Harris & Ewing.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Mrs. Vandenberg were very much the center of every group at the party given yesterday in celebration of their twenty-first wedding anniversary. The hosts were Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken who entertained at their home on Benton place

Arthur Krock, Mrs. Blair Wed

At a simple ceremony at Few Acres, the Roxbury, Conn., home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hoyt Granger, their daughter, Mrs. Granger Blair, and Arthur Krock, Washington correspondent of the New York Times, were married yesterday at noon.

Only members of the family witnessed the wedding, which took place in the library of the Granger home. Bouquets of peonies and fruit blossoms in Chinese vases decorated the room. The Rev. John Grenfell, of New Milford, Conn., officiated, and the Rev. Robert Day, a close friend of the bride's family, delivered the blessing that climaxed the ceremony.

Sons Are Only Attendants

Mrs. Blair's son, Robert Blair, gave her in marriage, and her younger son, William, was ring bearer. She wore a print frock, featuring shades of purple, green and absinthe, and a hat made of primroses with a brim of absinthe straw.

Relatives present included Mrs. Granger Brown with her two sons, Charles E. Brown 3d and Peter Brown, and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Shepherd, of Neenah, Wis., and her daughters, Sarah Frances and Mary Hoyt Cowles.

Following the ceremony there was an informal breakfast, and later the couple left on their wedding trip. They will sail Saturday for Bermuda, where they have taken a house for a month; and later, they hope to go to the West Coast for the remainder of the summer.

To Return Early In October

After October 1, they will be at home in Georgetown at 3206 P street.

Mrs. Krock's first husband was William Mitchell Blair, from whom she was divorced. She came to Washington from Chicago six years ago and has been writing a social column for a local paper since then.

Arthur Krock, who won the Pulitzer Prize in 1938 for an exclusive interview with President Roosevelt, is a native of Kentucky and started his career on the Louisville Courier-Journal. His work in recent years has included many important assignments, including the covering of the Versailles Peace Conference. A widower, he has one son, Thomas Krock.

Alice Tuckerman And Capt. Williams To Wed June 21

Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman of Tuxeden, Bethesda, Md., has completed plans for her marriage to Capt. Robert Williams, U. S. M. C., June 21.

The Washington Cathedral will be the scene of the ceremony which will take place at 4 o'clock. Miss Ruth Hollingsworth Tuckerman, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor, and bridesmaids will include two other sisters, Miss Laura Wolcott Tuckerman and Miss Margaret Cary Tuckerman.

Other attendants will be Miss Emily Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Tuckerman of New York; Mrs. Thomas Adams, of Washington, the former Caroline Cecil; Miss Helen Cresson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Cresson of Philadelphia; Miss Helen MacPherson, daughter of Mrs. Wayne McPherson of New York and a cousin of Chauncey Parker of Washington, and Miss Joan Ellett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ellett of New York.

Capt. Robert E. Hill, U. S. M. C., who like the prospective bridegroom is an aide to Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Commandant of the Marine Corps, will be best man and ushers are the following Marine Corps members: Capt. Samuel B. Griffith, Capt. Jack P. Juhan, Capt. William D. Saunders, Capt. Bankson Holcomb, cousin of Gen. Holcomb; also, Lieut. Hugh M. Elwood, Lieut. Donald MacDonald, U. S. N., and Lieut. James Totten, U. S. A.

Many fetes are being planned in honor of Miss Tuckerman and her fiance. Yesterday, William McComb feted them at a garden tea at the Georgetown home he shares with Gerard Reilly, who will marry Miss Eleanor Fahey in July.

Michael Whyte Weds Miss Klein

The marriage of Michael Donald Whyte, son of Baroness Rene de Kerchove d'Exarde of Chateau Bellen, Ghent, Belgium, to Miss Dorothy Klein, of Detroit and New York, daughter of Mrs. Etta Klein, of Detroit, took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 in Leesburg, Va.

The bride, who attended the University of Michigan, held until recently an executive position with the National Co-ordination Committee for German Refugees. Mr. Whyte, who was graduated from Oxford in 1933, is director of the Whyte Gallery here.

The couple will return to make their home in 1707 H street and expect to vacation in California later in the summer.

Col Read Leaving Today for Tour of U. S.

Col. R. V. Read, Military Attache of the British Embassy, is leaving Washington today and will be away until the end of July. He is making an official tour to Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, El Paso, Tex.; San Antonio, Atlanta and Columbus, Ga.

Col. and Mrs. Cecil To Leave for Cape

Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil will leave on Wednesday for their summer home at Falmouth, on Cape Cod.

They will be visited by Lady Bradford Leslie and Mrs. Russell Bennett, of Washington.

Sarah Miller Is Wed Here

Wearing a gown of white Chantilly lace, Miss Sarah Frances Miller became the bride last evening of John Orville Evans, jr., at All Souls Memorial Church. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Dr. H. H. D. Sterrett. The former Miss Miller is the daughter of Mrs. John Henry Miller, of Chevy Chase, Md., and the late Mr. Miller. Mr. Evans is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Evans, of Washington.

Given in marriage by her brother, John Henry Miller, jr., the bride wore a veil of tulle draped from a tiara of Chantilly lace. Her dress was fashioned with a close-fitting bodice and a skirt of tiered ruffles ending in a fan-shaped train. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. C. F. Groom was her sister's matron of honor. She was attired in a blue embroidered redingote with a full skirt and a natural straw picture hat. Her flowers were Rapture roses. Miss Jeanne Richards, the maid of honor, wore a gown like that of the matron of honor and her bouquet was of the same flowers.

The bridesmaids included Mrs. J. H. Miller, jr., Mrs. W. L. Woodward, jr., Miss Margaret Ward Evans and Miss Margaret Wilson. All wore pink embroidered redingote and natural straw picture hats, and carried blue delphinium.

Robert Hughes Reeside was best man, while the ushers were Samuel Ross Miller, Charles E. Groom, of Chicago; Paul Evans, of New York and Washington; W. L. Woodward, jr., and R. Ernest Covert.

When the couple left for their weding trip, following the reception, the bride was wearing a navy sheer ensemble with matching accessories and a beige twill coat. On their return they will make their home in Chevy Chase, at 4707 Harrison street.

The bride attended the Cathedral School of St. Mary at Garden City, Long Island, and the National Cathedral School for Girls in Washington. The bridegroom, a graduate of Lehigh University, is now studying patent law at George Washington University.

A dinner for the bridal party was given at Pierre's on Tuesday following the wedding rehearsal.

Mrs. Hoyt Arrives From Havana

Mrs. E. Kenneth Hoyt has arrived from her winter home at Havana, and is at the Shoreham for a few days before proceeding to New York and Connecticut. She is stopping over in Washington to see the Danish Minister and Mme. Wadsted, whom she knew during her resident in Buenos Aires, of which city she is a native. Mrs. Hoyt will spend the summer with relatives of her late husband, his sister, Mrs. Gayer Dominick, and Mr. Dominick, and Mr. Hoyt's brother, Oliver C. Hoyt, and Mrs. Hoyt, all of New Canaan, Conn.

Mrs. Hoyt will return to Washington in the fall, as she plans to see Dr. William Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, and Mrs. Mann, who are now in South America. Mrs. Hoyt has in her possession in Cuba the only tame gorilla in captivity. She and her husband captured the gorilla during one of their hunting trips in Central Africa. When captured the animal was only about two months old. It now weighs 400 pounds.

Mrs. Hoyt is traveling by automobile, after flying from Cuba to Miami.

Everybody Agrees Party for Vandenbergs Was Lovely—and Full of Unanimity

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIEES and other pillars of the G. O. P. were a dime a dozen at the tea given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken in honor of Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg. Not a single New Dealer was there to strike a false note—everybody agreed with everybody else, and a lovely time was had by all.

In addition to the distinguished Senator from Michigan, there were Senators Robert Taft, Warren Austin and Warren Barbour; Representative Richard Wigglesworth, Franklyn Waltman, publicity genius of the national committee, and Col. Frederick Payne, Assistant Secretary of War under Herbert Hoover and down from his home in Greenfield, Mass., predicting that "life begins in '40." Mrs. John Gross, whose former home, now the 1925 F Street Club, was a social center in the old days for staunch Republicans; Mrs. Patrick Hurley, wife of Hoover's Secretary of War, were other conservatives present.

MRS MacCRACKEN had rotten luck at the party she gave a month or so ago for the American Bar Association, when torrents of rain spoiled her plans to have it in the garden. So yesterday her husband took a raincoat, umbrella and rubbers to work, as charms to ward off threatening showers. Sure enough, it turned out to be a lovely afternoon and everybody gathered in the large garden behind the MacCracken house on Benton place, coled by the breeze: from Rock Creek Park. Tables, shaded with green and white striped umbrellas, were set up about the lawn, and mint juleps were handed around in true Washington fashion.

The vivacious hostess looked her prettiest in a short print dress and enormous corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Vandenberg, whose twenty-first wedding anniversary was the occasion for the party, got many compliments on her long flowered frock, in which green and red predominated, and which she wore to the British garden party. A broad-brimmed white straw hat with a band of the same material an dtwo enormous white orchids topped off her costume.

Seen here and there: Jouett Shouse, president of the Liberty League, and Mrs. Shouse, who had tried to get tickets for Europe that morning, but found everything booked up, so plan to remain at Wolf Trap for a few more weeks . . . Turner Catledge, of the New York Times, accompanied by pretty Mrs. Catledge . . . Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, in Navy blue with a yhite frill, saying she hoped to make a quick trip abroad with her husband, if Congress adjourns in time, and that she will definitely go to Kentucky next week for a stay, then on to a summer place they have taken at Manchester, Mass. . . . Mrs. Wallach Merriam sitting under an umbrella and talking things over with Mrs. Eldridge Jordan . . . Another Europe-bound, Mrs. William A. Morgan, who sails in July to join her husband there. He will leave later this month to visit Ambassador Joseph Davies in Brussels.

MRS. F. MORAN McCONIHE and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, among the "younger marrieds" . . . Baron Mario Bucovich trying to decide whether Mrs. Warren Barbour or Mrs. Harold Sims was the prettiest woman there . . . The Finnish Minister, Dr. Hjalmar Procope . . . The Netherlands Minister, Alexander Loudon, who sets off early this morning in his station wagon with three servants and a dog for a week at Nonquitt, Mass. (Mme. Loudon and the baby will go by plane tomorrow) . . . Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mrs. George T. Pettingill, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Randall Hagner and dozens of others.

HALF OF WASHINGTON society seems to have moved out into gardens yesterday afternoon. William McComb gave a successful lawn party for Alice Tuckerman and her fiance, Capt. Robert Williams, and all five Tuckerman sisters were there. Others present included Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, in white with a smart black hat; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, Marcia Umbsen, Charles Gaines and loads of others.

Mrs. Vinson to Fete Mary McCormack

Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, wife of Associate Justice Vinson of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, is entertaining at luncheon today in the colonial room of the Wardman Park Hotel, in honor of Miss Mary Tyler McCormack, daughter of Mrs. M. Tyler McCormack, of Kentucky. Miss McCormack, debutante of a few seasons ago, will be married Saturday afternoon to William Wilbur, of Warrenton, Va., at the Washington Cathedral.

Those attending the luncheon will be members of the wedding party and the daughters of the Kentucky members of Congress.

The Araujos Are Hosts at Garden Party

Weather Kind to Brazilian Naval Attache and Wife

By Elizabeth Ford

Giving a garden party these days is a gamble, but the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Lieut. Comdr. Olavo de Araujo, and Mme. Araujo, must have got a winning tip from the Weather Bureau. Their "at home" yesterday couldn't have been more sunny. And the temperature, for once, was really temperate.

Guests, as they being greeted at the door in informal American fashion by their hosts (Mme. Araujo wore an attractive floor-length gown of black, topped with a white starched jacket), spread out on to the white-latticed porch and from there to the garden. For a while the crush around the green and white umbrella and the bar resembled a typical high-season gathering. Then Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, led the way to a cool and less crowded nook, setting a precedent for others at the party.

Mme. Martins Wears Blue

Of guests and dresses: With the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, she in a tucked pastel blue frock, were the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Bocayuva Cunha and Mme. Cunha, who was in pink. Early arrivals also included Admiral Fairfax Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, she in a frock made with a print jacket and white skirt; Capt. Stephen McKinney, former chief of the United States naval mission in Rio, and Mrs. McKinney, and the First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Mario Guimaraes. Coming later were the Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy, Capt. Kanji Ogawa, and Mme. Ogawa, she in native dress; Dr. Leo Rowe, Capt. Earl Piper, Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Holdahl, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Robert Blake, the latter greeting friends from South America in fluent Spanish and then declaring that she spoke it "poquito" (very little).

Witthoeft-Emdens Among the Guests

Still others were the German Naval Attache, Vice Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden and Frau Witthoeft-Emden, who in her white dress looked as cool as a sherbet; the German Military Attache, Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher and Frau von Boetticher; Admiral and Mrs. William G. DuBose, Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Miss Lolita Dawson; Capt. and Mme. Meijer Ranneft, Commander and Mrs. F. J. A. Coleby of the British Embassy, Capt. Jorge Godoy and members of the Argentine naval commission, and Capt. Cugia of Italy.

3 Jewish Women's Societies End Season

Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle, Junior Mizrachi and Hadassah Division Give Luncheon and Banquets

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Three events were held yesterday by local Jewish women's organizations, closing their season's activities. They included the annual donor luncheon of the Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle, at the Mayflower Hotel in the afternoon; the donor banquet of the Junior Mizrachi at the Shoreham Hotel and the final dinner of the Business and Professional Women's Division of Hadassah, at the Ambassador Hotel last night.

Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith addressed the aid circle luncheon at which Mrs. Joseph Cherner presided. There was also a program by the students of Rose Robinson Cohen's Children's Studio of Drama, portraying character from children's books.

Mrs. Simon Berman was chairman of the luncheon committee, and Mrs. A. Moscow, co-chairman.

Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the Zionist Organization of America, addressed the 75 members and guests of the Junior Mizrachi who attended its banquet at the Shoreham. He discussed the importance of the Zionist movement and the value of the special work supported by the Mizrachi group, which provides funds for resettlement in Palestine of girls who are among the refugees from central Europe.

Mrs. J. L. Taishoff, president of the local chapter, presided, and assisting hostesses were Mrs. Esther Tolmach, chairman; Mrs. Bernat Weiss, Mrs. Gerald G. Gross, Mrs. Sol Kraemer and Miss Zelda Wolfe.

Miss Rebecca Rosenblum was installed as president of the Business and Professional Women's Division of Hadassah at its dinner at the Ambassador. Others who were installed with her included Miss Libby Lewis, vice president; Miss Estelle Comen, corresponding secretary; Miss Sophie Temin, recording secretary; Miss Mollie Lazerow, treasurer. The officers were installed by Mrs. Moe Offenberg, president of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah.

Miss Rebecca Levitan was in charge of the program, which included an address by Miss Grace E. Blondheim, past president of the Business and Professional Women's Division of the Baltimore Hadassah; selections by a group of singers from the senior Hadassah here and piano solos by Miss Miriam Madden. Mrs. Sophie Zanoff, retiring president, presided at the banquet.

Soroptimists Hold Final Business Session Of Season but Members to Continue to Meet

THE SOROPTIMIST CLUB held its final business meeting of the season yesterday at the Willard Hotel and plans for summer activities were made which indicate the members expect to meet even if the club doesn't.

Although there is to be the official recess during July and August, members who are not off on vacations will gather informally at 1 o'clock on Wednesdays for luncheon in the Willard Coffee Shop. The social committee is also planning a party June 24, at Camp Bennett, which is named for the late husband of Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the club.

Miss Estelle Zirkin, chairman of the civics committee, reported that hospitalization work for the children of the Emergency Home is being carried on by Children's Hospital. She also announced that books are being assembled for another library to be installed by the club in a District institution the last of this year.

Mrs. Bennett yesterday used the rosewood gavel recently presented to her by Caroline Stephens, one of the club members.

THE THIRTY LOCAL UNITS of the W. C. T. U. yesterday held an all-day outing at Marshall Hall, going by the Wilson Line steamer. Mrs. Ida W. Ramsey is District W. C. T. U. president and Mrs. Mary Cochran was in charge of arrangements. The members took picnic lunches with them.

THE TEMPLE COMMITTEE of the Daughters of America will sponsor a party tomorrow night at the Northeast Masonic Temple. A luncheon, followed by cards, was held there yesterday by Loyalty Council members.

Last night Anacostia Council held a social meeting at 2407 Minnesota avenue southeast, with the program, including motion pictures, in charge of Mrs. Evelyn Sullivan.

Events scheduled later in the season by the organization include a moonlight cruise sponsored by the State council's team on the City of Washington, June 30 and a meeting of the convention committee July 7.

Sigma Kappa Alumnae Hold Dance Tonight

Congressional Club Dinner Monday Closes Season's Activities

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Kappa Sorority will entertain with a dinner dance at the Army and Navy Country Club tonight. This event, together with the dinner meeting at the Congressional Country Club Monday, will close the season's activities.

Zeta Chapter will join the Washington Alumnae at the dinner meeting Monday. Six members of the graduating class of George Washington University will be the guests of honor. They are Alice Bailey, Elizabeth Burnett, Marion Fowler, Barbara Harmon, Marjorie Moorman and Ruth Russell.

Miss Burnett and Miss Harmon are also members of the Mortar Board, and, in addition, Miss Harmon was chosen for the G. W. "Hall of Fame," and is president of the senior class. The Sigma Kappas attained the highest scholarship among the sororities at George Washington University this year.

The following alumnae officers will be installed by Mrs. J. Earl Bassett, retiring president and former District of Columbia tennis champion: President, Mrs. Harlow McCord; vice president, Mrs. Donald Saunders; secretary, Mrs. J. Onsby Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Barton Richwine; registrar, Mrs. Bernard Burdick; Triangle correspondent, Mrs. Augustus S. Goodyear; Panhellenic delegate, Miss Lee Hardell, and alternate, Miss Helen Jones.

The committee on arrangements for the dinner includes Dr. Ella M. A. Enlows, Miss Violet K. Austin and Mrs. Don C. Smith.

The fiftieth international convention of the sorority will be held at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco July 3-7.

In addition to the usual business sessions, the program will include a birthday dinner followed by a reception for grand council, a pearl banquet, a Panhellenic luncheon and a dinner dance.

Members of the sorority will be taken on a trip around the Berkeley campus and also to the World's Fair on Treasure Island. Following the convention there will be a house party at the sorority chapter house.

Kappa Beta Pi Dinner Saturday

Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi Legal Sorority will entertain at dinner Saturday evening at the Shoreham Hotel. Following the dinner, which will be served on the terrace, a short business meeting will be held, after which ten pledges from the Washington College of Law will be initiated. Mrs. Mary Marraffa Wittenmyer, dean of the chapter, will preside at the initiation.

The grand dean, Elizabeth F. Reed, assisted by the grand registrar, Grace Brown Stiles, will install officers for the year 1939-40.

The committee in charge of arrangements consisted of Florence M. McGee, Flora Elliott, Bessie McIntyre, Gertrude Poe and Forraine Hurney.

Edith B. Hayes To Give Report

Mrs. Edith B. Hayes, who has just returned from the international convention of Quota Clubs in New Orleans to which she was delegate from the Montgomery County club, will report on the session tonight at the dinner meeting of the Montgomery group to be held at 6:30 at the Kenwood Country Club. Mrs. Blanche Wyatt Knight, president, and Mrs. Janet W. Lake, represented the Washington Quota Club.

Mrs. Constance Wardle, of Providence, R. I., was elected president of Quota International, succeeding Mrs. Bertha E. Dick, of Buffalo, who was here in the early spring as guest of the Washington and Montgomery County clubs.

Other new officers are Mrs. Clara Mason, Fargo, N. Dak., first vice president; Miss Effie Laudermilke, Bluefield, W. Va., second vice president; Mrs. Eva Leger, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, third vice president; Miss Frances McKillop, Pittsburgh, Pa., was re-elected treasurer. Dr. Mary Powell Northam, Baltimore, Md., and Dr. Hannah Simmons, Worcester, Mass., were elected directors to serve with Mrs. Frances L. Landry, Baton Rouge, and Miss Helen Gragg, Seattle, whose terms hold over.

The Quota International March was played and sung for the first time at the installation banquet. The music was composed by Leslie Van Arsdale, of Seattle, and Mrs. Florence Massey Black, of the Montgomery County Quota Club, wrote the words.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ramsey Steigner is in charge of arrangements for tonight's dinner.

Women to Hear Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt will speak tonight at the banquet climaxing the first day's activities of the ten-State, two-day regional conference being held in New York, at the Hotel Roosevelt, under the auspices of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee. It will be the first time since her husband entered the White House she has spoken at a regional conference of Democratic women.

National Chairman James A. Farley will make the principal banquet address. Labor Secretary Frances Perkins will speak at the closing conference session tomorrow noon, after which the group will adjourn to the World's Fair for luncheon and a tour of the Federal Building. Grover Whalen has declared Friday "Democratic Women's Day" at the fair.

Other conference-bound Washingtonians, all of whom will speak at one or more of the session, include Senator Wagner, of New York; Representative-at-large O'Day, of New York; Representative Norton, of New Jersey; Mrs. Blair Banister, Assistant Treasurer of the United States; Dr. Martha M. Eliot, Assistant Chief, Children's Bureau, Department of Labor; Miss Catherine Bauer, Special Consultant, United States Housing Authority; Mrs. Helen Essary, editor, the Democratic Digest, Women's Division publication; Mrs. Ernest Lindley, wife of The Washington Post columnist and coauthor of "A New Deal for Youth;" Miss Edna Lonigan, vice president, of the Self-Help Exchange; Miss Minnie May Fleming, Washington representative of the League of Nations Association, and Mrs. Howell Moorhead, director of the Foreign Policy Association.

To Be Honored at Dinner

The Venezuelan Envoy, Dr. Diogenes Escalante and Senora de Escalante will be guests of honor this evening at a dinner to be given for them in New York City by the Pan-American Society. The event will take place at the Biltmore Hotel.

The Twig Plans Its June German For Tomorrow

Miss Kathleen Douglass, president of the Twig, junior auxiliary to the Alexandria Hospital Board, is general chairman for the annual June german of that group, to be given on tomorrow night at the Washington Golf and Country Club, Glebe Road. The old German Club hours, 9 to 12, will prevail.

R. H. C. Beverley and Capt. S. Douglas, former leaders in the Alexandria German Club, will lea d figures dancing with officers of the Twig, and favors will be given during the cotillion.

The committee in charge is Miss Douglass, Mrs. Robert W. Wheat, Mrs. Selden Baker, Mrs. Donald King, Miss Frank Wood Smoot, Mrs. C. Marbury Seaman, Mrs. Howard C. Richards, Mrs. Gerald Horine, Mrs. Frank Clarke, Miss Margaret Eggborn and Miss Anna Carrington Stump.

Iota of L. S. D. Holds Initiation

Iota Chapter of Lambda Sigma Delta Sorority held its formal initiation at 7 o'clock last evening at the Carlton Hotel, followed by a dinner. Miss Mary Heine, grand president of the sorority, presented initiation certificates to the three new members, Miss Mary Jane Sterling, Miss Elizabeth Fletcher and Miss Jane Brinkley.

Officers of the chapter who attended the dinner were Mrs. George Burrows, president; Miss Hazel Shipp, vice president; Mrs. Eugene Bourse, secretary; Mrs. Richard Voorhees, treasurer, and Mrs. Roger Musy, goat mistress.

Members of this chapter, who are representatives to the grand council, are Miss Elizabeth Easer, who is grand secretary, and Mrs. Musy.

Miss Dietrich Sails, Leaves $100,000 Bond

Jewels Given to Assure Return for Income Tax Trial on $284,000

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 14.—Marlene Dietrich's luggage was seized on the liner Normandie today, but was released when she gavs up $100,000 worth of jewels as assurance that she would return to face the Government's charge of nonpayment of $284,000 income tax in 1936-37.

Government agents appeared suddenly and had all her vacation finery—except the modish clothes she wore—removed to the pier. There were 34 pieces of luggage.

Finally, after the big liner's departure was delayed 40 minutes, Miss Dietrich sailed with plenty of clothes—but a bit short of brilliants.

The actress' lawyer protested. John T. Cahill, United States Attorney, showed up with four assistants and 20 Federal agents went up the gangplank and then down again.

Least perturbed was Miss Dietrich herself. The German-born actress, who recently became an American citizen, said "it's all a riddle to me."

Miss Dietrich is on her way to Paris with her husband, Rudolph Selber. She was dressed in a gray travel suit and a red fox fur cape.

"This is the first time I am sailing as an American citizen," she said. "So far as I know I have paid my income tax in full each year, and it has been about the same amount, $105,000. As an alien, I had to show that my income tax was paid in order to get a sailing permit."

J. B. McNamara, deputy collector of internal revenue, explained that the Government's claim was based on Miss Dietrich's earnings in England. He said that an alien's income, from either foreign or domestic sources, was subject to taxation and that the Government had no accounting of her British earnings.

He said liens had been filed against Miss Dietrich and her husband, $142,000 each.

Tax Agents Seized Her Luggage

Marlene Dietrich's famous underpinnings were probably unsteady yesterday when Government agents seized her luggage as the German-born actress was about to board the liner Normandie in New York for Europe. Her bags were returned when she gave up $100,000 worth of jewels as assurance that she would return to face charges of non-payment of income taxes

Potomac Synod Also Advises Temperance Teaching to Return National Prohibition

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., June 14.—The return of national prohibition can be attained by local option and temperance education, delegates to the Potomac Synod of the Reformed Church declared in a resolution passed today.

The resolution was adopted after a report of the temperance committee, prepared by the Rev. Oliver Maurer, Ded Lion, Pa.; the Rev. A. M. Gluck, Martinsburg, W. Va.; the Rev. William E. Lampe, Philadelphia; the Rev. Lee J. Peeler, Staunton, Va., and the Rev. B. J. Peeler, Lexington, N. C.

The 300 delegates also were informed of a perpetual endowment fund of $5,000 for the education of young women, presented to the general synod by the Potomac group's Women's Missionary Society. The fund will be available for Hood College, Frederick, and Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C.

Tomorrow's session will be featured by the presence of Dr. Louis W. Goebel, of Chicago, president of the United Evangelical and Reformed Church. At this meeting, the synod will be reorganized in conformity with the recent merger of the Evangelical and Reformed churches.

Names of new officers to serve with the president, the Rev. Ralph E. Hartman, of Frederick, were announced today as follows:

Dr. Charles P. Rice, York, Pa., vice president; the Rev. Joshua Levens, North Carolina, secretary; the Rev. Paul Kehm, Baltimore, reading clerk, and J. Travers Thomas, Frederick, treasurer.

They, with the Rev. Mr. Hartman, who was elected earlier, will serve until the 1940 meeting at Lancaster, Pa.

Zone Protest On Fern Place Project Rejected

Accepting an opinion by Corporation Counsel Seal, the Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday held there was no error in granting Claud Livingston a permit to build 11 single-family dwellings in the 500 block of Fern place northwest.

The permit was protested by the Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association. The association charged the proposed buildings did not comply with the zoning regulations in respect to the side and rear yards, and because of their small size would be detrimental to the neighborhood.

The board heard appeals of seven persons requesting variances from the zoning regulations. The Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association and several property owners near 801 Fern street northwest, objected to the establishment of an educational institution at that address. Harry Wender, representing the Chillum Heights Association, headed a group of Protestants to an appeal to establish a gasoline service station at First and Kennedy streets northwest.

D.C. Britons Renew Pledges to King

The British King's loyal subjects in Washington want this known: They presented Their Majesties a pledge of allegiance and a poem during the recent visit of George VI and Queen Elizabeth. But they want their identity kept secret "lest the significance and beauty of its sentiment be marred by individual publicity."

Their Majesties received the assurance, in form of "a slender booklet whose covers of pure white leather lined with white satin," which "bore the inscription in gold, 'To Their Beloved Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.' On the first page was the royal coat of arms in colors, under which was painted in illuminated Old English 'A Pledge of Allegiance From British Subjects in Washington, D. C.'

State to Enforce Truck Weight Law

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—State Roads Commission Chairman Ezra B. Whitman said today commission employes would begin enforcement of truck weight laws "within a week."

At the same time, Whitman said he questioned whether the 42,000-ton maximum for gross weight of trucks and load was not "too high." Bad condition of several main highways could be blamed on the former commission's three-year failure to enforce the laws prohibiting overloading of trucks, Whitman added. The new commission intends to enforce the statute to the limit, he asserted.

Luray, Va., June 14.—Flag Day exercises were conducted today at the Luray Singing Tower in a joint program of all county organizations and with D. F. Aleshire, president of Luray Chamber of Commerce, presiding.

An historical tableau in charge of Mrs. W. W. Lincoln, and carried out by school children, was presented at 4 o'clock, preceding a carillon recital. An address by Col. T. C. Northcott, 94-year-old donor of the carillon, on "Why I Follow the Flag," was read by E. W. Lauck.

U. of Va. Names Jordan, Ribble Deans of Medicine and Law

Fill Places of Late Dr. Flippim and Dobie New Federal Judge

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., June 14.—Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, announced today the election of Dr. Harvey E. Jordan as dean of the department of medicine to succeed the late Dr. James C. Flippin, and of Prof. Frederick Deane Godwin Ribble to succeed Armistead M. Dobie as dean of the department of law.

Dr. Jordan, professor of histology and embryology, has been a member of the university faculty since 1907. Prof. Ribble joined the faculty of the law school in 1921, and since 1937, when Judge Dobie was forced to take a leave of absence because of illness, has been acting dean of the department.

Dobie resigned a few weeks ago to accept appointment as the second Federal judge in the Western District of Virginia.

Dr. Jordan holds the bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from Lehigh University and received his doctor of philosophy from Princeton. He taught at Cornell University Medical College for two years before coming to Virginia in 1907.

Serving first as adjunct professor, then associate professor of anatomy, he has been professor of histology and anatomy since 1911. He has been acting dean of the department of medicine since the death of Dr. Flippin in February.

The new medical dean is widely known as an authority on anatomy, embryology and histology and is the author of many scientific papers and several volumes, including "War's Aftermath" with David Starr Jordan; of a textbook on histology with Dr. Jeremiah S. Ferguson, and of a textbook on embryology with Dr. James E. Kindred, of the University faculty. He is a member of many scientific and learned societies.

FREDERICK D. G. RIBBLE

of arts degree from William and Mary in 1916, his master of arts from Virginia in 1917, and, after a period of service during the World War in the United States Field Artillery, returned to the university and was graduated in law in 1921.

He became an assistant professor the same year and four years later was made an associate professor and in 1927 a full professor. He spent a year's leave of absence as research fellow at Columbia University in 1931-1932.

The new law dean is an authority on Constitutional law, real property, taxation and legislation. He is the author of the second edition of "Minor or Real Property" and of "State and National Power Over Commerce," in addition to many articles and papers on legal subjects.

Smith and W. T. Birthright were elected to the executive committee, and the names of Drs. M. A. Stohlman, W. Chase and J. Black were selected for presentation to the District Commissioners for appointment to the Board of Dental Examiners.

Jury to Study 'Nazi' Outbreak In Md. School

12 Witnesses Called After Alleged Attack On Jewish Boy

By International News Service.

Baltimore, June 14.—Grand jury investigation of an alleged outbreak of anti-Semitism in Baltimore's Gwynn Falls Junior High School will be launched Friday, State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells announced tonight.

After a conference with Jury Foreman S. Page Nelson, Wells said a dozen witnesses would be called before the jury at its first session.

"All aspects of the entire matter will be placed before the grand jury, he said.

These included:

Charges by Melvin Bridges, 14, Jewish student at the junior high school, that a group of 40 fellow students wearing Nazi swastikas on their sleeves, had seized him last Friday and carved a crude "H" on his neck.

Two charges of assault and one disorderly conduct against Morton Rosen, 19, a nonstudent, as a result of a fight Monday when he went to school assertedly to "protect" Bridge.

Claims by Rosen that Frank Freeze and another teacher at the school had attacked him, one of them wielding a baseball bat.

Reports that a group of boy students at the school had organized a "Nazi" scout movement to terrorize Jewish students.

Brazilians to Tour Naval Academy, Ft. George Meade

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—Six officers of the Brazilian military mission inspecting the United States Army and Navy units will tour the Naval Academy at Annapolis next Tuesday afternoon, Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commander of the Third Corps Area, said today.

The mission, headed by Gen. Goes Montiere, will arrive at Annapolis aboard the U. S. S. Nashville at 2 o'clock and will be met by high Army and Navy officials. Following the tour and review of midshipmen, the group will witness troop maneuvers at Fort George G. Meade.

The Brazilians will remain in this country until July 14.

Open-Shop Front Broken in Harlan

Harlan, Ky., June 14 (AP).—George S. Ward, secretary of the Harlan County Coal Operators' Association, announced today the member coal companies had abandoned their solid front in negotiations over a "union shop" contract with the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) and would negotiate individually.

Ward said the association discharged its three-man committee which had been negotiating intermittently since May 15 with the U. M. W. and that the members were advised to "decide the future for themselves."

President Marvin Delivers Address; Honorary Degrees Are Conferred on 4

Seven hundred and twenty-three George Washington University graduates were urged by President Cloyd H. Marvin to pursue lives based on "courage . . . built from knowledge, faith and imagination," in commencement exercises at Constitution Hall last night.

In the annual graduation charge Dr. Marvin declared, "The first element of courage is knowledge that will bring unity into your several fields of learning . . . the second faith that will make clear the way through the substance of things hoped for." The third element, Marvin added, is "imagination through which you will take the form of things unknown and turn them into useful shapes."

Four honorary degrees were presented by Dr. Marvin. Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, received a doctorate of laws; Dr. Lewis Harvie Taylor, president of Sibley Hospital, master of science in administration; Dr. Francis R. Hagner, genito-urinary specialist, doctor of science; and Dr. William Carl Reudiger, dean of the School of Education, docto rof education.

Alumni achievement awards were presented to five graduates including J. Edgar Hoover, FBI head, and Bishop Karl Morgan Block, of California. Others honored were Fritz von Briesen, New York patent lawyer; Judge C. Rogers Arundell, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals; and Dr. Ella Morgan A. Enlows, Washington physician.

The status of professor emeritus was conferred on seven retiring professors. Besides Dr. Hagner and Reudiger, they were: Paul Bartsch, professor of zoology; George N. Henning, professor of romance languages; George M. Churchill, professor of English history; and Cecil K. Jones, adjust professor of Spanish American literature.

Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of Columbian College, presented the bachelors degrees.

Shenandoah Valley Academy To Be Liquidated

Winchester, Va., June 14.—Shenandoah Valley Academy, 154 years old, will not be reopened this fall.

Steps have been taken in Corporation Court to liquidate outstanding debts against the institution by selling a portion or all of the equipment and realty. The action, styled M. M. Lynch, trustee, vs. R. Gray Williams, etc., trustees for Shenandoah Valley Academy, was instituted when Mr. Lynch was instructed by Mrs. Christine Roszel, widow of Col. Brantz M. Roszel, one-time headmaster of the school, E. B. Timberlake and others, to enforce a deed of trust against the institution.

Obligations outstanding against the school total about $20,000. Of this amount, $15,000 is in first mortgages and $3,000 in second trust liens. The balance is in other obligations which, because of their nature, have been classified by liens.

Six Groups Unite To Study Va. Flora

Mountain Lake, Va., June 14 (AP). A hundred or more botanists will begin tomorrow an intensive study of trees, flowers, shrubs and ferns of the southern Appalachian highlands in connection with a joint meeting of six scientific societies at the Mountain Lake biological station of the University of Virginia.

Joining with the Botanical Society of America, the first to accept the university's invitation to hold its summer meeting at Mountain Lake, 4,000 feet above sea level, will be the American Society of Plant Taxonomists, the Sullivan Moss Society, the American Fern Society, the Southern Appalachian Botanical Club and the committee on flora of the Virginia Academy of Science.

Winchester Boy, Hit By Auto, May Recover

Winchester, Va., June 14.—Jimmy Sardelis, 8-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sardelis, struck by an automobile when he chased a ball across the street near his home, may recover, his physician said.

Police who investigated stated that the accident was unavoidable and said no charge would be brought against Mrs. R. D. Crenhaw, driver of the automobile.

Va. Study Lists Carpenters as Most Jobless

Painters Rank 2nd in State Survey of Over-Worked Trades

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 14.—Carpentering and painting are the most overworked trades in Virginia, according to a survey completed this week under the direction of Thomas B. Morton, State commissioner of labor, in an effort to determine the best vocations for youth to choose.

The check was made for the Virginia co-operative committee on youth migration. Mr. Morton explained, in order to point out the trades in which there is a dearth of jobs.

The study was made from the rolls of applicants for jobs in 18 skillful occupations as listed in the 35 employment service offices of the State. The rolls were tabulated by counties and by the 22 largest cities of the State. Mr. Morton estimates that they represent about two-thirds of the unemployed in the State.

Applicants for jobs as carpenters led all others with a total of 998, followed by those for painting with 628. Machinists, with 398, were third highest.

Others, in order, were electricians, 196; auto mechanics, 165; plumbers, 148, bricklayers, 99; molders, 89; plasterers, 86; blacksmiths, 82; boilermakers, 81; sheet metal workers, 71; machine mechanics, 23; printers, 23; printing pressmen, 22; auto body workers, 24; beauty parlor workers, 3; asbestos workers, 2.

Wife of Briton Reclaims Rights As U. S. Citizen

Two women swore allegiance to the United States in special sessions of Naturalization Court yesterday.

Mrs. Muriel Snively Fenner, of 112 Primrose street, Chevy Chase, a native of New York, regained her citizenship before Justice Luhring. She married Claude Fenner, a British subject, at Suva, Fiji Islands, in 1923, and has been out of the United States most of the time since. The law at the time she was married made her a subject of the British crown but recent changes enabled her to become an American again.

Mrs. Alicia Serrano Reyes Neathery, of 2701 Connecticut avenue northwest, a native of Bogota, Colombia, became a citizen through having been legally living in America since she married Jack B. Neathery, American assistant trade commissioner at Caracas, Venezuela, although she came to this country only last fall. They were married at Bogota, when Neathery was stationed there.

Raspberry Harvest Starts in Western Md.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 14.—Washington County's raspberry harvest got under way today with prospects of a normal crop of 25,000 crates. Yesterday's rain came at a time when the berries, ripening rapidly were in need of moisture. Most of the berries are shipped to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington markets.

Southern Md. Storm Cheers Leaf Growers

Feverish Planting Follows Heavy Rain; Fears of Blue Mold Damage Dispelled

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., June 14.—Whole families—father, mother and the kids—took to the tobacco fields of Southern Maryland today for tobacco planting, made possible for the first time in weeks by last night's soaking rains.

Crop experts at the University of Maryland said they had received reports that on scores of farms, growers worked feverishly to get plants in the ground before dry weather returns.

Meanwhile, Dr. Ernest Walker, plant pathologist of the university's extension service, dispelled fears that Maryland's crop would be damaged by blue mold.

"Tobacco blue mold has been no problem since May 27," he declared. "That date marked the arrival of extreme hot weather, followed by cool weather, which killed the mold."

Walker said the recent hot and dry weather had caused "no particular damage" to tobacco crops, although the yield may be late because of the planting delay.

A survey of the tobacco area revealed some damage from last night's storm, but farmers said the benefits far over-balanced the damage. J. Oscar Brady, a tenant farmer, reported nearly an acre of low-lying tobacco land washed out, in addition to two acres of corn and vegetables.

Bids Asked on Six Md. Road Projects

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—The State roads commission asked bids today on six bridge and road improvement projects in Maryland.

The tenders asked, all to be opened June 27, were for:

Washington County, concrete bridge over Antietam Creek millrace on Boonsboro-Williamsport road.

Allegany County, paving 2 mile of Baltimore avenue in Cumberland.

Harford, paving 3 miles of the Oakington and Chapel roads with macadam.

Carroll, stabilizing with cement 1.1 miles of the Manchester-Pennsylvania State line road.

St. Marys, filling behind Potomac River bulkhead, St. Georges Island.

Miss Dietrich Sails, Leaves $100,000 Bond

Jewels Given to Assure Return for Income Tax Trial on $284,000

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 14.—Marlene Dietrich's luggage was seized on the liner Normandie today, but was released when she gavs up $100,000 worth of jewels as assurance that she would return to face the Government's charge of nonpayment of $284,000 income tax in 1936-37.

Government agents appeared suddenly and had all her vacation finery—except the modish clothes she wore—removed to the pier. There were 34 pieces of luggage.

Finally, after the big liner's departure was delayed 40 minutes, Miss Dietrich sailed with plenty of clothes—but a bit short of brilliants.

The actress' lawyer protested. John T. Cahill, United States Attorney, showed up with four assistants and 20 Federal agents went up the gangplank and then down again.

Least perturbed was Miss Dietrich herself. The German-born actress, who recently became an American citizen, said "it's all a riddle to me."

Miss Dietrich is on her way to Paris with her husband, Rudolph Selber. She was dressed in a gray travel suit and a red fox fur cape.

"This is the first time I am sailing as an American citizen," she said. "So far as I know I have paid my income tax in full each year, and it has been about the same amount, $105,000. As an alien, I had to show that my income tax was paid in order to get a sailing permit."

J. B. McNamara, deputy collector of internal revenue, explained that the Government's claim was based on Miss Dietrich's earnings in England. He said that an alien's income, from either foreign or domestic sources, was subject to taxation and that the Government had no accounting of her British earnings.

He said liens had been filed against Miss Dietrich and her husband, $142,000 each.

Tax Agents Seized Her Luggage

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Marlene Dietrich's famous underpinnings were probably unsteady yesterday when Government agents seized her luggage as the German-born actress was about to board the liner Normandie in New York for Europe. Her bags were returned when she gave up $100,000 worth of jewels as assurance that she would return to face charges of non-payment of income taxes

Local Option Called Step to New Dry Era

Potomac Synod Also Advises Temperance Teaching to Return National Prohibition

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., June 14.—The return of national prohibition can be attained by local option and temperance education, delegates to the Potomac Synod of the Reformed Church declared in a resolution passed today.

The resolution was adopted after a report of the temperance committee, prepared by the Rev. Oliver Maurer, Ded Lion, Pa.; the Rev. A. M. Gluck, Martinsburg, W. Va.; the Rev. William E. Lampe, Philadelphia; the Rev. Lee J. Peeler, Staunton, Va., and the Rev. B. J. Peeler, Lexington, N. C.

The 300 delegates also were informed of a perpetual endowment fund of $5,000 for the education of young women, presented to the general synod by the Potomac group's Women's Missionary Society. The fund will be available for Hood College, Frederick, and Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C.

Tomorrow's session will be featured by the presence of Dr. Louis W. Goebel, of Chicago, president of the United Evangelical and Reformed Church. At this meeting, the synod will be reorganized in conformity with the recent merger of the Evangelical and Reformed churches.

Names of new officers to serve with the president, the Rev. Ralph E. Hartman, of Frederick, were announced today as follows:

Dr. Charles P. Rice, York, Pa., vice president; the Rev. Joshua Levens, North Carolina, secretary; the Rev. Paul Kehm, Baltimore, reading clerk, and J. Travers Thomas, Frederick, treasurer.

They, with the Rev. Mr. Hartman, who was elected earlier, will serve until the 1940 meeting at Lancaster, Pa.

Zone Protest On Fern Place Project Rejected

Accepting an opinion by Corporation Counsel Seal, the Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday held there was no error in granting Claud Livingston a permit to build 11 single-family dwellings in the 500 block of Fern place northwest.

The permit was protested by the Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association. The association charged the proposed buildings did not comply with the zoning regulations in respect to the side and rear yards, and because of their small size would be detrimental to the neighborhood.

The board heard appeals of seven persons requesting variances from the zoning regulations. The Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association and several property owners near 801 Fern street northwest, objected to the establishment of an educational institution at that address. Harry Wender, representing the Chillum Heights Association, headed a group of Protestants to an appeal to establish a gasoline service station at First and Kennedy streets northwest.

D.C. Britons Renew Pledges to King

The British King's loyal subjects in Washington want this known: They presented Their Majesties a pledge of allegiance and a poem during the recent visit of George VI and Queen Elizabeth. But they want their identity kept secret "lest the significance and beauty of its sentiment be marred by individual publicity."

Their Majesties received the assurance, in form of "a slender booklet whose covers of pure white leather lined with white satin," which "bore the inscription in gold, 'To Their Beloved Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.' On the first page was the royal coat of arms in colors, under which was painted in illuminated Old English 'A Pledge of Allegiance From British Subjects in Washington, D. C.'

State to Enforce Truck Weight Law

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—State Roads Commission Chairman Ezra B. Whitman said today commission employes would begin enforcement of truck weight laws "within a week."

At the same time, Whitman said he questioned whether the 42,000-ton maximum for gross weight of trucks and load was not "too high." Bad condition of several main highways could be blamed on the former commission's three-year failure to enforce the laws prohibiting overloading of trucks, Whitman added. The new commission intends to enforce the statute to the limit, he asserted.

County Marks Flag Day In Singing Tower Rites

Luray, Va., June 14.—Flag Day exercises were conducted today at the Luray Singing Tower in a joint program of all county organizations and with D. F. Aleshire, president of Luray Chamber of Commerce, presiding.

An historical tableau in charge of Mrs. W. W. Lincoln, and carried out by school children, was presented at 4 o'clock, preceding a carillon recital. An address by Col. T. C. Northcott, 94-year-old donar of the carillon, on "Why I Follow the Flag," was read by E. W. Lauck.

U. of Va. Names Jordan, Ribble Deans of Medicine and Law

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., June 14.—Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, announced today the election of Dr. Harvey E. Jordan as dean of the department of medicine to succeed the late Dr. James C. Flippin, and of Prof. Frederick Deane Godwin Ribble to succeed Armistead M. Dobie as dean of the department of law.

Dr. Jordan, professor of histology and embryology, has been a member of the university faculty since 1907. Prof. Ribble joined the faculty of the law school in 1921, and since 1937, when Judge Dobie was forced to take a leave of absence because of illness, has been acting dean of the department.

Dobie resigned a few weeks ago to accept appointment as the second Federal judge in the Western District of Virginia.

Dr. Jordan holds the bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from Lehigh University and received his doctor of philosophy from Princeton. He taught at Cornell University Medical College for two years before coming to Virginia in 1907.

Serving first as adjunct professor, then associate professor of anatomy, he has been professor of histology and anatomy since 1911. He has been acting dean of the department of medicine since the death of Dr. Flippin in February.

The new medical dean is widely known as an authority on anatomy, embryology and histology and is the author of many scientific papers and several volumes, including "War's Aftermath" with David Starr Jordan; of a textbook on histology with Dr. Jeremiah S. Ferguson, and of a textbook on embryology with Dr. James E. Kindred, of the University faculty. He is a member of many scientific and learned societies.

FREDERICK D. G. RIBBLE

of arts degree from William and Mary in 1916, his master of arts from Virginia in 1917, and, after a period of service during the World War in the United States Field Artillery, returned to the university and was graduated in law in 1921.

He became an assistant professor the same year and four years later was made an associate professor and in 1927 a full professor. He spent a year's leave of absence as research fellow at Columbia University in 1931-1932.

The new law dean is an authority on Constitutional law, real property, taxation and legislation. He is the author of the second edition of "Minor or Real Property" and of "State and National Power Over Commerce," in addition to many articles and papers on legal subjects.

Besides her husband, she is survived by five children, Charles E., George O., Donald M., James M. and Miss Maxine Freeman; three sisters, Mrs. M. Harry Slinmer, Miss Agnes Cypher, Mrs. Clara Diggs, and one brother, James Cypher, all of New Castle, Pa.

The funeral will be held today at 11:15 a. m., from St. Mary's Catholic Church. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, Alexandria.

District Dental Society Installs Falls as President

The District of Columbia Dental Society installed Dr. W. Marion Falls president Tuesday night at a meeting in the Public Health Service Auditorium, and designated Dr. Daniel F. Lynch to succeed him as president-elect. The retiring president was Dr. James W. Brown.

DR. FALLS

Dr. Falls is a native of Washington, graduate of Central High School and Georgetown University Dental School.

Dr. Philip Robin was elected vice president, and Dr. J. Walter Bernhard, secretary treasurer. Dr. E. T. Lane was re-elected chairman of the publications committee and Dr. Paul Hoffman chairman of the oral hygiene committee for three-year terms. Drs. George R. Ellis, W. L. Smallwood, A. G. Miller, C. L. Smith and W. T. Birthright were elected to the executive committee, and the names of Drs. M. A. Stohlman, W. Chase and J. Black were selected for presentation to the District Commissioners for appointment to the Board of Dental Examiners.

Jury to Study 'Nazi' Outbreak In Md. School

By International News Service.

Baltimore, June 14.—Grand jury investigation of an alleged outbreak of anti-Semitism in Baltimore's Gwynn Falls Junior High School will be launched Friday, State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells announced tonight.

After a conference with Jury Foreman S. Page Nelson, Wells said a dozen witnesses would be called before the jury at its first session.

"All aspects of the entire matter will be placed before the grand jury, he said.

These included:

Charges by Melvin Bridges, 14, Jewish student at the junior high school, that a group of 40 fellow students wearing Nazi swastikas on their sleeves, had seized him last Friday and carved a crude "H" on his neck.

Two charges of assault and one disorderly conduct against Morton Rosen, 19, a nonstudent, as a result of a fight Monday when he went to school assertedly to "protect" Bridge.

Claims by Rosen that Frank Freeze and another teacher at the school had attacked him, one of them wielding a baseball bat.

Reports that a group of boy students at the school had organized a "Nazi" scout movement to terrorize Jewish students.

Brazilians to Tour Naval Academy, Ft. George Meade

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—Six officers of the Brazilian military mission inspecting the United States Army and Navy units will tour the Naval Academy at Annapolis next Tuesday afternoon, Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commander of the Third Corps Area, said today.

The mission, headed by Gen. Goes Montiere, will arrive at Annapolis aboard the U. S. S. Nashville at 2 o'clock and will be met by high Army and Navy officials. Following the tour and review of midshipmen, the group will witness troop maneuvers at Fort George G. Meade.

The Brazilians will remain in this country until July 14.

Open-Shop Front Broken in Harlan

Harlan, Ky., June 14 (AP).—George S. Ward, secretary of the Harlan County Coal Operators' Association, announced today the member coal companies had abandoned their solid front in negotiations over a "union shop" contract with the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) and would negotiate individually.

Ward said the association discharged its three-man committee which had been negotiating intermittently since May 15 with the U. M. W. and that the members were advised to "decide the future for themselves."

President Marvin Delivers Address; Honorary Degrees Are Conferred on 4

Seven hundred and twenty-three George Washington University graduates were urged by President Cloyd H. Marvin to pursue lives based on "courage . . . built from knowledge, faith and imagination," in commencement exercises at Constitution Hall last night.

In the annual graduation charge Dr. Marvin declared, "The first element of courage is knowledge that will bring unity into your several fields of learning . . . the second faith that will make clear the way through the substance of things hoped for." The third element, Marvin added, is "imagination through which you will take the form of things unknown and turn them into useful shapes."

Four honorary degrees were presented by Dr. Marvin. Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, received a doctorate of laws; Dr. Lewis Harvie Taylor, president of Sibley Hospital, master of science in administration; Dr. Francis R. Hagner, genito-urinary specialist, doctor of science; and Dr. William Carl Reudiger, dean of the School of Education, docto rof education.

Alumni achievement awards were presented to five graduates including J. Edgar Hoover, FBI head, and Bishop Karl Morgan Block, of California. Others honored were Fritz von Briesen, New York patent lawyer; Judge C. Rogers Arundell, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals; and Dr. Ella Morgan A. Eplows, Washington physician.

The status of professor emeritus was conferred on seven retiring professors. Besides Dr. Hagner and Reudiger, they were: Paul Bartsch, professor of zoology; George N. Henning, professor of romance languages; George M. Churchill, professor of English history; and Cecil K. Jones, adjust professor of Spanish American literature.

Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of Columbian College, presented the bachelors degrees.

Shenandoah Valley Academy To Be Liquidated

Winchester, Va., June 14.—Shenandoah Valley Academy, 154 years old, will not be reopened this fall.

Steps have been taken in Corporation Court to liquidate outstanding debts against the institution by selling a portion or all of the equipment and realty. The action, styled M. M. Lynch, trustee, vs. R. Gray Williams, etc., trustees for Shenandoah Valley Academy, was instituted when Mr. Lynch was instructed by Mrs. Christine Roszel, widow of Col. Brantz M. Roszel, one-time headmaster of the school, E. B. Timberlake and others, to enforce a deed of trust against the institution.

Obligations outstanding against the school total about $20,000. Of this amount, $15,000 is in first mortgages and $3,000 in second trust liens. The balance is in other obligations which, because of their nature, have been classified by liens.

Six Groups Unite To Study Va. Flora

Mountain Lake, Va., June 14 (AP). A hundred or more botanists will begin tomorrow an intensive study of trees, flowers, shrubs and ferns of the southern Appalachian highlands in connection with a joint meeting of six scientific societies at the Mountain Lake biological station of the University of Virginia.

Joining with the Botanical Society of America, the first to accept the university's invitation to hold its summer meeting at Mountain Lake, 4,000 feet above sea level, will be the American Society of Plant Taxonomists, the Sullivan Moss Society, the American Fern Society, the Southern Appalachian Botanical Club and the committee on flora of the Virginia Academy of Science.

Winchester Boy, Hit By Auto, May Recover

Winchester, Va., June 14.—Jimmy Sardelis, 8-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sardelis, struck by an automobile when he chased a ball across the street near his home, may recover, his physician said.

Police who investigated stated that the accident was unavoidable and said no charge would be brought against Mrs. R. D. Crenhaw, driver of the automobile.

Va. Study Lists Carpenters as Most Jobless

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 14.—Carpentering and painting are the most overworked trades in Virginia, according to a survey completed this week under the direction of Thomas B. Morton, State commissioner of labor, in an effort to determine the best vocations for youth to choose.

The check was made for the Virginia co-operative committee on youth migration. Mr. Morton explained, in order to point out the trades in which there is a dearth of jobs.

The study was made from the rolls of applicants for jobs in 18 skillful occupations as listed in the 35 employment service offices of the State. The rolls were tabulated by counties and by the 22 largest cities of the State. Mr. Morton estimates that they represent about two-thirds of the unemployed in the State.

Applicants for jobs as carpenters led all others with a total of 998, followed by those for painting with 628. Machinists, with 398, were third highest.

Others, in order, were electricians, 196; auto mechanics, 165; plumbers, 148, bricklayers, 99; molders, 89; plasterers, 86; blacksmiths, 82; boilermakers, 81; sheet metal workers, 71; machine mechanics, 23; printers, 23; printing pressmen, 22; auto body workers, 24; beauty parlor workers, 3; asbestos workers, 2.

Wife of Briton Reclaims Rights As U. S. Citizen

Two women swore allegiance to the United States in special sessions of Naturalization Court yesterday.

Mrs. Muriel Snively Fenner, of 112 Primrose street, Chevy Chase, a native of New York, regained her citizenship before Justice Luhring. She married Claude Fenner, a British subject, at Suva, Fiji Islands, in 1923, and has been out of the United States most of the time since. The law at the time she was married made her a subject of the British crown but recent changes enabled her to become an American again.

Mrs. Alicia Serrano Reyes Neathery, of 2701 Connecticut avenue northwest, a native of Bogota, Colombia, became a citizen through having been legally living in America since she married Jack B. Neathery, American assistant trade commissioner at Caracas, Venezuela, although she came to this country only last fall. They were married at Bogota, when Neathery was stationed there.

Raspberry Harvest Starts in Western Md.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 14.—Washington County's raspberry harvest got under way today with prospects of a normal crop of 25,000 crates. Yesterday's rain came at a time when the berries, ripening rapidly were in need of moisture. Most of the berries are shipped to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington markets.

Southern Md. Storm Cheers Leaf Growers

Feverish Planting Follows Heavy Rain; Fears of Blue Mold Damage Dispelled

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., June 14.—Whole families—father, mother and the kids—took to the tobacco fields of Southern Maryland today for tobacco planting, made possible for the first time in weeks by last night's soaking rains.

Crop experts at the University of Maryland said they had received reports that on scores of farms, growers worked feverishly to get plants in the ground before dry weather returns.

Meanwhile, Dr. Ernest Walker, plant pathologist of the university's extension service, dispelled fears that Maryland's crop would be damaged by blue mold.

"Tobacco blue mold has been no problem since May 27," he declared. "That date marked the arrival of extreme hot weather, followed by cool weather, which killed the mold."

Walker said the recent hot and dry weather had caused "no particular damage" to tobacco crops, although the yield may be late because of the planting delay.

A survey of the tobacco area revealed some damage from last night's storm, but farmers said the benefits far over-balanced the damage. J. Oscar Brady, a tenant farmer, reported nearly an acre of low-lying tobacco land washed out, in addition to two acres of corn and vegetables.

Bids Asked on Six Md. Road Projects

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—The State roads commission asked bids today on six bridge and road improvement projects in Maryland.

The tenders asked, all to be opened June 27, were for:

Washington County, concrete bridge over Antietam Creek millrace on Boonsboro-Williamsport road.

Allegany County, paving .2 mile of Baltimore avenue in Cumberland.

Harford, paving 3 miles of the Oakington and Chapel roads with macadam.

Carroll, stabilizing with cement 1.1 miles of the Manchester-Pennsylvania State line road.

St. Marys, filling behind Potomac River bulkhead, St. Georges Island.

Nats Take First Shutout Of Season

Knuckle-Baller Holds Chicago To Four Hits as Mates Look Human

By Shirley Povich.

A strange-looking Washington ball team, bearing no resemblance to the jittery, inept club that watched the runs go by in the West, put together nine innings of superlative baseball to lick the White Sox yesterday, 3 to 0.

The key figure in the transformation of the Nats was Dutch Leonard, the big, baldish fellow with the knuckle ball: Leonard pitched Washington's first shut-out victory of the season at the White Sox, who didn't make their second hit of the afternon until the seventh inning. It was a four-hit job that Leonard did on the Sox, who had licked the Nats seven times in eight previous encounters.

But more amazing even than Leonard's shut-out pitching was the collective performances of the Nats in the field. Taft Wright and George Case, whose defensive play has sent Washington fans from the park muttering, acted like composites of all the great outfielders of history yesterday, with fancy catches in the clutch.

Lewis Stars Afield

And Buddy Lewis, the young man whose bat alone has been keeping him in the big leagues this season, was performing on the brilliant side in the field yesterday. He went behind third base for one hard smash to start a double play a la Bluege in his salad days, and close perusal of the box scare reveals nary a Washington error.

For the 4,000 fans, the Nats presented a couple of new characters in Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth and First Baseman Bob Pritchard and the debuts of that pair were not exactly a flop. Young Bloodworth waded into the first pitch he saw and banged it high against the leftfield wall for a two-bagger, and Pritchard, although hitless, speared a smoking line drive with his mitt hand to provide the fielding feature of the day.

For six innings, a centerfield single by Mike Kreevich stood as the only hit permitted by Leonard who was serving up his knuckler with such effect that only two White Sox drew walks. When there were signs of trouble for Leonard, the Nats unfailingly came up with a gem of a play behind him.

Shoestring Catch

George Case streaked in for a shoestring catch of Bejma's line drive in the third inning, and in the fifth, after Leonard had walked Kreevich, Lewis dug a double-play ball off McNair's bat into the dirt and with the help of Bloodworth and Pritchard choked off a White Sox rally. In the seventh, with the top of the White Sox batting order up, young Pritchard grabbed Kuhel's terrific smash toward rightfield with a leaping dive toward the foul line to discourage that uprising.

The only time during the game when the Sox had two on base was in the eighth when Kreevich beat out a bunt and Rensa walked with one out, but Pinch Hitter Marcum flied out and Lewis disposed of Bejma. And in the ninth after Walker singled with one out, Taft Wright hauled down a drive off Radcliff's bat that was labeled "triple."

Third Inning Victory

The Nats actually won the ball game in the third inning when they packed three of their six hits of the game into one session. J. Duncan Rigney who gave valiant battle to Leonard, was slow in scrambling after Estauella's bunt and the Cuban beat it out for a hit. Whereupon Buddy Lewis rammed a two-bagger against the right field wall and Cecil Travis singled to left, and the Nats had a 2-0 lead.

Estalella also figured in the Nats' third run, but Taft Wright provided the driving force of that score. It happened in the fifth inning. Estalella walked with one out and was forced at second by Buddy Lewis. Then Wright, hitless to this point, pounded a lengthy three-bagger into the centerfield corner to usher Lewis home.

Old 'Money' Pitcher To Scout for Mackmen

Philadelphia, June 14 (AP).—Charles Albert (Chief) Bender, looked upon by Connie Mack as his greatest "money" pitcher in the galaxy of star twirlers the Athletics' manager has handled in his long career, is to scout for his former boss.

He will assist Ira Thomas, one of Bender's old catches, in looking over prospective talent in the minors.

G. U. Pair Shoot Twin 72s to Lead

Greiner, Brownell, Defending Champ And Runner-Up, Fail to Qualify

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

While the defending champion, a former titleholder and last year's runner-up were posting scores too high for the first flight in one of the biggest upset days in local golf history, a pair of Georgetown collegians, Billy Shea and Buddy Sharkey, tied for the medal in the thirty-fifth annual Middle Atlantic Amateur championship yesterday at Chevy Chase.

With a perfect day and a perfect course greeting the field of 69, Otto Greiner, the champion from Rodgers Forge; Brownell, '38 finalist and co-favorite from Manor; Harry Pitt, a former champion from Manor, and Volney Burnett, Indian Spring, all found enough trouble to be well over the qualifying limit of 77. In addition, Russ Hollebaugh, Charles Malone, Bart Yount, and other potential first-flighters were posting scores over the championship flight total.

Sharkey, Indian Spring Club champion, was out in 36 with all pars but the seventh, and on the back nine missed regulation figures on 11, 14 and 16, but dropped his first birdie of the day on the seventeenth. His drives were inconsistent but good second shots and recoveries netted the comedalists' score.

Out in 37

Shea was out in 37, missing par on the first and ninth holes, and back in 35, with all pars but the last hole, where his drive was in the rough. He played consistent golf, holing no long putts, but after getting in trouble on the seventeenth with poor second and third shots the 1937 champ pulled out by knocking a 30-foot chip shot in the cup for a par.

Page Hufty, newly-crowned host club champion, and M. Parker Nolan, medalist in the Chevy Chase invitation last year, dropped sizeable putts for a par and birdie, respectively, on the seventeenth and needed pars on the last hole to create a three-way tie for the medal. They were both short in two, chipped past and missed coming back for 73's.

Ralph Bogart, taking 7 on the seventeenth, where par would have netted the medal, was in the 74 group that included Max Taylor, Manor, who had a good chance for the medal until the thirteenth hole, and Ed Steinbert, Rodgers Forge.

Rolling Road's Maryland State two-ball champions S.pencer Overton and E. G. Barnes, each had 75's. Louis Fuchs, Congressional, also hit the 75 mark. One of the tournament favorites, Roger Peacock, Indian Spring, led the 76's that included Columbia's Earle

Averill Traded To Detroit For Eisenstat

Cleveland Secures Unannounced Sum Of Cash in Deal

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 14.—Baseball's David Harums sent Earl Averill, Cleveland outfielder, who has a lifetime big league batting average of .322, to the Detroit Tigers today for Southpaw Harry Eisenstat and a wad of greenbacks—and threw in a couple of lesser deals for good measure.

Immediately there was speculation as to whether the Indians would beat the major league trading deadline of midnight tomorrow and sell Eisenstat down the river to the St. Louis Browns for Second Baseman Don Heffner, long coveted by the Tribe.

Option Outfielder

The Browns optioned Outfielder Rupert Thompson today to Newark, of the International League—a deal said to have no connection with St. Louis' purchase yesterday of Joe Gallagher, Newark's hard-hitting outfielder.

In another deal the Louisville Colonels, of the American Association, purchased Leroy Parmelee, veteran right-hand pitcher, from the Philadelphia Athletics.

C. C. Slapnicka, Cleveland vice president, said the Indians still were trying to obtain infield strength—they had too many outfielders until they traded Averill—and remarked "Well, if we can't get anybody, we have a couple of good boys over in Buffalo we can bring up."

He referred to Ray Mack, second baseman, and Louis Boudreau, shortstop for the International League club managed by Steve O'Neill.

Asked to Be Traded

"If I had to leave Cleveland, I would rather go to Detroit than any other club," said Averill, who asked to be traded to the Tigers several months ago when he was a holdout.

Averill, a left-handed batter, has been a member of all five American League All-Star teams, and came to Cleveland in 1928 from San Francisco of the Pacific Coast League at a reported price of $50,000.

Pitcher Eisenstat won nine games and lost six with Detroit last year and has broken even in four decisions this season. He is 23 years old and went to Detroit from Brooklyn of the National League. The amount of cash accompanying him to Cleveland was undisclosed.

Miss Holm Free, But Court Hinders Wedding Plans

Los Angeles, June 14 (AP).—Swimmer Eleanor Holm is free to marry, but Billy Rose will not be able to marry her before October 27.

Miss Holm said in New York today she and Billy would step up to the altar Sepptember 19, a day after Billy's divorce from Fanny Brice becomes final. Art Jarrett's divorce from Eleanor was entered here yesterday, four days after it became final.

Los Angeles court records show Miss Brice divorced Rose last October 27. A full year must elapse before the decree becomes final.

Reds Obtain Corner On Cuban Players

Government Signs Agreement to Send Promising Rookies to Cincinnati Camp

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 14.—Already holding a "corner" on National League pennant talk, the Cincinnati Reds announced today they had obtained a monopoly on the importation of baseball talent from Cuba.

General Manager Warren C. Giles said the Cuban government, in effect, had joined the Reds' scouting forces and agreed to send four "most promising" rookies annually to the team's training camp at Tampa, Fla., with all expenses paid.

Cuban authorities advised, said Giles, that at least two potential big-leaguers already were earmarked for a tryout in 1940, when the agreement becomes effective.

By its terms, neither the club nor a player assumes contract obligations. The Reds guarantee merely to give each rookie a thorough trial and the rookie, in turn, would be directed only to give his benefactors first claim to his services.

Giles said the arrangement resulted from Cuba's appreciation of numerous opportunities to "make good" granted by the Reds to island athletes over a period of years.

The precedent-making plan, effected after months of negotiation, fired the imagination of older fans who recalled immediately such names as Armando Marsans, Rafael Almeda Manuel Cueto, gold-toothed Mike Gonzales and perhaps the most colorful Cuban of them all, Adolf Luque.

Marsans was an outfielder, Almeda a third baseman; the diminutive Cueto could catch or shag flies

Browns Get 'Relief Funds' From Backers

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 14.—Major stockholders of the St. Louis Browns, disappointed at the team's poor showing, both artistically and financially, have subscribed a fund of $100,000 to give the club resources to strengthen itself.

An informed source disclosed today that the Browns' 10 directors, all wealthy business men, met last week and kicked in $5,000 each to refill the team's diminished treasury. President Donald L. Barnes then added an additional $50,000.

Barnes was reported to have told the directors if they had any complaints or any criticism to offer "now is the time to speak up." Instead, there was a vote of confidence

Rally in 9th By Indians Beats Yanks

Feller Bests Champs As Mates Slug Murphy; Hemsley Hurt

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 14.—Rallying three runs in the ninth inning, the Cleveland Indians gave Bobby Feller his tenth victory of the season, 4 to 2, today after two unearned runs nearly took it away.

The Cleveland youngster, poised as a veteran, gave only two hits until the eighth, when two more singles, a walk, and an error by Catcher Rollie Hemsley accounted for New York's runs.

After Cleveland had been given the lead in the fourth on a single and three walks by Monte Pearson, forcing in a run, Feller passed Pinch Hitter Charley Keller to open the eighth. Frank Crosetti popped up, Red Rolfe singled Keller to third. Then Tom Henrich lifted a short fly to rightfield and Bruce Campbell cut off Keller at the plate only to have Hemsley muff the throw. Joe DiMaggio singled Rolfe home.

Johnny Murphy went to the mound for the Yankees in the ninth and was promptly touched for a single, a walk, a single and a double by Ben Chapman, his third hit of the day, to put Cleveland in front again.

Murphy was charged with the loss and Feller regained the victory, although removed for a pinch hitter during the rally. Lefty Al Milnar finished for Cleveland, giving one

Lou Keeps Initial Mayo Clinic Date; To Stay 4 Days

By the Associated Press

Rochester, Minn., June 14.—Relaxed somewhat by an uneventful initial date with the Mayo Clinic, Lou Gehrig, veteran New York ankee star, here for a physical check-up, settled down tonight for at least a four-day stay.

The big slugger toured the first section of the clinic inspection line today and was given a number for future reference and a large collection of envelopes used by the famous institution in directing patients to various units.

During the afternoon he called on a former Yankee playing comrade—Julian Wera—and clowned around with a meat saw and a leg of beef while the photographers reaped a harvest.

Wera, who played third base for the Yankees back in 1926 and 1927, when Gehrig and Babe Ruth were burning up the American League, runs a butcher shop here. He retired from baseball several years ago because of a leg injury.

After the session at the clinic, Gehrig told reporters: "I don't know any more than when I started. All I know about what's happened today is that I have a pockt full of envelopes."

(News Item: Cincinnati Reds gain "monopoly" on Cuban ball players in pact with Havana government.)

Four of Cuba's best ball players are already ear-marked for tryouts with the Reds in 1940, and big league baseball may experience its first international repercussions. Certainly Clark Griffith, numbering powerful Congressional big-wigs among his friends, will be in no mood to permit another big league club to monopolize his own favorite preserves in the banana republics.

POVICH

"They can't do this to us," was Griffith's first comment last night when advised of the agreement between Warren Giles, general manager of the Reds, and the Cuban government. "I've got friends in Congress, and I may take it up, too, with my good friend, Senor Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, the Cuban Ambassador."

Griffith was not visibly alarmed by news of the Cincinnati-Havana pact, pointing out that Roberto Estalella was the only Cuban ball player to make good in the big leagues in the last 15 years. He said he didn't know just how the arrangement between the Reds and the bosses of Cuba could be obviated, but said he had heard of such things as a duty on foreign imports.

Will Brush Up on the Law

"That might be a way to stop it, or at least insure fair competition," suggested Griffith. "Put a duty on these Cubans, and make the American teams bid for 'em. Giving one club a monopoly is unfair. The Cuban government hasn't any right to take a hand in this baseball business. I'll have to read up on international law."

Greatest blow to Griffith was the explanation that the Cuban government had chosen the Reds as its major league outlet for Cuban ball players because of the Reds' partiality toward Cuban players in the past. Pointed out was the fact that the five Cuban big leaguers B. E. (before Estalella), had all been signed by the Cincinnati team.

"That," said Griffith, "is so much nonsense. That Cincinnati club and every other team in the big leagues forgot about Cuban ball players 15 years ago. They didn't even give Cubans any consideration as big leaguers until I sent my scouts to Cuba three or four years ago. The Washington club not only gave the only Cuban now in the big leagues his chance, but in our farm system we have a half dozen or more Cubans we're grooming for the majors.

"Sure, the Reds signed Mike Gonzales and Adolf Luque back there several years ago, but which club has been giving the Cubans a chance ever since? Washington, that's who. If Cuba owes any big league club a debt, it owes it to the Washington club."

Introduced First Cubans

Then, uttering a cry of pain, Griffith suddenly recalled that it was through his own offices that the influx of Cuban ball players to the Cincinnati Reds began, back in 1909. "By sin," said the Nats' owner, "they don't owe that debt to the Reds, they owe it to me.

"I was the manager of the Cincinnati club back in 1909 and was the first man to bring a Cuban into the big leagues. In fact, I brought two Cubans in that season, and that's what started 'em a-comin'.

"We had a traveling secretary with the Cincinnati club who was spending his vacation in Cuba and telegraphed me that he had seen a big-league prospect in a third baseman named Rafel Almeda. He wanted permission to sign him, and I wouldn't give it to him. Finally, he pestered me with cables until as a personal favor I told him to bring Almeda to Cincinnati for a tryout.

"He showed up not with one Cuban, but with two. He had Almeda in tow and another Cuban named Armando Marsans. This fellow was Almeda's valet, or interpreter or a combination of both. Anyway, it seems that Almeda wouldn't come to the United States unless he could bring Marsans along.

The Matador Is a Flop

"Well, I told Almeda to put on a uniform and when he came on the field darned if his interpreter didn't have on a uniform, too. Almeda looked pretty good at bat, but he couldn't field. We called him 'The Matador.' Every time he'd make a hit and run it out, he'd call time and make a deep bow to the grandstands—bullfighter stuff.

"This other fellow, Marsans, spoke only for Almeda. He didn't have anything to say for himself. He'd get out there and shag flies all day while Almeda was getting a few hits and making his bows. I finally saw Almeda wouldn't do. He just wasn't a big leaguer.

"But that interpreter, Marsans, he's the fellow I did sign. And he turned out to be a fine big league outfielder. He was in the National League for eight or nine years with Cincinnati and the Giants, but the Matador slipped back to the minors and then back to Cuba."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 14.—In the steamy crevices of his wondrous mind, Joe Louis is toying with the notion of trying to knock out Tony Galento in one punch, and break Jack Dempsey's old record of a 17-second kayo. Dempsey catapulted out of his corner late one afternoon at Harrison Field, Newark's old Federal League ballyard, slid under Fred Fulton's fishingpole jab, started a left hook down around his knees, hit Fulton's pimple and knocked him out.

CONSIDINE

It had taken seven seconds for Jack to duck Fulton's jab, get set, and land the punch. Ten more seconds were needed to count out the prostrate plasterer. (Special insert by Prof. Albert Einstein: 10 plus 7 equals 17.)

Louis' most violent early-foot, to date, was his 26-second knockout of Eddie Simms in Cleveland. He too used a left hook—only one, and when they dragged Simms away Edward was bellowing to a lot of imaginary women and children to run for their lives. He thought the roof had fallen.

Louis made a mistake in the Simms fight that cost him the record. He circled twice around Eddie before letting the punch go. Joe isn't as cautious these days. He seems to think Galento is going to come rushing into him, wide open and swinging a punch, and if Tony does that droll little deed Joe thinks that maybe it could be an 11-second kayo. He's afraid that if he has to circle Tony the fight might run into extra innings.

Reynolds Bets Joe Will Kill Tony

That's the interesting part about the Louis-Galento fight. Nobody is worrying over the outcome, but there has been terrific debate about the by-products of the fight. Quentin Reynolds would like to bet that Louis kills Galento. He wants 100-to-1. Several other distinguished experts will offer even money that Joe hits Tony at least four times while Tony is swinging that first bar-room left. Several knaves are making book on what kind of beer—light or dark—spurts from Tony's pores when Joe lands his first good one.

Louis himself is interested in his hitting average. He "hit" .389 in his fight against Baer and his second fight against Schmeling. "Ah counted 'em," he told us yesterday at Pompton Lakes, while taking a sun-bath in the front yard of the old brick mansion where George Washington once slept. "Ah hit Max Baer 252 times and missed him only twice. Ah hit Max Schmellen 41 times and missed him only once. I got it figured up. That's 290 hits outta 293 punches. Nine eighty nine, if ah was a ball player."

Joe sighed. "Bet you Joe DiMaggio'd like a average like that," he thoughtfully added.

Joe thinks his average would be higher if somebody had helped him keep track of the hits he made off John Henry Lewis. "Ah ain't missed him yet, I don't think." Joe said, his quick voice trailing off into a cheerless chuckle.

Louis' Hands Can Take It

Louis' Louisville sluggers, his hands, are perhaps his greatest asset. They are like big thick-ribbed fans, without the webbing. That part of his hand where the thumb fits in its socket is twice as thick as the normal big man's paw. Many of the great hitters were handicapped by brittle hands. Nature didn't intend man to put as much of a shock on the small bones of the hands as heavy fighting demands. Fitzsimmons' great shoulders and biceps were always propelling his fists at a rate of speed too great for the fists to absorb the shock of collision with the bones of the other guy. Louis, more active than any heavyweight since Sullivan, was born with dukes that could take it, as well as give it.

He has two hand aces that bother him slightly, but not enough to slow him down. Both are in his right, which he uses perhaps one-twentieth as much as his left. On the back of his right, down near where the hand joins his supple wrist, lies a bump that will never smooth out. He got it hitting Primo Carnera on the jaw—but then you should have seen Carnera. The knuckles of the little finger and the ring finger of his right also are tender. He hurt them against Tommy Farr's skull—because he was overanxious that night and couldn't see to get the right aim.

He doesn't think he'll be overanxious against two-ton Tony. He doesn't want to hurt his batting average. In fact he's figured out that one more hit, against Galento's mighty curves, will give him .990, which ain't bad.

Jacobs 'Withdraws Charges' Against Louis

Ring Body Cracks Down On Manager

Galento's Manager Says Maybe Bomber's Gloves Don't Contain 'Gimmicks' at All

By the Associated Press.

Asbury Park, N. J., Jun 14.—For two short hours today, Joe Jacobs, the old front-page master mind, had th ballyhoo pot at a brisk boil for the 15-round heavywight title bout between his Tony Galento and Champion Joe Louis June 28.

But the New York Athletic Commission took him seriously and chilled the thing like last night's mashed potatoes.

Jacobs, who has been thinking up "angles" for his fighters for 25 years, said he wasn't at all satisfied about the way Louis flattened Max Schmeling in a couple of minutes a year ago. As a precaution, he would demand a round-by-round examination of the Brown Bomber's gloves when he tangles with Tony, he announced.

"Withdraws Charges."

"I am going to ask the commission," he said, "to let me have one of my men in Louis' corner to look over his gloves before every round. If the commission won't permit that, then I'm going to insist that the referee look over those gloves between every heat."

The only trouble was that Maj. Gen. John J. Phelan, the commission chairman, happened to be on hand to see Galento's training routine. In less time than it takes to tell the general pulld Jeacobs to on side and laid down the law. Then, with Phelan at his elbow, Joe summoned the newspapermen, and announced:

"I'm withdrawing the charges."

Joee, however, intimated he virtually was forced to back water. Adding one and one and getting two, it appeared he would either have had to retract the statement or his license to second Galento would be taken away.

Moves Training Camp

The general didn't stop there, either. Before he walked out, he had the commission physician, Dr. Edward Walker, examine Tony, and then, at Phelan's suggestion, Jacobs decided Galento's training base would be moved overnight from here to Mme. Bey's Camp at Summit, N. J.

The decision to mave the camp didn't sit well with the folks hereabouts, for Jacobs had a contract with Asbury Park.

After being advised of possible legal reoercussion, Joe issued another statement that there were "too many outside influences here to fully concentrate on training."

But that was only secondary to Joe's big splash. Immediately after he gave out his original statement, he had all the oldtimers recalling stories of "gimmicks" from far back. The gimmock, just to set you straight, is a blunt metal instrument, which can be carried in the palm of a boxing glove.

At Louis' Pompton Lakes training camp Jacob's charges were considered the best laugh since Joe's pork chops were "swiped."

"Only gimmick 'at Louis boy had in his glove that night," said Trainer Jack Blackburn, "was a five-fingered gimmick."

Reds Buy Pitcher

Cincinnati, June 14 (AP).—General Manager Warren C. Giles, of the Cincinnati Reds, announced tonight the purchase of Art Jacobs, left-handed relief pitcher, from Buffalo, of the International League. In addition to cash, the Reds sent Buffalo Earl Cook, who has been on option with Columbus of the American Association.

Bob Faris, G. W., Named On All-American Cage Team

Coach Reinhart Notified of Bob's Selection; Also Starred in Football

Bob Faris, for three years a letterman in football and tennis at George Washington University, has been voted a berth on the All-American Basketball team, Coach Bill Reinhart was notified at G. W. yesterday.

Faris was among the five selected after a Nation-wide survey of opinion among coaches and players of leading teams, Chuck Taylor, noted professional and coach, wired the G. W. coach. Taylor selects the accepted All-America for the Converse basbetball yearbook, but he did not make public other first-string choices.

Faris, who was graduated last night with the degree of bachelor of science, is the first G. W. athlete to win national honors of this type. He scored a total of 242 points last season in 19 games against some of the best teams in the Nation.

Taylor, in notifying Coach Reinhart of Faris' selection said the Colonials' varied and strenuous schedule was noted and that any player who could score as Bob did against that type of competition deserved the All-America honor. Faris had the highest average of any collegiate player in the District and was named on the all-District team.

He starred in the Colonial's games last season with three conference champions—Georgetown, Eastern; Ohio State, Big Ten, and Clefson, Southern. G. W. lost only to Ohio State.

In addition to basketball, football and tennis, Bob held university titles in table tennis and badminton. He also competed in softball, baseball and golf. Faris plans to accept a position with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Buy Catcher

Columbus, Ohio, June 14 (AP).—The Columbus club of the American Association announced today it had obtained Catcher Richard Tichacek from Houston, of the Texas League, in an outright trade for Catcher Joe Schultz, jr. Tichacek played with Martinsville, Va., last year.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

While the TVA was harnessing power from backed-up water, Congress backed up the TVA and harnessed it.

Its competition with private industry is now limited to furnishing power for wheel chairs and illumination for lightning bugs.

We don't know whether that is good or bad. But we do know that down in Tennessee was a big dam that didn't give anything for anybody.

With the Government out of business maybe that dam will give something to somebody.

O'Shea Beats Henson With Horseshoes

Mass. Prison Guard Captures Exhibition Match Here, 50 to 27

Those who think prison guards spend all their leisure practicing with a lead pipe on a dummy should be ashamed of themselves. There is one, at least, whose off moments are used in a less violent pastime.

He's Jimmy O'Shea, 25-year-old guard at the Massachusetts State prison, in Norfolk, Mass., and his sport is horseshoe hurling. The extent of his talent was shown yesterday when he pitched a special three-out-of-five-game match with Clayton C. Henson, best of the barnyard tennis players of Washington and Virginia. There was never any doubt of the outcome. Jimmy won the first game, 50-27, and followed that in rapid succession with victories of 50-22 and 50-28.

Besides playing herd on Massachusetts' delinquents, which keeps him in sandwich and beer money, O'Shea is the champion horseshoe artist of the Bay State as well as of all New England. The select little gathering which watched yesterday's match was convinced he had a right to the titles.

"There's nothing to being a prison guard," O'Shea said. "At least, nothing that would hurt my game of horseshoes. It's more or less like tending a motor in a power plant. You get accustomed to it. I've been horseshoeing much longer than I've been a prison guard, yoc know."

Jmmie's career started, in fact, when he was 14. Like most enthusiasts, he got the bug early and hasn't rid himself of it yet. After graduation from Brockton (Mass.) High in 1932, he took up the study of fingerprinting, with the result that he was appointed to the identification department of the State Prison Farm. The guard job in the Big House was his first promotion, and he confidently hopes to join the fingerprinting staff at the larger institution soon.

"One thing I'm glad of," he confides, "is that prison work and horseshoes go so well together."

Plans Completed for Waynesboro Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., June 14.—Plans for the fifth annual Waynesboro tennis tournament were made today at a meeting of the 1939 tennis committee. Last week the directors of the du Pont Employes Recreational Association voted to co-operate with the tennis committee this year in making available the du Pont courts once again for championship play.

The 1939 committee consists of C. G. Johnson, Wesley Suit, Carl Jenkins, Fred L. Cook, Lyle Hiserman, Cullen Chew, Col. A. E. Tanner, Louis Spilman, Mrs. Myrtie Sutphin, Miss Ann Mosby and Miss Lucy Coyner.

Coach Dobson Shows 'Marked' Improvement

Maryland Coach In Hospital With Respiratory Infection

Marked improvement in the condition of Frank M. Dobson, University of Maryland football coach, was announced yesterday by Emergency Hospital physicians, who added that "Mr. Dobson is still a very sick man."

Admitted to the hospital last night, Mr. Dobson was found to be critically ill from a respiratory infection, but his ailment has not been completely diagnosed, according to doctors.

At his bedside yesterday, in addition to Mrs. Dobson, was his son Jack, who recently returned to the Capital from West Point, where he was a member of the 1939 graduating class.

Coach Dobson was stricken following his own return from West Point, where he attended the graduation exercises of his son. Young Dobson was a star end on the 1939 West Point eleven.

Famed as a coach throughout the South Atlantic section, Dobson was brought to Maryland University four years ago by President H. C. Byrd, who appointed him athletic director, the post vacated by Mr. Byrd when he assumed the presidency of the institution.

Woodruff Changes His Mind Again; Flies to Coast

Pittsburgh, June 14 (AP).—Abruptly changing his mind, "Long John" Woodruff, famous Negro runner of the University of Pittsburgh, took a plane for the West Coast tonight to compete in the N. C. A. A. championships at Los Angeles next Saturday.

Woodruff's action was an about-face from a statement earlier today, when he received his diploma at Pitt, that he had turned down the national collegiates definitely in favor of Princeton's invitation track meet the same day.

Tennessee to Play 10-Game Schedule

Schley Goree Wins Charles Town Feature by 4 Lengths

Shanks, D. C. Jockey, Rides The Victor

Bowman Entry Pays $6.60 Mutuel; DoublePays $171.80; Miss Epe Second

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 14.—Johnny Shanks, Washington jockey, brought Schley Goree, owned by A. A. Bowman, jr., to the wire four lengths in front of his nearest rival to win the W. W. Johnson purse, featuring today's program here. Mrs. G. Hutchins' Miss Epe, a figure in two dead-heats at this track, was a well-beaten second, with E. A. Rost's Bargain Boy taking the show money in a photo with Dun Lucky.

Schley Goree was luke warm in the wagering and provided a payoff of $6.60 for the faithful. The 4-year-old son of Ed Crump ran the 7 furlongs over a dried out track in 1:26 4-5.

Schley Goree and Pandoramint were bad actors in the line-up of six starters. The ultimate winner finally was placed outside the stalls for the getaway. Shanks did not let this worry him. He got off slowly but soon had the colt running and he was able to swing over in front at the first turn.

Sammy Palumbo, on Miss Epe, made efforts to catch the flying leader but the mare was unequal to the task. In the stretch, Shanks took no chances and kept his charge going right to the wire.

It was Flag Day and those who followed "hunches" cashed two good bets. Rough Buddy, out of the mare Flag Trick, won the first race and Flag Etta, a daughter of Flag Pole, took the fifth race.

The daily double was a nice $2 investment for the lucky customers. The combination of Courtaway and Charming Boy paid $171.80.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 14.

Dear Al: I hope somebody goes down to Accidental's stall and reads this to the game little filly. In her last race the chart-makers made this notation in the footnotes: "Accidental had no excuses." It did appear that she had free running space and wasn't good enough. She had all the earmarks of a well-beaten favorite. The truth is, she was kicked while the horses were at the post and suffered a deep cut on her leg. She ran as best she could and the cut was filled with mud when she returned to the barn. An hour later she could not stand on her legs and developed a fever. Until yesterday, her handlers believed she might die. However, her condition took a turn for the better, and now it is believed that she may be able to race again at the December meeting here. The filly, by Balko out of En Passant, has proven a gamester since she first took the track. She has never lost a close one and has "come again," in turf parlance, to win when she appeared to be beaten. The boys are sorry they said she "had no excuses." She had plenty of excuses, and many horses wouldn't have been as close as she was under the same circumstances. She is only as big as a rabbit, as horses go, but she must have a heart as big as a watermelon. May she have a speedy recovery.

Jockey D. Batts became ill today and canceled his mounts. Jockey Pappy Witmer gets back in action tomorrow after an illness. Claude Feltner has taken over Expelled, Lady Doctor and Blenheim Rose, to train for J. E. Hughes. Work has started on the totalizers at Timonium and Belair. President Harry A. Manley, of Cumberland's track was a visitor. Hagerstown's meeting follows this, and starts July 11.

BILL.

First race—Whittle Pete, a winner over this track, gives away some weight but appears capable of holding these safe. Needs only the right handling. Sail By turned in a fair effort with better horses and belongs in the money with these. Golden Mayne will be dangerous if taken off the reserve list.

Second race—Cora Kay, breaking off the rail, may have things her own way in this company. She likes the route. Sky Lassie has plenty of speed and is dangerous. Wild Day was a smashing second in that recent outing.

Third race—Boulder Dam ran a nice second last out and seems well placed in this company. I'm going to string along. Time Piece has a lot of closing ability. Machilla shifts to Palumbo for this and may be better than generally rated.

Fourth race—Small Change has the speed and the abbreviated sprint route suits. Appears capable of handling the weight. Highland Song has shown improvement and will be in the thick of contention if able to get off the also eligible list. Blue Prelude is in with a feather.

Fifth race—Luis Khayyam has the early speed to beat these to the first turn. If she does, it looks like her number will be in the winner's slot. Kitty's Rival had some trouble when beaten last out and is dangerous. Adriatic for the show end.

Sixth race—Nob is as fit as that recent victory and seems ready to come right back with another set of brackets. Lady's Favor is dropping down and could awake. Fernbrake won her maiden effort by a city block.

Seventh race—Jinneal has been racing in excellent fashion and may turn the tables on Sea Boy in this event. Sea Boy has won two and carries weight well. Big Bud would be a factor if the track is fast.

Eighth race—Aufoin is far down the list but stands out too much to be overlooked. The same goes for Heart Play, of those assured starting positions. Lucky Turn and Chilly Ebbie appear best.

Helen Dettweiler Advances in Women's Western Open

Youthful Stars Upset 2 Other Pros

Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Zech Beaten; 'Bea' Barrett, Defending Champ, Wins Play at St. Louis

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 14.—Two more professionals were elminiated by youthful stars today as competition in the Women's Western Open golf tournament narrowed down to eight players, including a 15-year-old "baby" sensation. The only remaining professional in the tournament is Miss Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C.

Little Jeanne Cline, Bloomington, Ill., high school girl, who attracts more of a gallery than the more prominent players, skipped through the second round with a 2 and 1 victory over Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago. Jeanne, a "tomboy," her mother said, has been playing olf only two years.

Shirley Ann Johnson, of Chicago, scored a 1-up victory over Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City. The tournament medalist, while Dorothy oster, Springfield, Ill., music teacher who is rapidly becoming the professional killer, moved into the quarter-finals with a 4 and 2 win over Virginia Pepp, of St. Louis. Both Mrs. Hill and Miss Pepp are professionals.

Upset Victory

Miss Johnson's victory was something of an upset although she has defeated Mrs. Hill in other matches. The Kansas City veteran had a two-up lead going out. Coming back, Miss Johnson, a pretty blonde, took a par four at the eleventh and squared the match at the thirteenth after the twelfth was halved.

At the fourteenth, Miss Johnson's putt caromed off Mrs. Hill's ball for a four to put the youthful Chicago player one up. The remaining holes were split.

Miss Foster, former Illinois women's champion, stepped into the limelight yesterday by dropping Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb, 1931 national champion, by the wayside.

A fine approacher and putter, although not on her game today, Miss Foster was out in 47 for a 1-up lead. Coming back, she steadied a bit, while Miss Pepp rolled up 6's on three of the six remaining holes.

Miss Dettweiler Scores

Helen Dettweiler, Washington, D. C., is the sole remaining "business woman" player of the four who started out. She won today from Helen Hofmann, Salt Lake City, Utah, runner-up last year, 4 and 3, and will meet Shirley Ann tomorrow.

Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, the defending champion, came through the second round easily with a 2-and-1 triumph over Mrs. Charles Harting, St. Louis.

Her next opponent will be Phyllis Buchanan, Denver, Colo., ace, who breezed through a match with Goldie Bateson, of Milwaukee, Wis., winning 5 and 4.

One of the country's ranking young players, attractive Ella Mae Williams, daughter of the Chicago pro, Eddie Williams, eliminated Mrs. Burt Weil, Cincinnati, Ohio, wife of the former owner of the Cincinnati Reds, 2 and 1.

The other quarterfinalist is Mrs. Sam Israel, New Orleans, who defeated her fellow townswoman and Louisiana State champion, Mrs. Alberta Neblett, 7 and 5.

QUARTER-FINAL ROUND PAIRINGS

Upper bracket—Shirley Ann Johnson (Chicago) vs. Helen Dettweiler Washington, D. C.). Dorothy Foster Sprinfield, Ill.) vs. Jeanne Cline (Bloomington, Ill.).

Lower bracket—Ella Mae Williams (Chicago) vs. Mrs. Sam Israel (New Orleans). Beatrice Barrett (Minneapolis, Minn.) vs. Phyllis Buchanan (Denver, Colo.).

with equal alacrity; Gonzales, for many years a backstop, is coach with the St. Louis Cards. Luque led the National League in 1923 with 27 pitching victories and 8 defeats. In later years, he was known as a "hard-luck" hurler, but ended his career in a dramatic relief role that returned the New York Giants as 1933 World Series winners over the Washington Nationals. Currently, he lives in retirement in Havana.

But since the days of Luque, nary a Cuban has become a Cincinnati regular.

Robert Estalella, slugging Washington outfielder, is the only Cuban in the American League. He has hit five homers to lead his club. Early in the season, the Nationals had two other Cubans on their mound staff, Roberto Ortiz and Rene Monteagudo, but farmed them out.

Start of the Play-off Test in Midatlantic Amateur

Three played off for two places with 77's, John Bergelin, Kenwood Club champion, who clinched a championship flight berth on the first hole with a great three-iron second shot that nestled 2 inches from the cup; Dick Melvin, Indian Spring, who scrambled to a four on the second hole to nose out Gene Pittman, Congressional, after they halved the first in bogey fives.

The big four that missed the championship flight played spotty golf all the way. They were all 40 or over on the first nine, and were unable to rally, robbing the tournament of a quartet of potential champions. Greiner and Pitt were 79, two strokes too high; Brownell 81, and Burnett 83. Although Pitt has been playing little tournament golf of late, the failure of the other three was one of the biggest disappointments here in years.

Outstanding first round encounters pitts Peacock against Nolan, while co-medalist Shea meets Baltimore's toughest contender, Overton.

The second flight, playing merely for silver and not the title, is nearly as tough as the first, with Pittman, Pitt, Malone, Brownell, Greiner, Hollebaugh, Groege Miller, Byen Curtiss, in the free-for-all.

Reds Pound Phils, 10 to 7, Before 15,628

Seven Pitchers Used In Contest Featuring Extra-Base Blows

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 14.—The league-leading Cincinnati Reds came from behind in two big innings today to pound out a 10-to-7 victory over Philadelphia in a game featured by ragged and classy fielding and extra base blows galore from a total of seven hurlers.

Staged before a ladies' day crowd of 15,628, it was the Reds' twenty-second victory in 29 starts and No. 2 for Rookie Gene Thompson, who relieved starting hurler Paul Derringer in the fourth.

Gene Schott, a former Red, was charged with the loss.

Away to a two-run start in the first on two singles and one of two Red errors, the cellar-dwellers found their margin cut by one on singles by Werber and Goodman and May's miscue, but in the third scored three runs on successive doubles by Arnovich and Scott and George Scharein's homer, first of two Phil circuit clouts.

The slugging Arnovich, held to one for three at bat, turned in the fielding gem of the day, racing to the wall in the seventh to balance himself, then leap high for Craft's high liner.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Four Nats—Dutch Leonard, Taft Wright, Buddy Lewis and Bobby Estalella—figure in the latest award of points in the Man of the Month contest, on the basis of performances against the White Sox yesterday. Points were awarded as follows:

To Leonard, five points, because he pitched superb ball in shutting out the White Sox with four hits.

To Lewis, two points, because he made two of the Nats' six hits, drove in a run with a two-bagger, scored a run and played a brilliant game at third base.

To Wright, two points, because his triple drove in one of the Nats' three runs, and because he made clever catches in right field throughout the game.

To Estalella, one point, because his safe bunt and the base on balls he drew paved the way for two Washington runs. The totals:

Tigers Pound Bosox Twice, 9-8 and 6-2

Opener Held Up For Hour by Rain; Cronin Gets Double

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 14.—The Detroit Tigers extended their winning streak to seven straight today by coming from behind twice to defeat the Red Sox, 9-8 and 6-2, in the double-header that opened their second Eastern swing.

After the opener was held up for an hour by a heavy shower, the Tigers overcame an 8-4 lead by blasting the cooled-off Joe Heving, who had relieved Starter Jib Bagby as the first raindrops fell, for two runs in the fifth. They set off a three-run explosion under Tmerson Dickman in the seventh.

Bonura's 2 Homers Win for Giants, 2-1

New York Climbs Out of 2d Division As Lohrman Holds Cubs to Six Hits

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 14.—With Zeke Bonura hitting his fifth and sixth homers of the reason, the New York Giants opened their second Western swing today by beating the Chicago Cubs, 2 to 1, and supplanting last year's National League champions in fourth place.

Bill Lohrman, making his second start, held the Cubs to six scattered hits. Their only run resulted from a triple by Dick Bartell and a sacrifice fly by Bill Lee in the fifth.

It was the sixth straight victory for the Giants and lifted them back into the first division for the first time since the first week in May.

Lee yielded seven hits in absorbing his eighth defeat against five victories.

Steel Activity Of 60 Per Cent Is Forecast

Production Peak Is Expected During July or August

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 14.—Iron Age Magazine predicted today that the steel industry probably would increase its production rate in coming weeks. The magazine said:

"Although steel ingot production this week has declined half a point to 52½ per cent of the industry's capacity, this slight change has no special significance, merely indicating that some plants have replenished stocks of semi-finished steel, which were depleted during the coal crisis in early May.

"No sharp decline in operations is expected in the near future. On the contrary, the rate probably will go up moderately, possibly to a peak of about 60 per cent during July and August, when much heavier shipments of sheets and strip against recent low-priced committments will be made. In fact, it appears that the bulk of the production of this tonnage will come during the third quarter, when the automobile industry will be engaged in initial runs on 1940 models.

Scrap Prices Strong.

"Steel scrap prices, which sometimes give advance indications of the trend of steel production, are strong and are possibly headed higher. The Iron Age scrap composite price has risen 21 cents to $14.79, which is only 50 cents below this year's peak figure of $15.29 in late March. The rise in the composite from its low point of the year is 71 cents. Last year in June, the scrap market began a rapid advance which carried the Iron Age composite up $3.83 from its low point by August 9, and during that period the steel ingot rate went up from 25 to 40 per cent. Aside from sheets and strip, incoming tonnage is holding at a fairly steady volume."

Pennroad Corp. Accused of Loss Of $9,000,000

Philadelphia, June 14 (AP).—A suit demanding an accounting of $9,000,000 in addition to the one for $4,000,000 filed March 30 last, was brought against six estates and 10 living directors of the Pennroad Corporation in U. S. District Court today. David Steckler, of New York, who acquired 14 shares of Pennroad stock from the estate of his wife, Kate, is the plaintiff. He also acted for other stockholders.

He charges that Pennroad lost the $9,000,000 through the "illegal" investment by Pennroad of $20,138,700 in 201,387 shares of the voting capital stock of the Boston and Maine Railroad. The "illegality" of the investment results from the fact, Steckler contends, that it represents 19½ per cent of the total capital stock of the B. & M., whereas the public service law of New York prohibits any holding company, such as Pennroad from acquiring a greater interest than 10 per cent.

Steckler's action against the directors, contends they are liable to the stockholders, first, for allowing Pennroda to make the "excessive" investment, and secondly, for allowing the company to "hold" the stock.

The March 30 suit was done by Ione M. Overfield, of Salt Lake City, against the directors for the recovery of a loss of over $4,000,000 which Pennroad allegedly sustained in financing the National Freight Co., which afterwards became insolvent.

July Cotton Reaches New High At 9.30 Cents

By the Associated Press

New York, June 14.—The cotton market had to be content with gains of 2 to 7 points today as weekly weather details, a little more favorable than the trade had looked for, checked the outside and speculative buying that had appeared the previous day. Nevertheless, contracts were scarce and came out only on advances, chiefly from professionals or from spot houses selling at fixed prices.

When July hit a high of 9.30 cents today, the trade gave increased attention to the narrowing differences between that delivery and October and December. Chief reason for this, analysts said, was the belief the only relief in sight for the present tight spot set up lies in the movement of new crop cotton, which will not get under way until mid-August or early September. But with the Government apparently determined to maintain at least 1939 deliveries near present loan levels, it was felt those months would move into close relationship with July.

Although the Government weather summary indicated parts of Texas are still too dry for germination, and weeds and grass were plaguing other sections, the market viewed the report as a whole as a standoff.

Cottonseed Oil

Light offerings, plus influence of steady allied markets, was sufficient to lift cottonseed oil futures to gains of 4 to 8 points today. At the same time, speculative interest was lacking.

Sales totaled 48 lots; July, 6.63 bid; September, 6.84; December, 6.96 bid; January, 7.02.

Power Output Jumps; 13.3% Over Last Year

New York, June 14 (AP).—Electric power production got under way with renewed vigor after the Memorial holiday. Power output in the week ended June 10 jumped to 2,256,823,000 kilowatt hours from 2,113,887,000 in the preceding week, a gain of 6.8 per cent, and was 13.3 per cent ahead of 1,991,787,000 in the comparable 1938 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The gain, which was more than seasonally expected, lifted the Associated Press weighted index of energy production, based on 1929-'30 as 100, to a new high for the year at 119. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 114.2 in the preceding week and 105.2 a year ago.

National Supply Omits Preferred Dividends

Pittsburgh, June 14 (AP).—Directors of National Supply Co., oil industry equipment manufacturers, took no action today on the dividend due at this time on the 6 per cent prior preferred and the 5½ per cent prior preferred stock.

On March 31, the company paid 75 cents on the 6 per cent and 68¾ cents on the 5½ per cent, both dividends being half the quarterly rate.

Chain Store Sales Expand Increases

New York, June 14.—May sales of the chain stores had the largest gain over 1938 of any month this year, according to the current review by Chain Store Age.

The index of May sales was 110 and indicated a percentage increase of 6.5 per cent over the same month of last year. In April the comparative gain was 4.8 per cent.

Wheat Prices Turn Upward In Light Trade

Fears of Rust Damage In Spring Wheat Area Assists Advance

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 14.—Wheat prices, after falling 6 to 7 cents during the past two weeks, turned upward today, gaining as much as ⅞ cent at times. Trade was light, however, and fractional setbacks from best levels were frequent.

Higher Liverpool quotations, fears of rust damage spread to the domestic spring wheat area and disappointing reports of harvesting Southwest aided the upturn. Some unfavorable European crop reports and good export sales of North American wheat overnight and today—estimated at 1,000,000 bushels—also helped.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ up, July 73¾@73⅝, September 74@73⅞; corn unchanged to ⅜ off, July 49½@49⅝; September 51; oats ⅛ up, soy beans unchanged to ½ up; rye unchanged to ⅛ up and lard unchanged to 5 cents up.

B. W. Snow, crop expert, said black stem rust was present in Oklahoma and south central Kansas, and although not threatening the far advanced winter wheat crop might spread to the spring wheat area northward. Harvesting Southwest was handicapped by heavy rains, particularly in southern and eastern Kansas.

Liverpool wheat, which yesterday reached new eight-year lows, closed ⅝@¾ up, aided by new buying and further inquiry for Argentine wheat. Rotterdam finished ¼@⅝ up. Winnipeg closed ⅜@⅝ up. Kansas City ⅛@¼ up and Minneapolis ¼@½ higher.

Prices Irregularly Lower in Light Trading Aviations, Metals and Motors Supported Telephone Shares Hit by Federal Report

New York, July 14.—The irregularly lower movement continued in the stock market today on a volume of trading that reflected great unconcern on the part of speculators and traders. Only 399,370 shares changed hands and the composite average registered a loss of 0.21 point. Aviation stocks came to life, apparently on the more serious turn of events in international relations, and there was support for the metals and motors. The vast majority of fluctuations, however, remained in the fractional class.

American Telephone declined 2¼ points, the break being influenced in part by the publication of the findings of the Federal Communications Commission, which spent two years and $1,500,000 to establish, at least to the satisfaction of the New Deal, that this big corporation should be brought more under Government control.

Judge and Jury One

The report was about what one could expect, considering the nature of the conduct of the inquiry. Denied the right, which even the meanest criminal has in court, to present its own witnesses or to cross-examine the witnesses of the commission, the telephone company was subjected to one of the most one-sided inquisitions that the strangest minds of our new order could devise. Prosecutor, judge and jury were one and the same and the defendant was as good as convicted before he entered the box.

And despite the one-sided nature of the inquiry, the "crimes" of which the company now stands "convicted" include the making of 7 per cent on its investment and "pursuing an active policy of cultivating public good will." To that low depths do these soulless corporations sink!

Making 7 per cent is something that just isn't done any more. The telephone officials, who have concentrated most successfully in providing the best phone service in the world for a reasonable charge, should realize that far too many corporations have been forced to follow the example of the Federal Government and run in the red. For some strange reason there has been a growing tendency in Washington in recent years to place some sort of a moral stigma on those who are able to pay their bills and to exalt the practice of spending more than you earn.

Comparative Publicity

As for the charge of "cultivating public good will," the best answer is that the telephone company is woefully lacking when measured by the standards of the New Deal bureaus. Each day the amount of publicity received by a representative newspaper from the Government agencies can be counted by pounds easier than by sheets. The Government employs about 300 publicity agents, excluding stenographers, messengers, boys, etc., while the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. employs 47 in its department of information, including advertising, publicity and promotion men, stenographers, office boys and messengers. Even if the staffs of the operating units of the system be added, it would appear that the company has fallen far short of the standard set by the New Deal when it comes to "cultivating public good will."

Aside from the selling in Telephone there was also pressure exerted against Harvester, Public Service, Jersey and Commonwealth & Southern preferred, these issues showing losses of a point or more. Chrysler added about a point and United States Rubber, the day's most active stock, was up a fraction. Steels eased slightly. Electric Auto-Lite jumped 1⅝, the company declaring a dividend of 75 cents against 50 cents paid April 1.

Midweek business news was favorable. Railroad freight loadings reports indicate that a sharp increase will be reported for the week ended June 10. Power output reached a four months' high, increasing 6.8 per cent over the previous week and 13.3 per cent over a year ago.

Panama 5 Per Cent Bonds Jump

Listed bond dealings disclosed only a few bright spots today, most issues moving irregularly lower. The market remained dull, with tunover only $4,390,000. United States Treasury bonds and best-grade corporate loans were slightly changed in either direction. Speculative bonds took the same uncertain downward course witnessed in the equities department. In the foreign dollar department, Panama 5s jumped again, owing to the hearings on the proposed treaty.

United States Treasury bonds showed gains to 4-32 point and losses to 13-32 point, but the larger losses were in inactive issues. The net result of the formal trading was a virtually unchanged general level. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were idle and irregular. Telephone bonds were well maintained, despite the new report on the Bell System. Best power and light bonds were quiet, and changes also were minute in best-rated rail and industrial bonds.

Railroad Issues

Medium-priced carrier bonds were unsettled to a degree by the Southern Railway incident. Losses were mostly small, however, and a few fractional advances were scattered among the minus signs. Holding company bonds were uneven, while industrial convertibles drifted lower. Local tractions were marked down, but communications bonds improved. Other special groups failed to attract any interest.

Panama 5s, long in default, were marked 5 points higher on the statement by Secretary of State Hull. Other Latin-American default bonds were generally lower. Greek 7s jumped in the European group of disregarded pledges, but others were dull. Polish bonds dipped, while Italians improved. The Japanese obligations dropped in view of the latest complications in the Far East. Best grade foreigns were quiet and lower.

Illinois Central Protests Merger Of Mobile Lines

By the Associated Press.

The Illinois Central system urged the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to reject a proposal for consolidating the Gulf, Mobile & Northern and the Mobile & Ohio Railroads.

"No application for a merger of railroads has ever been presented to this commission that failed so completely to meet the test of the public interest as does the present one," the Illinois Central said in a petition. "The proposed merger will not create one additional ton of traffic. It will serve no communities or territories that are not now adequately served by railroads. It will not result in any shorter routes or in any better service. On the other hand, a condition to the success of the merger is the diversion of a very substantial volume of traffic from the shorter, more economical and more efficient routes of the Illinois Central system to those that are longer, less economical and less efficient. The Illinois Central system can ill afford the permanent loss in revenues that here confronts it."

The Southern Railway Co., which owns $7,839,000 principal amount of general mortgage bonds of the Mobile & Ohio, supported the merger plan.

So. Ry. Plans Cut Of $3,150,000 in Annual Interest

New York, June 14 (AP).—Plans for readjustment of the Southern Railway Co. capital structure to effect a $3,150,000 annual cut in interest charges are being studied by the management, it was disclosed today.

A proposal considered, it was reported, would involve a change in the terms of the development and general mortgage 6 per cent and 6½ per cent bonds of 1956 to make them callable at intervals of 5 years at graduated prices and giving bondholders the right to subscribe to common stock at a price of not less than $45 a share.

Thomas O. Thatcher, of the New York investment banking firm of A. M. Kidder & Co., who recently completed a study of the Southern system said he understood that there had been preliminary talks between the management and institutional holders representing about 40 per cent of the $50,000,000 outstanding 6s and 6½s.

The management's goal, he added, was the elimination of this amount of funded debt together with an annual reduction of $3,150,000.

Local Bankers Win Honors At Convention

Laughlin, Sanderson Appointed to A. I. B. National Committees

Directors of the Union Trust Co. have voted a dividend of 3 per cent ($1.50 per share), payable July 15 to stockholders of record at the close of business June 30. A dividend of 3 per cent also was voted in January of this year, so stockholders have been paid 6 per cent this year.

LAUGHLIN

Two junior Washington bankers were honored at the annual convention of the American Institute of Banking in Grand Rapids, Mich., when William H. Laughlin, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., was appointed to the membership committee and Walter L. Sanderson, of the Hamilton National Bank, was named to the forum committee. The appointments were made by the newly elected president of the institute, Harry R. Smith, of the Bank of America, San Francisco.

Mr. Sanderson was chapter president in 1934-'35 and Mr. Laughlin in 1936-'37, and both attended the convention last week. Washington Chapter almost won national fame in the annual publicity contest, but the Richmond Chapter carried off these honors.

At the convention J. LeRoy Dart, of Jacksonville, Fla., was elected vice president of the national organization. Four new members of the executive council were elected: Garnett Carter, Atlanta; J. H. Gormley, Seattle; Edward F. Matthews, Philadelphia, and Elmer W. Pollock, of Tulsa, after a very lively contest.

Resident Appraisers

The last meeting of the Washington Chapter, Society of Resident Appraisers, until fall was held last night in the offices of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board with Wilfred H. Blanz of the American Building Association presiding. The affair was well attended by appraisers from the District and nearby Virginia and Maryland. The principal speaker was Ayers J. Du Bois, valuation chief of the Underwriters division, F. H. A., who spoke on the pitfalls of residential appraisals.

D. C. Underwriters

The District of Columbia Chapter, Chartered Life Underwriters, held its monthly supper meeting last night at the Cosmos Club. The speaker was Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Big Pipeline Deal Reported Closed

Tulsa, Okla., June 14 (AP).—The Tribune says, "One of the largest pipeline deals in recent years has been practically closed' between Standard Oil Co. of Ohio and Tide Water Associated Oil Co.

It involves purchase by Standard of Ohio of the 6-inch pipeline of Tide Water Pipe, Ltd., from Stoy, Ill., to a Pennsylvania point just across the Ohio line, about 450 miles. Engineers estimate the present cost of constructing such a line, with pump stations, would exceed $3,000,000.

Machine Tool Sales Spurt During May

Cleveland, June 14 (AP).—A sharp spurt in May orders carried the National Machine Tool Builders' Association index to 219.8 from 186.6 in April, the association reported today. The index, with average monthly shipments during 1926 taken to represent 100 per cent, stood at 66.7 in May, 1938. The May average was the highest since April, 1937, when the index hit 282.5. The association said "orders for foreign delivery for the first five months of this year are heavier than in 1937 and represent a larger share of the total. The growing strength of domestic orders may be estimated from the fact that the total domestic business placed for the first five months of this year is 43 per cent above the total for the last five months of 1938."

North Carolina Borrows at 1.27%, Record Low Rate

Raleigh, N. C., June 14.—North Carolina's long period of self-sacrifice, when the State met every obligation during the depression, sent the bread back upon the waters this week. The State sold $2,250,000 of bonds at a net interest rate of 1.2687 per cent, lowest on record and the first time State bonds have been sold at an interest rate of less than 2.07 per cent.

The entire issue was taken by Kirchofer & Arnold, Inc., of Raleigh. None of the 13 bids received demanded an interest rate higher than 1.5 per cent.

"The great saving affected by the State in being able to borrow money at a little more than one and a quarter per cent," said Gov. Clyde R. Hoey., "demonstrates the importance of meeting obligations promptly and not overspending the capacity to pay.

"The fact that North Carolina never defaulted on any of its obligations during the whole period of the depression established the reputation of the State, and we're getting dividends on that reputation."

Treasury to Purchase Government Supplies

Rear Admiral C. J. Peoples, notified other Government departments yesterday that the Treasury procurement division hereafter will do supply purchasing for all Government agencies except the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

At present, the procurement division does all the buying for nonmilitary agencies in Washington, but some of the departments notably the WPA, do considerable buying of their own when needed outside of the District of Columbia. The new order, approved by the President, will transfer to the Treasury the field purchasing formerly done by other departments.

Tin Quotas Increased

Paris, June 14 (AP).—The International Tin Committee today set export quotas for the third quarter of 1939 at 45 per cent of standard tonnages agreed on in the international control scheme. This compared with 40 per cent in effect in the second quarter and 35 per cent in the first quarter of 1939.

Chase to Hurl Opener for Nats Today

Harry Kelley May Pitch Nightcap of Stadium Twin Bill

Ken Chase, beaten in his last start despite a four-hit performance against the Indians, will return to the mound in a starting role for the Nats today in the double-header with the White Sox.

Chase has been definitely assigned to pitch the opening game of the bill, but Manager Bucky Harris last night was undetermined on his second game pitcher. He was of a mind to give the veteran Harry Kelley his first strating role of the season, in view of Kelley's tolerable relief pitching in recent games.

Manager Jimmy Dykes will toss one of his left-handers, Thornton Lee or Ed Smith, at the Nats in the first game, with Jack Knott due to pitch the second.

At the stroke of midnight tonight the trading limit will fall on big-league clubs, and the prospect is that the Nats will complete no last-minute deal.

"There is no trade in sight," said Clark Griffith last night. "I've been dickering with several clubs, but they are unreasonable in their demands. I was in the market for a first baseman, an outfielder and pitchers, but unless some other club gets panicky and wants to make a last-minute trade, I believe we're standing pat."

Case's 18-Game Hitting Streak Broken

The 18-consecutive-game hitting streak of George Washington Case, one of the few records the Nats have set this year that they can be proud of, was broken yesterday when the fleet outfielder went hitless in four times against Chicago. On two occasions Case came within a hairs breadth of continuing his record, but he failed both times. The nearest to a hit he came was in his fourth trip to the plate, when a screaming line drive was miraculously stabbed by Shortstop Luke Appling.

In his second try for a hit, in the third inning, Case laid down a beautiful bunt but was beaten to first by less than a yard. He popped up weakly in the first inning and grounded out in his only other time at bat. Case's hitlessness was understandable, considering that only six hits were made off John Rigney and Vic Frazier.

Softball Tourney Draws Strong Team

One of the strongest aggregations of softball teams ever to assemble in the East is expected to compete in the first Midatlantic softball tournament June 20, 23, 27 and 30 in Ballston Stadium, Arlington, Va., Glen W. Leyde, of Arlington, announced yesterday.

Teams which have sent in applications for entrance so far include Overnight Transporation, Trenton Club, Shavitz, Tru-fit, Blue Coal, Rustliss Iron and Nates and Leon—all of Baltimore, and Tru-Blu, Arlington Democrats, Golub's Market, Navy Department, Plaza Wine and Liuquor and Irish War Veterans, of Washington.

Tomorrow is the last day for entries in the tourney. Leyde is accepting entries at 864 North Woodrow wstreet, in Arlington. Trophies and medals are offered winning teams.

Nelson-McSpaden Golf Favorites

Toledo, Ohio, June 14 (AP).—Byron Nelson, the recently crowned United States Open champion who becomes head pro at Inverness in 1940, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden were the odds-on favorite on the eve of the fifth annual Inverness invitational four-ball golf classic which opens tomorrow afternoon.

Nelson and McSpaden, although it was the first time around the course for either of them, electrified onlookers today as the Open king slammed out a par 71 and McSpaden a 72 with seven birdies racked up between them. Then they came back later in the day with Nelson taking a 33 over the first nine and McSpaden a 34.

Browns Get Relief Funds

The first immediate result was the purchase yesterday of Joe Gallagher, hard-hitting young outfielder, from the New York Yankee system. The Browns gave up infielder Roy Hughes and probably $20,000 in cash.

Barnes and William O. DeWitt, vice president of the team, declined to answer any questions about the $100,000 "relief fund," but they said the Browns were in the market for any players who would help the team. No deals, however, are on the fire at present, they added.

Barnes and his associates, as a civic enterprise, took over the Browns from the Phil Ball estate in November, 1936. Some 900 fans bought stock in the club at $5 a share.

The new management virtually remade the team, but efforts to bring the Browns out of the ruck have been unsuccessful.

Riggs and McNeill Paris Net Winners

Paris, June 14 (AP).—Americans occupied three semifinal brackets in the men's singles in the French hard courts tennis championships today.

Bobby Riggs, America's No. 1 amateur and seeded first, showed the way with a 6—2, 2—6, 8—6, 7—5 victory over Ignacy Tloczynski, of Poland. Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, joined him. Cooke eliminated Henry Billington, of England, 6—4, 6—4, 6—1 and McNeill beat Ferenc Puncec, high ranking Yugoslavian, 6—4, 1—6, 6—3, 6—1.

The other semifinal place was filled by the Hungarian, O. Szigeti, who whipped Christian Boussus, French veteran, 7—5, 1—6, 2—6, 7—5, 6—4.

Ten-Goal Polo Team to Face British Four

America's 'Dream' Team Will Spot English Ten Goals in Sunday Title

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 14.—For the first time in the international series America's "dream" polo team—four 10-goal stars—will ride against Great Britain Sunday at the Meadowbrook Club, it was announced today. America won the first two games to clinch the series.

Lord Cowdray, nonplaying captain of the British, suggested the 40-goal combination of Mike Phipps, Cecil Smith, Tommy Hitchcock and Stewart Iglehart and spot 10 goals to the invaders, probably Hesketh Hughes, John Lakin, Gerald Balding and Eric Tyrrell-Martin.

Individual cups will be given to the winning team by the Hurlingham Polo Association, ruling body of the sport in Great Britain.

Injuries kept Smith on the sidelines in the first two games and Winston Guest played in his place. Phipps was hurt in last Sunday's game, but is recovering.

Baxter Meets Clinstock on Stadium Mat

Laverne Baxter and Jim Clinstock will attempt to settle a grudge on a winner-take-all basis tonight in the wrestling ring at Griffith Stadium. In event of rain, the bouts will be held in Turner's Arena.

Baxter, who won from Clinstock last week, is the current seeker of the local ring's "meanest man" title, the Golden Terror having been bounced firmly out of the pictur and Jack Hader consigned to the preliminaries. He won a questionable decision over Clinstock last week, and tonight's program will be a return engagement.

With the first bout listed for 8:30, the supporting card tonight brings together Jules Strongbow and Chief Chewaki; Tex Hammer and Abe Kashey, one of the King Kongs now in circulation; Hank Metheny and Jack Hader, nad Pete Managoff and Ernie Powers.

Mrs. Brundage Wins Columbia Tourney

Mrs. H. M. Brundage topped the Columbia Club women golfers in the four-week 72-hole W. W. Hinshaw trophy play, with a 367 gross total. Mrs. Brundage, leading at the end of the third round, added a 90 yesterday to her previous total to lead the field by 14 strokes.

Mrs. J. F. rosGs, whose 281 total was second low, took the prize in preference to low net, as with handicaps deducted she was best with 317.

Mrs. B. M. Giles won first low net, with a 326 total, with Mrs. A. Bogley second, with 335.

Farm women attending the annual short course at the University of Maryland are shown yesterday at songfest in the gymnasium. Later they heard an address by Judge Lois Mary McBride, of the Allegheny County Court, Pittsburgh, Pa., condemning hasty divorces and marriage mills

Marriage Mills Deplored by Md. U. Speaker

Judge Lois McBride Urges Farm Women to Seek Uniform Laws

Special Dispatch to The Post.

College Park, June 14.—Deploring "marriage mills" and "hasty divorces," Judge Lois Mary McBride, of the Allegheny County Court, Pittsburgh, today urged farm women at the University of Maryland short course to work for more uniform marriage laws.

"Every State has made a commercial business of marriage laws and has permitted 'marriage mills' and hasty divorces," she declared, adding that this was destroying the basis of American democracy—the home.

In totalitarian states, Judge McBride declared, there was no place for the family, and the world "is looking for the democracy of the United States to save it, but we have not stood up and said 'look what we have in America.'"

Charles Stephenson Smith, of La Plata, former chief of the Associated Press foreign service, declared earlier that the Communist Party was losing strength because of its "drastic regulations and almost impossible requirements."

The idea of an "inferiority complex" was branded "as old as the hills" by Dr. Esther L. Richards, associate professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins University.

"The silly part is to let it get our goat," she declared. She asked support of the farm women for the psychiatric clinics held in the counties of the State at least once a year.

Speakers for tomorrow will include Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, of New York, and Dr. Arthur Shipley, head of the department of surgery at the University of Maryland.

Arlington Bans Sales From Parked Cars

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0440.

The county board yesterday unanimously adopted two ordinances presented by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, one to prohibit the sale of merchandise from vehicles parked upon the public highways of the county, and the other defining regulations for public safety. The latter includes handling and storage of gasoline, inspection and maintenance of fire escapes, burning of refuse and operation of commercial garages.

The first ordinance prohibits sale of merchandise from parked vehicles, but does not apply to any huckster, peddler or other persons who may travel in any vehicle upon the highways for the purpose of selling goods, wares or mercandise from house to house, and who shall stop his vehicle only for the purpose of making such sales.

Rule on Dynamite

The public safety ordinance provides that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to transport or to use for blasting purposes, or otherwise explode, any dynamite, powder, nitroglycerine, or other high explosive within the county, without having obtained from the county manager a permit in writing.

Total expenditures amounting to $36,124.05, of which $18,116.87 represented the pay roll, were approved by the board.

Summer Schools to Open

Arlington—Summer schools will open at 8 a. m. today for registration. Classes will start tomorrow from 8 a. m. to noon, continuing through August 9, according to County Superintendent Fletcher Kemp.

There will be classes at Washington-Lee High, Thomas Jefferson High, Patrick Henry, Nellie Custis, James Monroe, Matthew Fontaine Maury, Stonewall Jackson and Cherrydale schools for white students and at Kemper School for colored.

Because of the trimester system of study in Arlington County schools, a full term of work can be accomplished in summer classes, Kemp said.

Report on Parkway

Arlington — County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan announced yesterday that he had sent to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission a report of the efforts of county officials to carry out its part in accordance with resolutions of the county board to meet its part of the cost of section 2 of the George Washington Memorial Parkway beyond Key Bridge.

While the total amount represented in donations for rights of way is not known, it is reported that the county has an item of $5,000 in the present budget and $19,500 more which will be available as of July 1, together with a credit on county-owned land in Rosslyn to donate in the purchase of rights of way for the project.

Upon the completion of negotiations over the county's land in Rosslyn, a final agreement will be necessary between the county and the Federal Government before the land donations and cash are made available to the Government.

5 Overcrowded Prince Georges Schools Seen.

Orem Makes Prediction Despite Half-Million Building Program

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 821 Rhoems Ave., Hyattsville, Md. Telephone GReenwood 3559.

Superintendant Nicholas Orem said yesterday he expected overcrowded conditions in at least five Prince Georges County schools next fall despite the half-million dollar building program of the past year.

Present indications, he said, pointed to overflow classes at the elementary schools in Suitland, Forestville, Silver Hill, Glendale and Bradbury Heights. The board of education, he revealed, had recommended that the county commissioners authorize a $60,000 bond issue for a new Beltsville school to replace the present frame structure.

Twelve school buildings have been completed in the past year or are under construction. The program was financed in part by the Public Works Administration.

Although a new school at Bladensburg will be ready for occupancy by September, Orem said the old building will be kept open for primary grade pupils from Bladensburg and Landover. The grounds will be enclosed by a fence to keep the small children from wandering on the heavily traveled Defense highway.

Upper classes now being accommodated in the present Bladensburg elementary school and in the high school across the street will be transferred to the new school, Orem said. In addition, the upper grades from the Ardmore, Landover and Seabrook elementary schools will be housed in the new building. The Landover school will be closed.

The next meeting of the board of education has been changed from June 27 to June 30, at which time bids will be opened on equipment for eight schools recently completed.

Four Commencements Tonight

Services were conducted today for a companion, Raymond Twilley, 24, whose body was found yesterday.

Wheat Allotment Increased 9.5% For Maryland

College Park, Md., June 14 (AP).—Maryland wheat farmers plotted their 1940 acreage today following announcement by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration that the year's allotment would be 384,403 acres, a 9.54 per cent increase over the 1939 figure.

The figures were released by R. O. Stelzer, executive officer of the State A. A. A. He said receipt of the allotment two months earlier than last year would permit farmers to plan their acreage well in advance of the winter planting season.

Paroles Ordered For 3 Convicted Of Stock Fraud

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—Parole Director Herman M. Moser ordered paroles today for three men convicted with former Police Commissioner William P. Lawson on the ground they "are definitely not potential menaces to the lives and property of their fellow citizens.

Vincent L. Clishman, Frank Mueller and his brother Frederick have served five months of one-year sentences for conspiring to misrepresent the condition of companies whose stock was sold by Lawson's brokerage house. Lawson, who took responsibility for the concealment, is serving a three-year term.

Moser ordered paroles for eight other prisoners of the 31 who applied. None of those freed had any previous criminal record.

Firemen Veto Slot-Machine Plan In Prince Georges

The Prince Georges County Firemen's Association, meeting at Hyattsville last night, voted down a proposal that volunteer companies operate slot machines under authority of a legislative act legalizing "mechanical devices" at carnivals and other benefits.

William Freeman, former president of the county association, declared the group would get "a black eye before the public if it served as a camaufiage for slot machine operators."

The association adopted unanimously a resolution by Earle Wyvill, of the Upper Marlboro department, asking the county commissioners not to issue permits to companies unless they specifically agreed to refrain from operaitng slot machines.

William Miles, president of the association, named a committee to confer with the commissioners on the slot machine problem. Those appointed were Karl Young, David Randall, James E. Sampson, George Rheinbold and W. R. Beattie.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Women bridge players may be neither as skillful nor as spectacular as men, but they are generally more consistent. They are less likely to be tricked into reckless bidding or hazardous play because of wounded vanity. They are less likely to blow up in a trying situation. The women are the placators, the peacemakers, the one who say, "Oh, come on. Let's play the next hand."

Some women bridge players have upon occasion burst into tears and retired to the bedroom to sob their hearts out, but they were canny enough not to expend their emotion at the card table, where it would cost points.

All in all, women, in spite of their seemingly whimsical bidding, are steadier, more to be depended upo-

W. O. S. contributes a hand from a husband and wife rubber bridge session on which the womenfolk failed to make use of a fine play to make their contract. But W. O. S. has to admit, however reluctantly, that the wives were the winners at the end.

He says:

"We had a hand at rubber bridge last night which illustrates the principle of discarding a loser on a loser and establishing a winner at the same time.

"This particular play seems to be little understood in our bridge group —which is not championship caliber—and it may be interesting to your readers.

"To North's lead of the heart deuce, West played low from dummy, South put on the nine, West won with the ace. She led two rounds of trumps, entered dummy with the diamond ace, played a small club and came up with the king. North won with the ace, cashed two more rounds of clubs, led a diamond to South who won with the king, setting the contract one.

"It would have been simple for West to make sure of her contract instead of hoping to find the club ace in the South hand.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

North: ♠ 6 2 ♡ Q 7 5 2 ◇ 9 7 3 2 ♣ A Q J
West: ♠ A K Q 10 7 4 ♡ A K ◇ 6 4 ♣ K 9 5
East: ♠ J 8 5 ♡ J 10 8 3 ◇ A J 5 ♣ 8 6 3
South: ♠ 9 3 ♡ 9 6 4 ◇ K Q 10 8 ♣ 10 7 4 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 2♡.

"After winning the opening round of hearts and leading two rounds of trumps, West should have won with the king of hearts, entered dummy with the jack of spades and led the jack of hearts, throwing a club from her hand. With North in the lead, the location of the club ace does not matter. If North leads the club ace, five odd are made, as the losing diamond is discarded on the heart ten. If North underleads the club ace, five odd are made and if North leads a heart or diamond, four odd are made.

'If the heart queen is in the South hand, which is unlikely, four odd are made anyway. If South covers, West trumps, enters dummy with the diamond ace and discards one loser on the good heart, while if South doesn't cover the heart jack holds the trick and one loser has been discarded.

"This is a simple play and yet I find a lot of players who do not use it. It helped us last night, for the game was a bitter battle of husbands against wives. I hate to admit that in spite of their missing this game they beat us 380 points for the evening."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

IN THE FIRST comprehensive work of its kind, the Government plans to tell the women of America all about how to buy their stockings.

A 24-page booklet, profusely illustrated, and packed with advice, has been prepared for distribution by Margaret Smith, in the textile and clothing division of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture.

Although consumer information services have tackled the problem before, it is the first time the Government has sought a cure for one of the largest headaches in a twentieth-century woman's life. Advice about stopping runs is worked in with the hints on buying. On the one point where women need no advice, the volume is politely silent—there isn't a word in it about darning.

LUTHER C. STEWARD, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, said yesterday that the "Federal Employes'" Day, June 24, at the New York World's Fair was expected to bring together workers from cities the length of the Atlantic seaboard in one of the largest gatherings of its kind in history.

Sponsored by the national legislative council of Federal employes organizations, the celebration will bring together representatives of the N. F. F. E., the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, National Association of Postal Supervisors, the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, and other groups.

Among those who will take part in the program are Senators Mead and Wagner, of New York; Representative Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee; Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Sservice Commission; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner; Mayor LaGuardia of New York; Albert Goldman, New York postmaster and chairman of the day's program; Grover Whalen, Fair president; and other Government officials.

THE ANCHOR Masonic Club of the U. S. Maritime Commission, Department of Commerce, and Civil Aeronautics Authority, will hold its annual garden party at 6:30 p. m. Monday, at the Brook Farm Tea House, in Chevy Chase, Md., it was announced by Royal Best, president.

AMONG RECENT visitors to the historic battlefields of Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park were more than 100 student and faculty officers of the Army War College.

In the group were Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, commandant; Col. N. B. Rehkopf, assistant commandant; Col. G. B. Hunter, in command of the party; Col. J. W. Barnett, assistant to Col. Hunter.

OFFICIALS of the Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Federal Employes Union Local No. 105, yesterday announced election of five delegates and three alternates for the national convention of the N. F. F. E. in San Francisco.

Delegates named were Gertrude M. McNally, Ollie Greer, Margaret E. Garry, Minnie D. Stevens and Nora B. James. The alternates were Mary Willard, Mignon Miller and Nicie Ferrell.

NEXT SUNDAY will be the fifth anniversary of the Indian reorganization act—or the Indian's Magna Charta, as Commissioner John Collier calls it.

In the act the Government, for the first time, encouraged the Indian's desire for a tribal life in which his native traditions could be preserved. Most noticeable change IRA made in Washington, however, was the increase in Indian employes at the Bureau of Indian Affairs. There're almost 100 of them there now.

Under America's expanded defense program, as reported to the House, provision has been made for 232 additional Civil Service employes in the War Department, an increase of 9 per cent, bringing the total staff to 2,786 for next year. Funds asked for this increase total $304,345.

Bob Burns Says—

I've just been sittin' here lookin' at the advertisements in this newspaper and I'm tellin' you things are gettin' mighty modern. I've just been admirin' the picture of the latest stream-lined automobile. Honest, it's so futuristic it'd almost be a pleasure to be knocked down by it.

I went down to the Van Buren general store one mornin' and found Grandpaw Snazzy on a pair of crutches, playin' checkers. I said "Grandpaw, what's happened to you? Your back is all scrunched up!"

He said, "Robin, I think I busted my backbone. Here lately your Grandmaw has been buyin' a lot of this modernistic furniture . . . and just this mornin' I found out that for the last four nights I've been sleepin' on the bookcase!"

Listen to Bob Burns tonight on WRC—between 9 P. M. and 10 P. M.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter IX

JODY HURRIED to the wood-pile. Every blow of the axe on the fat pine brought him closer to the Forresters and his friend Fodder-wing. He split a plentiful amount and carried enough to the kitchen to fill his mother's wood-box. His father had not yet returned from the sink-hole with his load of water. Jody hurried to the lot and saddled the horse. If the horse were ready and waiting, they might get off before his mother discovered some fresh pretext for detaining him. He saw Penny coming down the sand road from the west, bowed under the ox-yoke with the two heavy wooden buckets brimming with water. He ran to help him ease the load to the ground, for a lack of balance would tumble the buckets headlong, and the tedious hauling would have to be done all over again.

"Caesar's saddled," he said.

"And the woods is a-fire, I take it." Penny grinned. "All right. Leave me put on my tradin' coat and tie up Rip and git my gun and we're long gone."

The saddle had been bought of the Forresters, having proved a trifle small for any of their great butts. It held Penny and Jody together in comfort.

"Git in front, son. But do you keep out-growin' me, you'll be obliged to ride behind, for I can't see the road before me. Here, Perk! Heel up."

The feice fell in behind. He stopped once and looked back over his shoulder.

"I hope it's your last look," Penny told him.

Caesar, well rested, went into a steady trot. His old back was broad, the saddle was wide, and riding so, with his father braced behind him, was as comfortable, Jody thought, as a rocking chair. The sand road was a sunny ribbon, leaf shadowed. West, by the sink-hole, the road forked, one branch continuing on to Forresters' Island, the other turning north. Ancient axe-marks on venerable long-leaf pines blazed the turn to the northerly trail.

"Did you or the Forresters make them blazes?" Jody asked.

"Them was cut before me and the Forresters was ever heered tell of. Why, son, some's so deep, and them pines grows so slow, I'd not be surprised was some of 'em Spanish blazes. That teacher never learned you no history last year? Why, boy, the Spaniards made this trail. This right here, that we're leavin' now, is the old Spanish trail clear across Floridy. It split back near Fort Butler. The south un goes to Tampa. Hit's the Dragoon trail. This un here's the Black Bear."

JODY TURNED BIG EYES to his father.

"You reckon the Spaniards fit the bears?"

"I reckon they had to, when they stopped to camp. They had Injuns to fight and bears and panther-cats. Same as us, only we ain't got the Injuns."

Jody stared about him. The pine-woods were suddenly populous.

"Is there any Spaniards hereabouts now?"

"There's nary a man livin', Jody, has even heered his grandpappy say he'd ever seed a Spaniard. The Spaniards come from acrost the ocean, and went tradin' and fightin' and marchin' acrost Floridy, and no man knows where they're gone."

The business of the spring woods went forward leisurely in the golden morning. Redbirds were mating, and the crested males were everywhere, singing until Baxter's Island dripped with the sweetness of the sound.

'Hit's better'n fiddlin' and guitar-in', ain't it?" Penny said.

Jody came back to the scrub with a start. He had been halfway across the ocean with the Spaniards.

The sweet gums were in full new leaf. The flowers of redbud and jessamine and dogwood had come and gone, but huckleberries and ti-ti and dog-tongue were in full bloom. The road ran to the west through a mile of tender green, of white and rosy blossoming. Wild honey-bees hummed in the small lacelike flowers of the St. Augustine grapes. The road narrowed past an abandoned clearing. Caesar slowed to a walk. The scrub closed in around them. Scrub oak and gallberry and myrtle bushes brushed their legs. The growth was thick and low and there was only occasional shade. The April sun was high and strong. Caesar was sweating and the stirrup leathers rubbed and squeaked.

Two miles of the way were hot and silent. Only jorees darted among the bushes. A fox crossed, dragging his brush, and a yellow shape that might have been a wild-cat shot almost invisibly into the myrtle. Then the road widened, the vegetation withdrew, and the landmark that was the tall trees of Forresters' Island lifted ahead. Penny dismounted and picked up the feice and mounted again, holding the dog in his arms.

Jody said, 'Why you totin' him?"

"Jest never you mind."

THEY PASSED INTO hammock, cool and deep, arched with palms and live oaks. The road wound about and the weathered grays of the Forrester cabin showed under a giant oak. A pond shone beyond and below it.

Penny said, "Now don't you torment Fodder-wing."

"I don't never torment him. He's my friend."

"That's good. He's the second settin' and he ain't to blame for hatchin' out peculiar."

"He's my best friend. Except Oliver."

"You better stick to Oliver. His tales is tall as Fodder-wing's, but at least he knows when he's lyin'."

Suddenly the quiet of the forest exploded. A commotion broke loose inside the cabin. The sound came of chairs hurled across its width, a large object crashed, glass shattered, heavy feet stamped on the plank floor and the voices of male Foresters beat against the walls. A female vice shrilled above the tumult. The door flew wide and a pack of dogs streamed into the open. Ma Forrester flailed at them with a hearthbroom as they raced for safety. Her sons crowded behind her.

Penny called, "Hit safe for a feller to git down here?"

The Forresters roared greetings to the Baxters and commands to the dogs. Ma Forrester lifted her gingham apron in both hands and waved it up and down like a flag. The shouts of welcome were so mingled with orders to the dogs that Jody was uncomfortable, faintly uncertain of the reception.

"Git down and come in Git away, you blasted bacon thieves! Hi-yuh! Howdy! Git to tarnation!"

Ma Forrester swooped after the dogs and they scattered into the forest.

"Penny Baxter! Jody! Git down and come in!"

Jody dropped to the ground and she thumped him on the back. She smelled of snuff and of wood-smoke. The odor did not offend him, but he was obliged to think of the delicate sweet scent of Grandma Hutto. Penny dismounted. He held the feice tenderly. The Forresters milled about him. Buck led the horse away to the corral. Mill-wheel caught Jody up and swung him over one shoulder and to the ground again, as though he swung a puppy.

BEYOND, DOWN THE cabin steps, Jody saw Fodder-wing hurrying toward him. The humped and twisted body moved in a series of contortions, like a wounded ape. Fodder-wing lifted his walking stick and waved it. Jody ran to meet him. Fodder-wing's face was luminous.

He cried, "Jody!"

They stood, embarrassed and delighted.

A sense of pleasure came over Jody that he felt with no one else. His friend's body was no more unnatural to him that the body of a chameleon or a 'possum. He took the word of grown folks that Fodder-wing was witless. He himself would have known better than to do the things that had given Fodder-wing his name. The youngest Forrester had conceived the idea that if he could attach himself to something light and airy, he could float from the roof-tree of the barn as gently as any bird. He had attached great bundles of fodder, cow-pea hay, to his arms and jumped. He had survived, miraculously, adding a few broken bones further to contort the hunch-backed frame with which he had been born. It was a crazy thing to do, of course. Yet privately, Jody felt, something of the sort might work. He had, himself, often thought of kites, very large kites. And some secret understanding was his of the crippled boy's longing for flight; for lightness; for a moment's freedom from his body, earth-bound and bent and stumbling.

He said, "Hey."

Fodder-wing said, "I got a baby 'coon."

He had, always, a new pet.

"Let's go see it."

Fodder-wing led him back of the cabin to a collection of boxes and cages that sheltered his changing assortment of birds and creatures.

"MY EAGLE DIED," Fodder-wing said. "He was too wild to pen."

The pair of black swamp rabbits was not new.

"They won't raise no young uns," Fodder-wing complained. I'm fixin' to turn 'em a-loose."

A fox squirrel worked an endless treadle.

"I'll give him to you," Fodder-wing offered. "I kin git me another."

Jody's hopes lifted and fell.

His heart swelled, aching for the fox-squirrel.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Four Arrested In Burning of Brick Truck

Vehicles Moving With Police Escort In Arlington Strike

Four men were arrested yesterday charged with burning a truck delivering bricks for the West Bros. Brick Co., as police scout cars escorted other trucks across the city to guard against further violence.

The West Bros. plant in Arlington County closed on June 3 as a result of a strike, but deliveries were resumed later after about 100 men returned to work, according to L. Perry West, president of the company. Police aid was requested when one truck was burned on Monday and another drove out Eighteenth street northwest Tuesday and was never seen again.

No trouble has been reported in Arlington, where the plant is located, not far from the river. Virginia State police yesterday escorted the trucks to the Washington end of the Fourteenth street bridge. Metropolitan police took over there.

The men accused of burning the truck gave their names as J. J. Arnold, 20, and Jacob Poruke, 19, white, and James N. Brown, 22, and William S. Cherry, 31, colored.

Police said they had stopped a truck operated by Robert Jones at Fourth and E streets southwest last Monday, forced the driver out of the cab and driven to South Capitol and P streets, where they saturated the truck with gasoline and set fire to it.

All four men pleaded not guilty, and were held in $1,000 bond each. Defense Attorney John Keane said the men were members of the teamsters' union which had been on strike for two weeks.

On three other occasions last week drivers for the West Bros. Co. were pulled off their trucks and the ignition of the trucks damaged.
